THE WHIPPING POST.

(Oasby Tribune.)

In referring to send a man to the whipping post on a charge of wife-beating recently, Circuit Judge Alfred Sears, of Portland, voiced a growing sentiment against this relic of barbarism on our statute books. If a man and woman can't get along without fighting, the divorce court is the place for them to adjust their differences. In discussing this particular case, Judge Sears said: "I will not punish any man that way, because I do not believe in it. This mode of punishment is a relic of older times that I do not think should be tolerated in a civilized community."

The deputy district attorney first recommended that this man be sent to the whipping post, but after he had investigated the case he learned that the alleged assault consisted of the parties to the suit having had a few words and when the woman attempted to rise from her chair the husband pushed her back into her seat. It developed later that the woman was preparing to apply for a divorce before she filed charges of wife beating against her spouse and she probably thought she would feel better to know that he had been publicly whipped in the bargain. There are lots of good men looking for good wives and vice versa, and there is no excuse for a woman living with a man who boxes her ears occasionally, though there are a great many happily wedded couples who don't feel good without an occasional "rough house."

WHAT WE SOW WE REAP.

How truthful are the words of the Coquille Sentinel, when it says: "It is an old idea that a young man must sow about a certain amount of 'wild oats' that a certain number of his earlier years must be spent in dissipation and debauchery that he must keep late hours, drive fast horses, associate with loose women and even drink bad whiskey; that he cannot have a 'good time' nor enjoy life youth unless he does a part or all of these things."

Is that true? In fact, isn't it a way we have of trying to rebuke matters over with the sowing or too much of the "fast" young men? Isn't it absolutely absurd to think that any of these things are necessary for the proper enjoyment of life by our youth? It is a most extravagant waste of time. It impairs the system, weakens the mental faculties and sows the seeds of vice. Such conduct is in direct opposition to the good, the beautiful, the true. So far from being necessary, it is altogether vicious in its harmfulness.

To say that a young man must sow his wild oats, is to condemn him in his irreparable conduct and is too often directly responsible for such a conduct. It is false. It should not be repeated. It gives the young man the idea that he is licensed to do all these things and that all his directions will be overlooked in consequence.

We would not deprive a young man of a reasonable amount of pastime and amusement. But there are many forms of amusement which are not only harmless but actually instructive and beneficial. But if he cannot find these he can at least find the kind that are not vicious.

"What ye sow, that shall ye reap." "Wild oats" will bring a harvest of wasted time and families, injured health, weak brains, bad temper and a miserable life. Cut it out. It does not pay.

Young man, what will your harvest be?

GIRLS IN GERMANY.

There Are No Colleges for Them, but They Enjoy a Substitute.

The German girl leaves school at about 15 years of age, by which time she has learned to sew, read and supposedly to speak English and French.

She has not learned higher mathematics, says Modern Women, but she has learned the small things which fit a girl for a housewife or companion, and that, in Germany, is woman's only sphere.

However much we American girls may enjoy our colleges, we dare not pity the German girls, for they have something which takes their place and of which we can have no conception until we reside in Germany a few months.

Did you ever hear of a pension? It is one of the most enjoyable things which exists. Certain influential ladies, mostly widows or maiden aunts, make known that they are willing to take a limited number of young ladies into their families.

We went to Hanover, two of us girls, with a horror and dread of a boarding school, as we heard a pension described. We found ourselves in a family of eight girls, all from the very best class of Germans, and all placed under Frau Von H's care for a year or more.

None of the girls had any special object in life, a few wanted to learn how to keep house, a few indulged in an hour's music lesson per week, but most of them came, as is the German custom, for the sake of being polished, and being escorted to concerts, theaters, balls, receptions, student Kneipes, etc., opportunities not afforded in smaller cities, and even not in many cities that are larger than Hanover.

Consequently our chaperone accepted invitations for her girls, parties were given and the great intimate family spent a year full of pleasure.

General Summary and Weather Report.

The week opened and closed showery and cool, with an intervening period of from two to three days with mild temperatures and clear skies. The rains on Tuesday and Wednesday were excessive over limited localities in the northwestern section of the state. The Umatilla river overflowed its banks, and did considerable damage to the crops in the city of Pendleton and to the bridges and fences along its course from that city to its mouth at Umatilla. In a few other localities in that section farm lands were badly washed by heavy rains, but the good done in the large territory where the rains were only moderate, much more than compensated for the damage done in the few limited areas where they were excessive. Friday morning the temperature was dangerously near the frost mark, both in the eastern and western portions of the state, but no frosts were reported. The winds during the week were generally light and mostly from the west, but some of the rain squalls were attended by wind rushes of short duration.

The Spanish Marriage.

From the days of Buckingham and Prince Charles, England has never taken kindly to alliances with the royal house of Spain, and the marriage of Princess Ena and King Alfonso, which will be solemnized at Madrid tomorrow, is proving no exception to the rule. The English especially dislike the princess' change of religion. But not so, in Spain. This plain but amiable niece of King Edward seems to have captured all the hearts of her husband's subjects. What is still more important, she has captured her husband's heart. Some remarkable stories are told regarding the lovesick young king and the ardor of his wooing when he was recently in England.

Each of the young lovers is the grandchild of a remarkable woman and queen—the princess being descended from Victoria of England, renowned for her goodness and wisdom, and her husband from Queen Isabella of Spain, notorious for her follies. Ena has led a quiet life in England. Owing to the fact that her father, Prince Henry of Battenburg, was the son of a non-genealogical union, his marriage to Victoria's favorite daughter, Princess Beatrice, was deemed a misalliance by the British aristocracy, though arranged by the queen. Hence the Battenburgs have not been socially popular, and they never showed that they cared whether they were or not. Democratic in manner, busy with her home life and her charities, the widowed Princess Beatrice brought up her daughter modestly, preparing her for whatever station life might offer.

And life has tossed a crown into the girl's lap. Not a first class crown, in truth, as crowns go nowadays, but one of traditional splendor and at least interesting possibilities. Among the possibilities are boundless opportunities for labor for a downtrodden and impoverished people; also a pretty good chance of annexation. If Spain has run easily down at the head, she has a young king who shows ambition for reform and progress, and who seems more likely to be influenced by two good women, his mother and his wife, than by the blood and example of his weakening father and his vicious grandmother.

That grandmother, Isabella, was one of Spain's worst monarchs, and left the land burdened with the debt and misery of the Carlist wars, waged to avenge her and place her uncle on the throne. Driven from the country, she scandalized Paris for years with her eccentricities—to give them no worse name. Meanwhile, the people tried a republic, failed at self government, and finally brought her young son, Alfonso XII, back from England and put him on the throne. He married a good wife, whose sagacity enabled him to hold his throne until his death, and has since held it, amidst difficulties that would have daunted any ordinary ruler, for their son, Alfonso XIII, the hero of tomorrow's ceremony. Ruling Spain in these days is not a likable job, but the chances are that Alfonso will make a creditable wab at it.—Tacoma Ledger.

The Stock Forgot Them.

A very singular case that at Bristol, Connecticut, where, for two years, not a baby has come to the colony of 400 Indians. They figured it out to their own satisfaction that the witchcraft of Carmelita Mineto, an Italian woman who arrived in the colony just two years ago, is responsible for the unrelenting sterility, and attempted to stab her to death. It seems that they did not take the several months preceding her arrival into consideration, as important surely as the following does in such a reckoning. It makes no difference about facts, though, when an excuse is wanted or a theory has to be borne out. The wolf ate the lamb in fable just the same as though the letter showed that drinking from the stream below the wolf it could not have undressed the water that came to his wolfship.

$5,000 Reward

will be paid to any person who can find one atom of opium, chloral, morphine, cocaine, ether or chloroform or their derivatives in any of Dr. Miles' Remedies.

This reward is offered because certain unscrupulous persons make false statements about these remedies. It is understood that this reward applies only to goods purchased in the open market, which have not been tampered with.

Dr. Miles' remedies cure by their strengthening and invigorating effect upon the nervous system, and not by weakening the nerves.

"I consider that there are no better remedies put up than Dr. Miles' Nervine, Anti-Pain Pills, and Nerve and Liver Pills. We have used them for years, and recommend them to many others. My wife is using the Nervine, and considers it the best medicine in the world. A lady friend of mine, who was almost a total nervous wreck, through my earnest solicitation has used several bottles of the Nervine with wonderful results." WM. CROME, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first package will benefit. If it fails, he will return your money. 25 doses, 25 cents. Never sold in bulk. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.
