An Old Relic.
While strolling in the neighborhood of the quarry last Sunday, Ralph Cronin and Cady Roberts found an old fashioned cap and powder pistol, which they believe must be a relic of the Indians. The handle of the pistol was decayed and the barrel was filled with dirt and was rusty. The fact that seven little notches were found on the trigger guard led the boys to think that the gun may have been at one time in the possession of an Indian.

HONOR THE DEAD TODAY

Salem Makes Every Grave a Mass of Bloom and Fragrance for Memory

The Capital City did honor to the dead today. From the various state and public buildings "Old Glory" floated at half-mast in respect for those who have gone before. Decoration Day, while originally set apart by the old soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic to decorate the graves of their dead comrades, is becoming more and more a national holiday, and the people as a whole enter its celebration most heartily. The sight of the old battle flags, the subdued music of bands and the waving columns of the once vigorous army of youthful soldiers teach a lesson of patriotism and devotion to country stronger and more inspiring than can be expressed by the most eloquent tongue of the greatest orator.

The city is today paying a magnificent tribute in its offering of bloom and fragrance to the veterans of the stormy days of the '60s. With each recurring year the ranks of the white-haired and wrinkled veterans becomes thinner, and larger numbers are joining the ranks of that "greater army" which is marching in the realms of peace. The blue coats, the brass buttons, the scarred faces, the mangled limbs, the halting walk of the old veterans bring to our minds the heroic deeds which were done by these men and their comrades in that great struggle that ended more than 41 years ago. Their presence in the ranks, following the old battle flags, brings a recollection of the fearful days when the nation faced the greatest issue that has ever confronted it.

The local G. A. R. post, faithful to its traditions, will assemble and march to City View cemetery, where the appropriate ritualistic service will be rendered.

The cemetery has taken on almost a festive air, and were it not for the memories that surge over one as he treads the paths of the silent city, he would imagine himself in some fairy garden. Early yesterday ladies and children began wending their way to the streets of the dead, bearing with them wreaths and garlands, bunches and baskets of the fairest flowers to lay upon the last resting places of their dead. All day long the procession continued, and this morning increased in volume. By 9 o'clock the numbers had become so great that the street car company was obliged to put on an extra car between Willamette Hotel and the cemetery to accommodate them. As the volume of traffic increased, other cars were added, until by noon the entire extra equipment of the company and every man that could be spared were used to transport people to South Salem. Past the Journal office this morning a stream of carriages flowed toward the cemetery, each one loaded with beautiful floral offerings. An inspection of the gardens of the city about 11 o'clock this morning showed that the entire city had been denuded of bloom to furnish appropriate symbols of love for those lying in the city on the hill. Monuments and grave-stones and the well-kept graves were covered with flowers, and, even in the presence of reverent sorrow, subdued gaiety showed that the aesthetic beauty of the scene was appreciated. Probably three-quarters of the people of Salem will visit the cemetery before the day is over.

At the G. A. R. hall this morning everybody was busy. The ladies of the Relief Corps were on hand early to receive donations of provisions and flowers, and they were not disappointed in the generous response to their appeal. The flowers were arranged to decorate the hall for the G. A. R. luncheon will be held after the return from the cemetery, and were placed in bunches, that each veteran in the ranks might drop a posy on the grave of a departed comrade.

FOURTH OF JULY PLANS

Salem Will Celebrate the Nation's Birthday in Grand Style

The sub-committees on Fourth of July met last night at the city hall. A general discussion was held, and much enthusiasm was apparent in favor of a grand celebration on our nation's day.

Chief Savage, of the fire department, was called upon and said he wished the proposal to put the department in the parade might be referred to the council.

Major Loomis reported proffers from a number of bands, and that Dr. Eppley was preparing for a number of songs, solos and choruses and they felt sure of a good lot of musical selections, if given an appropriation. The committee has allowed $500 to provide music for the celebration.

H. D. Patton reported that the committee on "bizarre paraders" or plug-uglies, as did Mr. Briedemier on the proposed floats. Mr. Page offered to contribute quite substantially in labor and decorations, and said he would appoint his assistants on decorations in a few days. He asked to know as soon as possible what money would have to be spent in decorations. Mr. Patton proposed a plan of decoration which would have permanency for its object. This idea was heartily concurred in, and the feeling seemed to be in favor of the purchase of permanent flags, electric streamers, etc.

The matter of concessions was discussed, and was left for the next meeting of the general committee.

He followed the occupation of farming until he came to Salem, when he retired and lived upon the income of a goodly estate.

The funeral will be held at the home Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, under the auspices of Salem lodge, No. 4, A. F. & A. M. A special car will be in attendance at Masonic Temple at 2 p. m., for the convenience of the brethren.

A special communication of Salem lodge, No. 4, A. F. & A. Another Feature of the Racycle

Is in having bi-plane or flanged sprockets, milled leaving a flange or shoulder on each side of the teeth to carry the side plates of the chain. This flange or bi-plane prevents the chain from wedging between the teeth on the sprocket; it distributes the wear on the chain and instead of being all on the chain block, the side plate of the chain takes part of the wear, thus prolonging the life of the chain. A chain run on flanged or bi-plane sprockets will last three times as long as on the ordinary straight sprockets.

TO BUILD A MILE OF ROAD

Arrangements are being perfected for the mile of road to be built here under government supervision. This stretch of road will be on the Salem-Silverton road, starting at the fair grounds. A. E. Loder, assistant engineer of the public roads, United States Department of Agriculture, arrived in the city yesterday, and since his arrival has been looking after the details of the work before taking up the experiment. The other experiment in road building to be conducted in the state by government officials will be at Pendleton. The government machinery is to arrive from Pullman, Washington, during the week, and it is probable that the work will begin next Thursday. The rock for the construction of the road will be taken from the county quarry. Since the government will have a portable crusher, it is probable that two crushers will be used. It has not yet been decided what width the road should have. By some it is believed that a 16-foot roadway the entire distance would be preferable; on the other hand others favor a 16-foot roadway in front of the fair grounds only, and the remainder to be 12 feet. The first thing to be done will be the establishing of a grade, which, in this particular stretch will be a comparatively easy matter. A layer of crushed rock, two and a half inches in depth will then be put on and thoroughly rolled with a steam roller. On top of this layer will be placed another layer of crushed rock, somewhat finer, two inches in depth. When the roller has been applied, "screenings" will then be put on, moistened or sprinkled with water and rolled effectively. This is, in a general way, the method used in the building of macadamized roads, but the process varies according to the condition of the soil, and the grade and quality of the crushed rock.

Salem's Tribute of Roses.

Decoration day has demonstrated that Salem equals, if it does not excel, Portland as a "city of roses." Throughout yesterday afternoon until late in the evening hundreds of people were bound on the street cars for the cemeteries, loaded with flowers of all sorts, but roses were pre-eminently in evidence. Salem produces beautiful roses, and the graves in the city of the dead are literally covered with them.

Decoration day is certainly being observed this year with enthusiasm and appropriateness by the people of the capital city. Not only were the street cars jammed with people, but all who had private conveyances repaired to the cemeteries to decorate the graves of their loved ones who had gone before.

Above each of the old soldiers who are sleeping in the various cemeteries of the city is a little American flag, and as one looks over the monuments and grounds one is led to recall the large numbers of the boys of '61 and '65 who gave their lives for the sake of the old flag which today floats proudly over their graves.
