Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the Great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

Yours for Health
Lydia E. Pinkham

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles or such a host of grateful friends as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
It will entirely cure the worst forms of Female Complaints, Inflammation and Ulceration, Falling and Displacement, and consequent Spinal Weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the Change of Life.
It has cured more cases of Backache and Local Weaknesses than any other remedy the world has ever known. It is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors in an early stage of development.
Irregular, Suppressed or Painful Periods, Weakness of the Stomach, indigestion, Bloating, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility, sickly yield to it. Deranged organs, causing pain, weight and backache, instantly relieved and permanently cured by its use. Under all circumstances it invigorates the female system.
It quickly removes that bearing-down feeling, extreme lassitude, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, dizziness, faintness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy or the "blues" and headache. These are sure indications of Female Weakness, or some derangement of the organs, which this medicine surely cures. Chronic Kidney complaints and Backache, of either sex, the Vegetable Compound cures.
Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want—a cure. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Refuse all substitutes.

YOUNG MAN MUST MAKE CONCESSIONS

John E. Howlands in Tacoma Ledger. Before any young man begins to try a world for himself as an individual is a question whether knowledge of himself is the more valuable to him as is the knowledge of world conditions and perspectives. When the tyro life considers that he has learned himself, that knowledge still is immaterial for the reason that he may not know in what environment he is to be tried out. The athlete who is in training for a ten mile cross country run might make an unutterably poor rowing in self-defense in a twenty-four foot ring.
As a general proposition that young man who needs to know most of himself and of the world is the child of few or less independent means. It is a hard money for the most part which has kept him in school almost to maturity, while the lack of money has put some of his future competitors into business before he was a freshman at school. Considering the two types as being approximately the same native mental capacity, at 25 years old it is a good bet that the young man who went to the world as a boy will have his place ahead of the other. It is only that the next five or ten years may leave the schooled and lettered one far ahead of the early beginner in life.

Logically, the one who has learned more of the world than of himself will have the early advantages; the one knowing himself, however, will not be so long in taking unto his needs this post-graduate degree of world conditions. At the same time it is an undisputed fact that thousands of young men out of academic training and beginning the world, find themselves needlessly hampered in progress through having taken too much of life for granted.
What if the young man in his school atmosphere attempts to learn his moods, foibles, weaknesses and strengths? He can know them only through comparisons, and these objects of comparisons will be—schoolboys! He may be quite as well equipped as any other young man on his horizon, yet in the business world he finds himself frequently in competition with that other type of young man who knows little else but the world and the world's way and who for the purposes of the business man in need of assistance immeasurably is the school man's superior for the work in hand.
Blindly speaking, there is a little too much of the ideal taught and preached and paraded oracularly from the platform to leave to the young man who is listening to it a clear idea of the actual world conditions which are outside the church and school and lecture hall. Unless he shall adjust his perspectives for himself in preparation he may find such keen disappointment in many things to threaten his progress in life.
I once knew a young man, strong of frame, positive in temperament, honest in every thought and action and nerved to the expression of his convictions at any time and in any place. He knew himself, but he did not know the world as he might have known it. Wherever he had found early opportunity for the expression of his personality he had made that personality felt. But it chanced that in the beginning of his business life this young man's honesty and forcefulness appealed to a business man at the head of a great institution in which graft had found root and flourished. This young man was given a place in which, through the exercise of his rugged honesty and unflinching personal courage, the employer hoped to root out the crookedness which he felt certain existed.

With a little more knowledge of the world and men of all types, this young adventurer into commercial reform might have accomplished much for himself and more for his employer. But out of his ignorance he drew his rigid lines so rigidly and so deeply and keenly penetrated into conditions existing in the organization that the organization itself could not stand these probes and strictures! The result was that the young man himself became the victim of his own honest convictions carried out to the full in the supposed best interests of his employers.
This is an example of fact with no purpose to prove that business life is all bad. Rather it is used to indicate just where academics fall short of conditions in a world of sharp competition. Good and bad are comparative only, and until the lines are adjusted sanely between them, neither of the terms has much meaning.
Broadly speaking, the child which is not left to the joltings of the child world, and the youth who is kept from the millings and competitions of others of his own age belong to the unfortunates. In the same measure the young man and the young woman who have preached to them only idealized philosophies which should exist in life—and which may not—may be seriously embarrassed or even permanently crippled by reason of false teachings.
The keynote of the whole civilized community life is found in the one word, Concession. The idealist cannot even walk through the business world without obstructing traffic. If ever he is able to do so, the whole mechanism of commerce and industry will be simplified until business acumen will be a lost art. Out of economic conditions the young man should prepare to make his grudging concessions in business life. He should be so fortified as not to be shocked at world conditions. He should be entrenched in right thinking and the principles of right living as to have his "dead line" drawn sharply short of wrong. But between the lines of active good and even dormant wrong there is such a wide field for business concessions that the business man who fights only in this field may finish in fair favor.

Why Nurse Doesn't Hold Job Long.
Carefully gathered statistics appear to show that the marryingest of all women are trained nurses. Though complete figures have not as yet been compiled, from a considerable mass of data the conclusion is drawn that nine out of ten trained nurses marry during the first seven years of their occupation as such.
When a pretty young woman speaks of devoting her life to the self-denying profession of a trained nurse she is using, perhaps unconsciously, a mere figure of speech. Statistics show that she has an even chance of being married within four and a half years and that she has one chance in eight of becoming the wife of a physician. The chances are five to one that within ten years she will marry one of her patients.
The importance of these figures from the viewpoint of the sociologist is obviously great. Pretty young women in steadily increasing numbers are entering the field in question in which there seems always to be plenty of room for fresh recruits, who are required to fill the places of those who get married and pass out of the profession forever. Thus, owing to the causes suggested, it is rare indeed to discover a trained nurse who has been in the business a much as ten years.—Saturday Evening Post.

CHRONICLE ON FRISCO CONDITIONS

San Francisco, since the disaster of April 18, has presented in more than one respect a remarkable picture of self government and orderly regulation in a disorganized community. Never have the inhabitants of a stricken city more quickly or fully shown their ability to restore and maintain order, to systematize the work of relief, and to begin the task of reconstruction. But the most noteworthy of all the admirable features of the situation has been the absence of crime. This is ascribed by the authorities and the newspapers to the fact that for the first time in its history the city has been without an open saloon. All drinking places were closed on the day of the calamity. According to the Chronicle, San Francisco "has been absolutely free from disorder and virtually free from crimes of violence." General Greely confirmed this statement in a dispatch on Thursday to the war department, saying: "Neither drunkenness nor disorder anywhere, except from adjacent towns occasionally."
The Chronicle continues its account of the situation thus:
There have been no street brawls. No drunken brute has beaten his wife. No gamblers have murdered each other in low resorts. Except for some dealings with sneak thieves the occupation of the police courts is gone. It is a most impressive object lesson of the value to society of the restriction of the liquor traffic. We are promised a continuance of this peaceful condition for a considerable time to come, save only as drunken man may drift over from Oakland, where the authorities have been so reckless as to allow saloons to open. We may be compelled to renew the quarantine against Oakland.
This demonstration that the saloons are responsible for crimes of violence will have one very practical result in San Francisco. That city has long

Mrs. B. Schreiber, of 560 High St., Salem, Or., says: "The good reports I had heard concerning Doan's Kidney Pills induced me to go to Dr. Stone's drug store and procure a supply. I had been suffering from an incessant backache which not only troubled me through the day but broke my rest at night. I began to feel the effects of Doan's Kidney Pills after I had taken a few doses. Relief speedily came and then an absolute cure. There has been no sign of the backache nor any other symptom since. I am only too pleased to let others know of such a valuable and effective remedy."

been notorious as having the lowest license fees in the country. Those, if we are not mistaken, have been for some years fixed at the ridiculous figure of $72 a year. While the best municipal intelligence everywhere else has insisted on the saloons bearing a fair proportion of the expense they imposed upon the communities, San Francisco has gone on year after year, collecting less from this source than was required to maintain its city and county hospital, to say nothing of other institutions of refuge, correction and police. Thus the saloons imposed upon the general tax payers a vast burden for the relief of pauperism and the control of crime, without contributing even in the same proportion that other businesses were compelled to contribute toward bearing the burden. There will be a change in this respect hereafter.

Chicago has just increased its saloon license fee to $1000 a year. In a city of San Francisco's size and wealth this is certainly none too high. That city will "rise from its ashes," but it will face a vast municipal debt. There must be a great increase in the tax rate. Property owners will insist that when the saloons reopen they shall pay a fee that will support the police department.
