GOAT GOT HIS WHISKERS

W. F. Garms Is Shaved by a Measly Old Mazama While He Sleeps

Overcome by the drowsy weather—the Oregon mist is held to be responsible for it—the carpenter of the schooner W. F. Garms fell into a deep sleep yesterday. Knowing in advance that he could not keep his eyes open much longer, he decided to make himself as comfortable as possible before wandering off into dreamland.

A wide tarpaulin was stretched out on the deck. One end of it was made fast to the donkey engine, and the other to the ship's railing. Underneath this canopy the tar placed a large number of blankets. A gunny sack stuffed with albatross feathers served as a pillow. It is said that a finer couch was never prepared for weary man. He listened to the big rain drops pattering on the canvas roof for a few minutes, and then the carpenter dropped off to sleep.

How long he lay there he does not know, as he forgot to look at his watch before retiring. When he was in the midst of a dream he was rudely awakened by what seemed to be hard bristles pressing against his face. Arousing himself and sitting up in his bed he saw one of the captain's pet goats standing over him, quietly chewing at something. Mechanically he put one of his hands to his face, and great was his surprise when he found it as smooth as a billiard ball. The goat had eaten off his whiskers as closely as if a barber had removed them. Before falling asleep he had a full beard.

The shorn tar arose. For awhile anger and mirth struggled for mastery. He hesitated on whether he had better kill the goat or feel grateful toward him. Had he gone up town and got shaved it would have cost him 15 cents, and if he wanted another beard he argued that all he would have to do would be to let his whiskers grow, provided that he kept a safe distance from the goat during the sprouting process. His better nature prevailed and the goat lives. But it may be sold to some barber who is in need of an able assistant.

CANDIDATE FOR SPEAKER.

Many Names Suggested—Multnomah Probably Gets Presidency of Senate.

Considerable interest is being shown in different parts of the state over the election of speaker of the house and president of the senate of the next legislature. For speaker there are three avowed candidates: Frank Davey of Marion county; Jas. U. Campbell, of Clackamas county; and W. I. Vawter, of Jackson county. It is believed that Mr. Davey will have the united support of Marion county, and that Mr. Campbell, being a joint representative for Clackamas and Multnomah counties, will have the united support of the delegations of these two counties. Portland will have a candidate, and probably two, for president of the senate, and will be content with that office and honor, and will be willing to concede the speakership to Clackamas or possibly Marion, in the event Mr. Davey comes into the legislature with considerable strength from the valley counties.

Mr. Campbell has for a number of years been one of the lieutenants of George C. Brownell, who was defeated in the recent election, and it is safe to assume that he can have whatever influence Mr. Brownell may be able to command. And his most bitter enemy will admit that the Brownell influence in Oregon politics is not yet dead.

Dan J. Malarkay, a hold-over senator from Multnomah county, is probably the most prominent candidate for president of the senate. C. W. Hobson, also a hold-over from the same county, is also a candidate. So is N. Whealdon, of Wasco county.

SALEM BAND AT STATE FAIR.

State Board Awards Contract to Local Players for 1906.

The State Board of Agriculture is in session this afternoon, and will probably continue through tomorrow. Those present include President Downing, Secretary F. W. Durbin, Frank Lee, of Portland; Jasper Wilkins, of Eugene; W. F. Matlock, of Pendleton, and the former secretary, M. T. Wisdom, of Portland. The contract for music during the fair next September has been awarded to the Salem Military Band. Several bids were submitted.

The bar privileges were awarded to W. R. Wylie, of Hillsboro, and the second card privileges to E. J. Hendricks, of Salem.

FALLS CITY DALLAS AND SALEM

Railroad Project That Has Passed the Paper and Hot Air Stage

President F. W. Leadbetter, of the Portland Commercial Club, writes friends in this city that in a very short time his company, that has acquired control of the Falls City, Dallas and Salem railroad, will be in Salem, and make the people here a proposition to interest themselves in the completion of the line to this city.

It is not known just what proposition will be made, but Mr. Leadbetter is a thoroughgoing business man, who is not afraid to push the enterprise, and will only ask what is right for the community that will get the immense benefits that will come to Salem from a line across the valley that will virtually make this the crossing for all trade from one side of the valley to the other.

People on the west side are now practically shut out of the Capital City, and can only come around by way of Albany. The trade is forced to Portland because there is no way for the people of Polk, Yamhill and Benton to come to Salem conveniently. This matter is being handled by a committee that was appointed by the Commercial club some time since, and a report will probably be made at a meeting to be held soon at which it is expected that Mr. Leadbetter will appear and make definite statements.

The Falls City and Dallas road brought to Salem means doubling the capacity of the sawmills here, the building of hardwood sawmills and furniture factories, and probably another electric light and power and heating plant to consume the waste. It means the biggest thing for the Capital City that has yet been accomplished.

SALEM, TURNER, MEHAMA

J. M. Watson and Frank Robertson of Turner were in the city today, and expressed themselves as very much in favor of an electric railroad from Salem to Turner, and on up the Santiam valley. They say it is the only practical outlet the people of all those towns have to come to the Capital city to trade. All the Linn county people who live up that way would naturally gravitate to Salem, and the line would run through a paying territory all the way. Population is multiplying very fast and the crops of fruit, dairy products, fuel and all kinds of produce that could be hauled are immense. The proposition is a good one and will be taken up at the next session of the Willamette Valley Development League. A committee has been appointed to investigate the territory and see what it has to offer.

VOTE FOR GODDESS.

Get Interested in the Contest and See Your Friend Win.

The contest for the selection of the Goddess of Liberty is going on, and, although the votes are not being cast rapidly, it is known that there is a large number being held to make a grand surprise at the close. The contest ends on the 20th, and there is but a short time to vote. Some young lady will represent the city on the Fourth of July, and will be given $50 in money to buy her robes. It will be an honor, so vote for one of your friends, and see that she wins.

The votes cast are as follows:
Alta M. Cameron 276
Gladys Cole 223
Lela Bell 198

WILLAMETTE'S TRUSTEES

Several Changes Removed in the Personnel of the Faculty.

The board of trustees of Willamette University convened yesterday morning, and are still in session this afternoon. Several reports were presented and accepted. Campus rumors have been that A. N. Smith, president of the board, has resigned and that Philip Boehner, of Portland, has been named as his successor.

Prof. W. P. Drew has probably been re-elected, as a petition is being circulated among the students asking for his reinstatement in the chair of Latin and Greek.

Concerning the other appointments on the faculty nothing can be known officially, but it is understood that the entire body has been re-elected, with the exception of Prof. Drew.

The trustees also voted to levy a matriculation fee of $3 in all the departments of the University. The fund will be apportioned among the various student enterprises.

GRAND COUNCIL REDMEN

Geo. N. Farrin, of Marshfield, an officer of that order, has been in the city in the interest of the grand council of Red Men, that is to meet at Marshfield June 19th. He has secured expression rates for the 160 delegates who will attend the sessions at the metropolis of Coos Bay, on the steamer Alliance, which will leave Portland Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. The Alliance is a very comfortable boat, Captain Kelley commanding, and the rate for the round trip is only $12. Mr. Farrin says he received valuable assistance from President Leadbetter, of the Portland Commercial Club, in securing the desired concessions.

From Frisco in an Auto.

After strenuous work for the San Francisco relief committee, just after the earthquake and fire that almost annihilated that city, A. D. Perkins, of Los Angeles, and S. E. Webb, of Monterey, arrived in Salem this morning in their automobile. During their trip they passed over some very rough country, and at one place in the Sierras were compelled to use a railroad tunnel to escape impassable roads. The auto came through without a puncture, and will carry its owners to the village down the creek, where Messrs. Perkins and Webb will probably engage in business.

WILL MAKE REVENUE

As soon as the official returns of the recent election are completed Governor Chamberlain will issue a proclamation placing in operation the two laws requiring sleeping car companies, refrigerator car companies and oil companies to pay an annual license upon their gross earnings. These bills were proposed by initiative petition, and were submitted to the electors at the recent election. Both bills were adopted and will become laws as soon as the governor issues the proclamation to that effect. This Governor Chamberlain will do as soon as the complete official returns are in.

It is difficult to estimate how much revenue this will bring the state. The clerks in the office of the secretary of state are inclined to believe that it will not increase the revenue of the state much more than $100,000 a year. However, many statisticians believe that it will double that amount.

There will be no hitch or hindrance in the operation of these laws, because however much the corporations may object they will have no standing in the court as similar bills have been taken to the supreme court of the United States from several Eastern states, and the court has in every case sustained the laws as being entirely within the limitations of state constitutions.
