"THE BELLS" TONIGHT

A Splendid Company Gives its Farewell at the Opera House Tonight

In the play of "A Western Gentleman," at the Grand Opera House last night there was only one part. Mr. Willard, with all his brilliancy, was just eclipsed, the moon got in front of the sun for once, and captured the audience that should have been much large. Dainty little Adelaide Harland just took possession of the gathering. When she got on the chair and began to tell about her love, and, well—she was not an actress she was just a delicious bit of girlhood, with its love, and romance and honesty and youth and beauty and faith. There has not been a prettier bit of acting in Salem in years—in fact never. The support was all good, the singing of Mr. Lenord magnificent, but little Adelaide Harland carried off the cake. Marion Dunn, as "Ethel Wayne," presented a pretty piece of work, but the "work in the play" does not give her much of a chance, and, in fact, Miss Harland doesn't give anyone a show from the time the curtain rises, until with "hug me, Jack," it goes down. Salem people who do not see Mr. Willard's company are missing talent they may not see again. Take the horse editor's advice, and go tonight and see Mr. Willard in Sir Henry Irving's great masterpiece, "The Bells." This closes the company's engagement, and, while the plays have been of the best, the patronage has not been what it should be. If Salem wants good shows it should patronize them, and tonight it should put up a bumper house for one of the best companies ever on the Salem stage.

Pantages' Vaudeville.

A good house greeted the return of Pantages' road troupe of vaudeville artists at the Eugene theatre last night. The show was as good, if not better, than the two previous ones. McCloud and Millville, comedy sketch artists, made a hit, McCloud being called back six times in his "Hod de do" song. Charley Riley sang beautifully "The Bridge of Sighs;" Stockman's playing took well, and Harry Harkness put on an act entitled "Nobody Works But Father" that kept the audience screaming. He will put on another one to-night, "The Baby Elephant."—Eugene Register.

At the Edison.

The Edison theatre was filled to its capacity last evening, and the large audience enjoyed immensely the program of head-liners which was presented. Harry Holmes undoubtedly knows what up-to-date vaudeville is, and he is endeavoring to bring that kind of talent to our city. There are some good laughs stored away in the program given at the Edison, and it makes one feel the joy of living to enjoy a hearty wholesome laugh.

CHINESE RESIDENTS INVEST.

Pendleton Colony Takes Stock in a Co-operative Building Scheme.

Pendleton Chinese will invest several thousand dollars in a co-operative building scheme being promoted by their brethren in Walla Walla.

A new Chinese building to be used for headquarters for the entire Chinese colony in Walla Walla is being built in that city and stock is being sold to Chinese in all parts of the country. Several Pendleton Chinese have sent over the savings of several years to invest in the new scheme. The building it is said, will cost about $20,000, and dividends will be paid on the stock subscribed by the investors. It will be rented by the various Chinese residents of Walla Walla.

Gave Her Heaven.

A party of young people, comprising two men and two women were recently returning from a day in the country to their homes in Omaha. At a railroad crossing their carriage was struck by a train and one of the young women was killed, while the other members of the party were severely injured. The Omaha World-Herald says that at the inquest one of the survivors said: "We were returning to the city as jolly a set of young folks as you ever saw, and, as we were driving along, Miss — proposed singing 'Hello, Central, Give Me Heaven,' and started singing. None of the rest of us joined her, so she finished the song alone, and had just finished the song words 'Hello, Central, Give Me Heaven,' when the engine struck us, and she was killed."

Exposure.

To cold draughts of air, to keen and cutting winds, sudden changes of the temperature, scanty clothing, undue exposure of the throat and neck after public speaking and singing, bring on coughs and colds.
