A WORD FOR THE HAS BEENS.

The Journal copies from the Oregonian a caustic arraignment of the Has-Beens in Oregon politics.

These were all prominent Republicans who have been temporarily swept aside by the political current.

Some of these Republicans will be heard from in the future, as they are men of ability and principle.

THE HAS-BEEN OF TODAY IS THE MAY-BE OF TOMORROW.

The whirligig of time leaves one man on top today, and he goes down tomorrow.

The ablest and most prominent men of Oregon have had their ups and downs.

Insofar as they are guided by sound principles and possess sound manhood and judgment they cannot be kept down.

Cut out that list and put it in your scrapbook, and in the course of five or ten years every one of the Has-Beens will be heard from.

In the meantime they must not be left out of any man's calculations. THE HAS-BEEN HAS NOTHING ELSE TO DO BUT ATTEND TO POLITICS.

He is not troubled with the cares and responsibilities of office.

While those in office are making enemies the Has-Beens is making friends.

THE WAY BACK TO POWER.

Some Republican newspapers have strange ideas as to the best means to get the party back to power.

They blame the loss of the governor upon the direct primary, and declare IT MUST BE ABOLISHED BEFORE THE REPUBLICAN PARTY CAN HAVE ANY FUTURE.

Those same Republican papers have opposed the direct primary, opposed direct election of senators, opposed direct legislation, opposed all placing of power in the hands of the people.

Who is to blame for the people refusing to place the highest office in their gift in the hands of an anti-people's, boss-ridden, machine-ruled faction?

WHY HAVE SO MANY REFORMS THAT THE PEOPLE WANTED HAD TO COME FROM UN-REPUBLICAN SOURCES?

The way back to power is along the line of the least disturbance, the line of doing things the people want done, not by condemning every step that is taken away from machine rule and dictation by corporations for selfish purposes.

UP-TO-DATE, MODERN, SANE REPUBLICANISM MEANS SOMETHING MORE THAN MERE DESIRE FOR OFFICE.

It must mean progressive govern-

WITHEYCOMBE AND CHAMBERLAIN

(Forest Grove Times)

It is a matter of great regret that Dr. Withycombe should be defeated for governor. Not another man on either ticket so fully represented the farming, the stock-growing, the great producing classes as he. His work as an educator in connection with the Agricultural college and experimental station for many years has put him in closer touch with them than any other man in the state. He is fully qualified for all the duties of the position; he is a man whose private life is above reproach, yet he is turned down, and the keenest regret of all is that it has been done by the very men of all others who ought to have supported him. Multnomah, the one county where the agricultural interests have smallest proportional vote, stood by him nobly, but Washington and Marion and Benton and many others that ought to have each given him almost enough to have wiped out the majority against him, fell far short of doing what they should. It is one of the freak results of a peculiar campaign.

The Chamberlain meeting held at Vert's hall last Thursday afternoon was the largest held in this city during the campaign. The governor is probably the most persuasive campaigner in the state, and he patted his hearers on the back and told them what nice people they were, and what a nice fellow he was, and what a lot he had done for them and now if they wanted to show that they approved what he had done then the way to do it was to vote for him. People may say that speeches do not influence votes, but the governor is proof positive to the contrary. The state's business has been no better managed during his administration than during other administrations, but the governor makes the people believe he is the only sinner pure executive who ever sat in the chair, and then they go out and vote for him as if it were the privilege of their lives. His speeches are vote getters and the proofs of it are the election returns.

Mormons in Oregon.

Mormons are becoming an effective force in Oregon politics.

In Union, Baker and Wasco counties, and in Portland, they have voting strength.

THE MORMON VOTE IS WELL ORGANIZED AND GENERALLY IS CAST SOLIDLY ON ELECTION DAY.

Not outspokenly for any one party, they work together as a church organization along moral lines.

It is a question whether on a close contest they do not hold the balance of power in this state today.

The Mormon church is a great organizer industrially. It has control of some of the finest valleys in eastern Oregon.

It has large stores, sawmills, sugar refineries and collieries and railroads. A sawmill at Hood River, large bodies of timber lands (acquired in the usual way) with lumber yards, complete the strongest combination of any religious body in Oregon.

INCIDENTALLY THE PRESIDENCY OF THE OREGON SHORT LINE, A PART OF THE HARRISMAN SYSTEM, IS IN THE HANDS OF THE MORMONS.

Of course, individuals count for but little in this hierarchy. The church is everything.

The Mormons are in Oregon to stay. They are in politics to stay. They are pretty near the whole thing in eastern Oregon.

The COAL TRUST.

An Outline of Its Vast Powers and Possessions.

In the first of two articles on "The Coal Trust, the Labor Trust, and the People Who Pay," in April Everybody's Magazine, Hartley Davis thus describes the greatest monopoly of the age:

"The coal trust is a scant half dozen years old. Yet it owns 83 per cent of the coal in the ground, and controls 93 per cent; it owns a perpetual franchise to mine and distribute; it owns the labor of thousands of men and boys; it owns the men who used to be known as 'independent operators,' then as 'operators' merely; it owns the railroads that transport the coal; it owns the selling machinery. It decides how much coal shall be taken from the ground, where it shall be shipped and how; what the carrying charges shall be, and the selling price. It can foretell what the minimum price will be five years from now in New York or at a way station in Minnesota. The maximum price it would not predict for that depends upon 'economic conditions;' meaning, in this instance, the ability of the public to pay. Actually the trust has perfected a system whereby the price of a million tons delivered in New York or half a wagon load sold to a farmer from an elevator at a way station on the prairies of North Dakota is fixed with equal certainty and rigidity. It determines the exact profit both of the New York wholesaler and of the little retailer in the smallest community. It knows every item of cost down to a fraction of a cent, from the mine to the consumer's coal bin. Those poor, ignorant dealers who labored under the foolish delusion that they had a right to do business as they saw fit, and who sought to augment their total profits by cutting prices to increase sales, have swiftly been shown the error of their ways. The monopoly has simply cut off their supply of coal and has driven them out of business. Already this gigantic trust has taken from the people $80,000,000 more than could have been collected had the combination not been effective."

DEEDS, NOT WORDS

Salem People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words, but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills. For Salem kidney sufferers.

Have made their local reputation. Proof lies in the testimony of Salem people who have been cured to stay cured.

William Baumgardner, of 424 Water street, Salem, Oregon, says: "I speak from personal experience when I say that Doan's Kidney Pills do all that is claimed for them in curing kidney complaint and headache. I had felt the need of such a remedy for a good long while, but did not know just what I should use. I have found that many medicines are worthless and that even physicians' prescriptions do not always prove effective. When I read of Doan's Kidney Pills, however, I was induced to go to Dr. Stone's drug store and procure a supply. The backache and irregular condition of the kidneys which had annoyed me quickly gave way on beginning to use your remedy, and I was restored to a condition of ease and comfort. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone in need of such a medicine."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Stole Wedding Ice Cream.

The Dalles Chronicle of last Friday has this pathetic story:

Today's Dufur dispatch says that at a wedding on Wednesday a piece of hoodlumism was performed by some youngsters that is not often met with. Harold Hester, the two McManemy boys, Clifford Harvey, Irving Easton, Guy Hendrix and the Schuler boy stole a freezer of ice cream from the premises of Mr. Patison, and when the Patisons went for cream for their guests there was none to be had. It had mysteriously disappeared. James Cooper took up the scent and found the ice cream—that is, what was left of it—and the boys above named, in the school house. They were compelled to carry the freezer back to the place from whence it was stolen, and yesterday morning the boys were all up before Recorder O'Brien for their misconduct. Mr. Patison refused to prosecute and the matter was dropped.

Cures Old Sores.

Westmoreland, Kan., May 5, 1902: Ballard Snow Lintiment Co. Your Snow Lintiment cured an old sore on the side of my chin that was supposed to be a cancer. The sore was stubborn and would not yield to treatment, until I tried Snow Lintiment, which did the work in short order. My sister, Mrs. Sophie J. Carson, Allensville, Mifflin County, Pa., has a sore and trusts that it is a cancer. Please send her a 50c bottle. For sale by D. J. Fry.

As to Trees.

"Possibly by reason of some mysterious defect in the national character, Americans seem to have little appreciation of the value of trees," says the Providence Journal, writing of Arbor day in the Rhode Island city. This is seeking a curious origin for a matter that is explicable in a very simple way.

All over the settled portions of the United States—even in New England—there are men whose fathers, if not they themselves, worked hard to clear an acre annually of the virgin forest. Considerable area in Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire are still in timber, and although the necessity of clearing land there for farms has disappeared, the fact that this was not true until recent years accounts for the prevalent disregard of the "forest primeval." Passing westward from New England, there are few states, save the prairies commonwealths of the middle west, in which thousands of citizens have not toiled in their youth at "log piling." There was no market at hand in the earlier days for lumber, however good it may have been and the logs were simply collected in piles and burned. So far from deeming this a wasteful practice, the settler found it the only way to obtain cleared land. The era of middle western development created a vast demand for lumber, and then still more land was cleared for the profit to be made out of the trees. This could not be regarded as waste when it also opened the way for agriculture.

Long schooling in the destruction of trees for utilitarian reasons has doubtless made the "American character" indifferent in a large degree to the loss of our forests. National habits of thought are not easily reversed, and it is not yet more than a generation or two since the average farmer's boy was accustomed to get up an appetite by turning out early and helping "dad" pull a stump before breakfast. This explains why New England, where woodland is now becoming valuable, finds it hard to arouse much interest in Arbor day. Save in some of the treeless states of the middle west, the custom of tree planting has never become a habit among large classes of the population.

The Railroad's Big Stick.

In "The Way of a Railroad With a Town," in the June McClure's, Ray Stannard Baker shows how a common carrier holds up an entire section of country, and says whether this industry or that shall prosper, or whether this class or the other shall be utterly driven out of business, Mr. Baker spent a long time studying his material for this article in Danville, Va., which is tapped by only one railroad, the Southern, and which on this account is quite at the mercy of the rate-makers. A comparison is forcefully drawn between the conditions here and those in the city of Lynchburg, 66 miles away, which has plenty of railroad competition. Mr. Baker states facts which unless backed by statistics might well arouse incredulity. For instance, fertilizer is shipped from Chicago to Danville at $5.80 a ton, whereas if it went 66 miles further to Lynchburg, the rate would be only $4.40. Horses shipped from the west can be delivered at Richmond, 141 miles further, at so much less freight that Danville shippers have been known to book their stock all the way through, and then remove it by stealth from the car as they stood in the Danville freight yard. The tragedy of all this lies in the fact that Danville has contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars to railroad companies for competition and is still paying interest on a part of this money. Mr. Baker tells how the tobacco growers are barely able to struggle along, while certain favored exporters are given rates which are like finding money. The story of the contest between the railroad and the anti-railroad parties in the town is of absorbing interest. Everyone who wants to understand the big stick powers of the railroad should read this sane and forcible article.

Trust to Nature.

A great many Americans, both men and women, are thin, pale and puny, with poor circulation, because they have ill-treated their stomachs by hasty eating or too much eating, by consuming alcoholic beverages, or by too close confinement to home, office or factory, and in consequence the stomach must be treated in a natural way before they can rectify their earlier mistakes. The muscles in many such people, in fact in every weary, thin and thin-blooded person, do their work with great difficulty. Mental fatigue comes early, is extreme and lasts long. The demand for nutritive aid is ahead of the supply. To insure perfect health every tissue, bone, nerve and muscle should take from the blood certain materials and return to it certain others. It is necessary to prepare the stomach for the work of taking up from the food what is necessary to make good, rich, red blood. We must go to Nature for the remedy. There were certain roots known to the Indians of this country before the advent of the whites which later came to the knowledge of the settlers and which are now growing rapidly in professional favor for the cure of obstinate stomach and liver troubles. These are found to be safe and yet certain in their cleansing and invigorating effect upon the stomach, liver and blood. These are: Golden Seal root, Queen's root, Stone root, Bloodroot, Mandrake root. Then there is Black Cherrybark. The medicinal principles residing in these native roots when extracted with glycerine as a solvent make the most reliable and efficient stomach tonic and liver invigorator, when combined in just the right proportions as in Dr. E. W. Hall's Golden Medical Discovery. Where there is bankrupt vitality—such as nervous exhaustion, bad nutrition—and thin blood, the body acquires vigor and the nerves, blood and all the tissues feel the favorable effect of this sovereign remedy. Although some physicians have been aware of the high medicinal value of the above mentioned plants, yet few have used pure glycerine as a solvent and usually the doctors' prescriptions called for the ingredients in varying amounts, with alcohol.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is a scientific preparation compounded of the glyceric extracts of the above mentioned vegetable ingredients and contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs.

We have often wondered during the hot weather if the summer girls are as cool as they look.

Refused to Advertise

A special to the Indianapolis News from Marlon, Ind., says that after a hard fight of seventeen years against competitors who advertised, Gunder Bros., dry goods merchants, the oldest mercantile firm in Marlon and at one time the largest retail house in northern Indiana, have given up the hopeless struggle and sold out their business.

When gas was discovered in Marlon the town began to grow rapidly, and competition in all business was soon encountered by all the old local merchants. The new merchants advertised, but many of the old established firms were slow in believing that it was necessary for them to use printers' ink, as they knew nearly every man in the county. All of them who are now in business concluded that it was necessary to advertise in order to hold what trade they had and to increase it, except Gunder Bros., who absolutely refused, claiming it was money thrown away. The firm had the best business site in the city, but the store was never filled with shoppers. Thousands passed and repassed the place day after day without stopping. The firm carried an excellent line of goods and treated customers well, but only a few farmers and some of the old citizens of Marlon patronized the place. The store is now closed for good.
