THE CLAM-DIGGERS WON OUT

Willamette Could not Get on to the Curves of Washington's Pitcher

The Washington State College baseball team administered a severe drubbing to the Willamette University nine on the University field yesterday afternoon. The final score was 9 to 2 in favor of the "Farmers" of the Evergreen state. Willamette failed to support their pitcher, nor could they locate the curves of the Washington twirler, who, by the way, is a whirlwind when it comes to delivering the sphere elusively. The sons of Pullman were also better with the stick, while Willamette's men, who are usually strong with the willow, did very poor work. In fact, up to the fifth chapter, not one of the big university players had seen first base. Washington made six tallies in the third inning, one in the sixth and two in the eighth.
 While Willamette made its two points in the fifth, that, in brief, is the record of yesterday's game.

 is worthy of the highest commendation.

Favors Woman Suffrage.

(Canby Tribune.)

Woman suffrage has proven to be a complete success in the state of Idaho.
 My experience in Idaho politics was considerable prior to the adoption of the amendment granting the right of suffrage to women, and I am consequently in a position to state that the right of suffrage has been of extraordinary influence in political affairs in this state.

I feel that in no state in the union are political affairs more cleanly conducted. The women citizens of the state take practically the same interest in politics here as do their brother citizens, and the woman's vote is proportionately as large as the man vote at each election. In consequence of this activity, Idaho at each election has better candidates for office, and the enforcement of the laws have been more rigid than in surrounding states.—Governor Gooding of Idaho.

The high school baseball aggregation

 Monday afternoon. Those who believe the high school will be easy meat for the men of the north are not altogether correct in their opinion. The fact is that the high school players have improved much since their game with Dallas college. Keenes, the high school pitcher, has developed wonderfully under the coaching of Garvin, and the general team work of the bunch is at least 50 per cent better than it was in the contest with Dallas.

The Portage Road.

The report of Superintendent L. S.
 Cook of the portage railroad was, presented to the state portage railway commission and showed the total expenses to be $633.70 and the total earning capacity $266.96 for the month of April.

The report says: "It is my understanding that the new Open River Transportation boat will be started shortly at Celilo and will be ready for hauling the grain this fall. She will be built for these waters and can no doubt make a better showing than the other boats that are not adapted to the shallow water in the fall of the year during the time grain is moving.

"I have advice that Mr. Donald will be up in the first part of the coming week to prepare and make a survey of the extension of the road into The Dalles. If we can get the road extended into The Dalles it should be self-supporting as such freight as lumber and wool could be secured up to that point and loaded onto the cars direct, then there would be no question of prompt handling of freight from Portland and The Dalles to up river points.

"Mr. William Nelson, the railroad contractor, will start camps at the mouth of the Deschutes river the coming week, and has other camps established further up. I understand this road is intended to reach Southern and Central Oregon, and will be an outlet for an immense amount of grain and all kinds of farm products. It is possible we can make connections with them, they being but three and one half miles above us. If such a connection is arranged this road should be extended to The Dalles, in order that we can handle the increased amount of business, our facilities at Big Eddy being inadequate for any great extent of tonnage."

What Did the Horse See?

It has often been said that animals have a keen and quick appreciation of anything which partakes of the supernatural. Whether the whole animal creation are endowed with this singular capacity, it is impossible to say, but as regards horses and dogs—if we are to believe the many stories which are related on the best of authorities—it is certain that these animals have been the first to recognize and to testify by their fright and terror that they are in the presence of something beyond their ken.

In the following instance a horse, evidently saw something claimed to have been seen also by one occupant of the vehicle, but unseen by the other. The peculiar circumstances were related to the writer by a friend on whose word he can implicitly rely.

Mr. S. was a farmer owning a large farm in a beautiful agricultural district. His house was a roomy, substantially built place, standing some distance back from the road and approached by a carriage drive of considerable length, lined on either side by tall trees. The entrance to this drive was through a gateway on the public road. One evening Mr. S. and a friend who was staying with him set out for a neighboring house, a few miles distant, where they were invited to dine. They drove a fine, spirited horse in a light dog cart, and arrived at the end of their journey in half an hour. During the drive Mr. S. experienced a sense of depression. He knew of nothing which would adequately account for it and thought that it would wear off before they reached their destination. His mother, who lived at a great distance from him, was ill, but he was not aware that there was any cause for alarm on that account as he fully believed she would recover. Soon after their arrival at the house dinner was served. During the progress of dinner the "queen" feeling experienced by Mr. S. on the way deepened, and though he was an interesting conversationalist and a man of genial manners, tonight he was unusually quiet and reserved. Try as he would, he could not shake off the depression which had fastened upon him, and at length the feeling became so unbearable that he made his excuse on the plea of indisposition and left immediately on the conclusion of the dinner. Orders were given for the horse and dog cart to be brought around to the door, and at 8:30 Mr. S. bade adieu to his hosts, and, accompanied by his friend, got into the dog cart and started for home. The night was fine, though somewhat dark. They drove home in absolute silence. Nothing was heard but the rhythmic beat of the horse's hoofs upon the well paved roads. At length they reached the open gateway leading to the farmhouse. Just as they entered the gateway, the horse, always obedient hitherto, stopped and refused to go forward, at the same time showing unmistakable signs of fear. At this moment, Mr. S., with eyes fixed intently on some object right ahead, stretched out his arm, pointed in the direction of his gaze and said, "There is mother standing there!" His friend peered into the darkness, but could see nothing. The horse, in spite of coaxing and urging, still refused to move and stood trembling in every limb. After vainly endeavoring to get the animal to go on, Mr. S.'s friend got out of the cart and, taking the horse by the head, led him gently past the place. He resumed his seat in the dog cart, and the horse, having now apparently got over the worst of its fear, went as usual up the rest of the drive to the house. Next day word came to Mr. S. that his mother had died at 9 o'clock the previous night. At that time Mr. S. says he saw his mother standing in the drive-way to his house—many miles from the place where she died. His friend could see nothing. What did the horse see?—Paragon Monthly.

About Equal Suffrage.

Mrs. Mary C. C. Bradford, of Colorado, an equal suffrage speaker, delivered an address at the M. E. church last evening. The attendance was not so large as it had been expected, on account of other public meetings that were held in the city.

Mrs. Bradford directed her remarks more particularly to the suffrage question in the state of Colorado, and combatted the notion that women become office-seekers immediately on being given the right to vote. She stated that there had been no radical changes in governmental affairs in Colorado since the enfranchisement of women. Mrs. Crawford is a pleasing speaker, and her address was well received.
