SCOLDING, AS A GENTLE ART

(Helen Oldfield.)

King Solomon in his wisdom, which is reckoned as that of the ages, has told us that there is a time for everything under the sun. Undoubtedly there are seasons when plain speaking between associates in any relation of life becomes a necessity, when reproof must be administered, when scolding rises to the dignity of an imperative duty. The secret, as in most other things, lies in the knowledge of the when and how to do it.

It is inopportune, to say the least, to take a man to task for his shortcomings, real or fancied, when he is in haste to catch the train, to find fault with a woman who is nervous, worried, and has her head full of other things. Admonition, under such circumstances, is far more likely to do harm than good.

In spite of the popular idea fostered by its misuse, scolding properly is a gentle art, and should be practiced as such, especially among the members of one's own household, whether child or servant, husband or wife. There is a great and radical difference between fretful fault finding and dignified rebuke.

In the first place it behooves the complainant absolutely to be sure that the reproof is well deserved; to make certain before uncorking the vials of one's wrath; otherwise it is possible that the scathing flood may descend upon the wrong head. Also, it is well to inform oneself as to whether the offense was willful and premeditated or committed thoughtlessly, perhaps unintentionally. Secondly, which is to the full as important, almost never is it wise to speak in anger, the rare exception being when the rupture is meant to be final, when the offense is outside the pale of forgiveness. Even then it is well to wait awhile and think it over. Haste is seldom good speed. People who are angry usually lose their temper, unless the anger is of the white hot kind in which its intensity compels calmness. And when one loses one's temper one always is at a disadvantage. The more calm and dignified the injured one is, the more impressive and effectual the reproof.

It is a fatal mistake to suffer scolding however well merited, to degenerate into nagging. To do so is to forfeit all claim to respect from the delinquent, who is more than likely to assume the position of critic, a scornful critic, at that. All reproof should be gauged by the offense which occasions it, but however serious such offense may be, the reproof should be brief. Sharp it may needs be, but the less said the better; many words are apt to dull its point. Moreover, it should clearly be hopeful; the attitude of "you are as bad as you can be, and I do not expect any good of you," is not calculated to effect reformation upon the part of the offender, who is offered no incentive to do better.

"To err is human, to forgive divine." The Master bade his disciples forgive unto seventy times seven, and also they were commanded to love the sinner, while hating the sin. And when a sin is condoned, still more forgiven, there should be no more said of it. Even though it be such as it is impossible to forget, it may at least be buried out of sight and remembered in silence.

The woman who nags her husband for any offense, be it even a crime, is in fault. A wife may owe it to herself and to others to manifest severe disapproval; to protest; to rebel upon principal; but she never is obliged to nag. The less fault one finds and the less one says about it, the more effectual, in most cases, is the reproof. In any case the "punishment should fit the crime." Many wives have ruined the temper of naturally well disposed husbands by seizing upon some fault, perhaps a trivial one, and harping upon it continually in season and out of season. Ceaseless contention, fretfulness, capriciousness, will wear the strongest love to a frazzle.

Where a home is made unhappy by a great fault on the part of the husband; if there be any good in him, as there is in most men—if he is worthy of loving and saving—he more effectively is influenced by tenderness than by denunciation or scathing scorn. There are many men today in the wrong path, who possess good qualities, who might be saved by gentle effort from the error of their ways, but who now are spurred on their downward course by the unrelenting anger of a nagging wife. Many who have been saved from evil ways, bear witness to the efficacy of the gentle sympathy, the loving forbearance of a true helpmeet.

When complaint is made by either husband or wife of the other, good taste, as well as discretion, demands that it should be in secret session, with closed doors. Whatever the offense, there should never be recrimination in public between man and wife, nor the utterance of taunts, in the presence of a third person, as to the cowardice, meanness, or expediency of the motives which may have influenced either one to any years of conduct.

In marriage, especially, it is incumbent upon one to be patient, not only with principles to which one objects but also with foibles and peculiarities and failings. He was a wise man who said that marriage, like the government of a country, must, to be successful, be a constant succession of compromises.

St. Paul says that the strong should bear the infirmities of the weak. One should bear with them as well; it may not be easy, but it is necessary. There are many occasions in the every day intercourse of those who are nearest and dearest to each other, when it is better to keep silence than to speak, when "speech is silver, but silence is golden." There be few who have ever regretted the failure to say a sharp thing, while the number of those who deeply repent a caustic utterance is legion. The habit of speaking one's mind upon any and all occasions, careless whom the bitter word may wound,

SOCIALIST'S COLUMN

(This space is hired by the Socialist Committee.)

A Call for Justice.

(From the Nevada State Journal, March 30.)

The arrest and persecution of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone certainly looks like a giant conspiracy of the Mine Owners' association to hang innocent men. The conscience of no unprejudiced mind will allow him to think or say otherwise. The free American people should not permit this red handed outrage to proceed further upon the lines taken during the past weeks. If Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone are guilty of the assassination of ex-Governor Steiensenberg they should be hanged. But let them not be adjudged guilty upon the evidence, individually or collectively, furnished by the Mine Owners' association and its cohorts—Harry Orchard and the Pinkerton thugs and detectives. Such a precedent would be extremely dangerous, and no man whom the Mine Owners' association should select for the slaughter would be safe.

The terrific struggle that is being made to convict Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, principally upon the manufactured, perjured evidence of hired thugs and detectives, does not look good, does not favor of justice; IS NOT JUSTICE IN THE WHOLE PROCEEDING THERE IS NO JUSTICE.

BUT THERE IS SHOWN DETERMINATION TO LEGALLY MURDER THREE MEN WHOM ALL THE WORLD BELIEVES TO BE INNOCENT. Let the courts and the people try these men, but let no organized band of mine owners, thugs, detectives and governors try them. Justice, and justice only is demanded and will be had in this case by the American people.

Cause for Revolution.

(Daily State Democrat, Lawton, Okla., April 3.)

Organized wealth on the one side and organized labor on the other, with the courts and the machinery of the law absolutely under the control of organized wealth. That is the situation in Idaho, where the head officials of the Western Federation of Miners are held in prison under a charge of murder trumped up by detectives in the employ of organized wealth. Back of it all is an effort to crush organized labor, and that is all there is to it. It is simply a continuation of the Colorado outrage, wherein miners were thrown into prison, deported without due process of law. If these high-handed outrages continue there will some day be a revolution in this country that will discount the scenes enacted in St. Ann street a thousand fold.

Health
Beauty

Beauty is the external proof of health; with failing health comes failing beauty. Woman's delicate organism is frequently over-taxed by arduous household duties, and the demands of society. The constant drain upon her vitality weakens her nervous system. The penalty is a tired, worn-out, exhausted condition which destroys her appetite, robs her of rest, and at intervals causes much suffering and distress. When these conditions exist, the weakened nerves must be strengthened. Dr. Miles' Nervine will do this. It stimulates the action of all the organs, brings refreshing sleep, and drives away that look of care.

"I have taken Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for years, as did my mother before me. Whenever I feel tired, worn-out, or have headache, I always take the Nervine and it strengthens me. I consider it a great remedy for nervousness or debility."

Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

is one which savors far more of self-esteem and selfishness than of the honesty upon which one prides oneself. Al so it is as bad a quality, certainly a less agreeable one, than the arrant hypocrisy which it contemns. When there is nothing pleasant to be said, it usually is well to keep silent, when one can. A wise and discreet wife, if she happens to have her doubts, keeps them to herself as long as it is possible to do so, and is far from the brutal frankness which speaks its mind when doing so can do no good, and perhaps may be productive of harm.

SHETLAND PONIES FOR CHILDREN

One Hundred of Them Perfectly Gentle Turned Over to the Tots to Ride

With Burch and Reiss' Greatest Dog and Pony Shows, which will exhibit in this city for the first time on Friday, June 1, will be seen the greatest number of new and distinctly novel features ever gathered together with any tented exhibition. The aggregation numbers upwards of 350 performing dogs, ponies, goats, pigs, monkeys, mules, camels, llamas, pumas, zebus, ant eaters, box indians; scores of beautiful birds, among them being emus, white swans, Nubian ostriches, sarus cranes, pheasants of all kinds, cockatoos of several varieties, parrots, owls and numbers of other rare birds, forming the greatest variety as well as the largest aggregation of performing birds and animals ever seen with any tented exhibition. These animals are all skillfully trained and perform acts that seem almost incredible. In conjunction with the multitudinous animal feature acts will be presented for the first time in the west, troupes of Japanese acrobats, gymnasts and aerialists; scores of famously funny clowns, jugglers and other new special features especially engaged for this, the first western tour of these great shows. Messrs. Burch and Reiss will also present the greatest musical attraction ever seen with a tented exhibition. They have secured Gregory's Royal Italian Band, the finest concert band in this country.

Messrs. Burch and Reiss wish to call special attention to their new street parade, which will take place at 11 o'clock on the morning of the exhibition, at which time the entire company of over 350 animal actors will be seen decked out in their holiday garb. Another special feature, and one that is bound to be attractive to the children, is the free pony rides after the matinee. Over 100 beautiful Shetland ponies will be turned over to the children this feature will be absolutely free. A corps of gentlemanly attendants will be present in order to avoid any possible mishap. Two performances will be given in this city at 2:30 and 8 p. m.
