KEAN GETS THE LIMIT

Philadelphia, June 20.—"Had I the disposition of this case I would summon a large number of mothers here and turn you over to their tender mercies, but, as the law fixes the penalty for crimes like yours, I can do nothing but commit you without bail for the action of the grand jury on the charge of kidnapping."

These words were addressed by Magistrate Eisenbrown to John Joseph Kean, the abductor of Frederick Muth, the 7-year-old son of Charles Muth, the Columbia avenue jeweler, who, with his captive, was discovered Monday in a vacant house in West Philadelphia after a six-days' search.

The magistrate's office was crowded, and muttered threats could be heard when the prisoner was placed in the dock. Many of the spectators were women. Kean, after a sleepless night in the cell, appeared haggard and wan. He still seemed to fear bodily injury, and eyed the spectators suspiciously.

Immediately after the hearing Captain of Detectives Donaghy went before the grand jury with his witnesses and asked for an indictment. The grand jury found a true bill against Kean, he was given an immediate trial, convicted in less than an hour, and Judge Sulzberger sentenced the prisoner to 20 years. From the time of Kean's arrest until he was on his way to begin sentence less than 24 hours had elapsed.

They burned the municipal record and fled, carrying off their dead and wounded. The constabulary were taken wholly unawares. Surrounded by the enemy they fought violently until overwhelmed by numbers. The loss by the Palajanes is said to have been heavy, Pascor being among the dead. As the outlaws left the village Lieutenant Johnson, with a force from a neighboring post appeared and started in pursuit.

Housewives for the Soldiers.

Washington, June 20.—A contract has been let to a New York firm for furnishing eventually something like 50,000 articles known as the "housewife," to be carried by every soldier in the army when in the field. For some time Col. D. L. Brainard, the commissary officer on duty at the army building in Whitehall street, New York, has been obtaining samples of this article, with the idea of having selected an article which answers all the purposes. The one which has been chosen is made of khaki cloth, weighing a trifle more than four ounces. It will contain scissors, buttons, needles, threads and an assortment of pins. The government will pay a little more than thirty-five cents for each of these articles. The idea comes from the Japanese. Every soldier of the Japanese army in Manchuria carried one of these useful "housewives."
