

Military "Want" Advertising.

Washington, June 23.—The army and navy officers who have to do with recruiting have always expressed much curiosity to know to what means of publicity may be ascribed the procurement of recruits. It has always been a question whether newspaper advertising paid better than the circus posters which have been more or less criticized, especially in congress, as overstating opportunities and advantages of enlistment.

General F. C. Ainsworth, the military secretary of the army, has sent out a circular to recruiting officers calling for reports, which will show how each applicant happened to present himself for enlistment. Lieutenant E. E. Harding, of the Twenty-sixth infantry, who is in charge of the recruiting offices in Third avenue, and Major E. P. Andrews, of the Third cavalry, who has charge of the recruiting stations in Sixth and Eighth avenues, New York City, will hereafter ascertain from each recruit whether he learned of the opportunities of enlistment through a newspaper advertisement, the recruiting circular, the decorated poster, the flag of the recruiting station, or whether he just happened to drop in. There is a difference of opinion as to the merits of the various methods of publicity. Most of the authorities entertain the idea, however, that the newspaper advertisement yields the best results, on the ground that acceptable men who are out of work read the "want" ads of the papers and come across the call for recruits, although, of course, it is admitted that a certain amount of "dead wall" advertising must keep the need for enlisted men before the public. It is probable that the information acquired as a result of General Ainsworth's circular will govern the war department hereafter in its methods for advertising for recruits, and undoubtedly this policy of the war department will have an influence upon the naval methods.

German-American Alliance.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 23.—Thousands of German-Americans, members of the various societies and organizations belonging to the German-American alliance, are assembled here to take part in the great state convention of the alliance, which opened here today for a three days' session. About 140 Turner and German singing societies in all parts of Pennsylvania are represented in the convention. The convention will close with a grand festival at Ross Grove on the last day of the meet.

There will be an interesting gymnastic exhibition by the Turners and singing by a mass chorus of 2000 voices. Dr. Hexamer of Philadelphia, president of the German-American National Alliance, and the Rev. Dr. J. H. Asbeck will be the principal orators at the festival. A dozen bands will furnish the music for the musical numbers of the program and the dancing and in the evening prizes will be awarded to the victorious gymnasts and singers. It is expected that at least 25,000 people will attend the popular celebration at the grove. The German-American Alliance has a membership of fully 35,000 in this state.

The local Turner and German singing societies have made special efforts to make the convention and Volksfest a great success.

Deep tearing or wrenching pains, occasioned by getting wet through; worse when at rest, or on first moving the limbs and in cold or damp weather, is cured quickly by Ballard's Snow Liniment. Imitating the Turkish Style.

Newport, R. I., June 25.—Miss Mildred Sherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Watts Sherman, and one of the most popular society girls of this city, has started a new fad in veils and everybody is wondering now whether the fad will find many imitators in the small set of Newport and New York. The new fad consists mainly in wearing a large and heavy veil in close imitation of the veils worn by Turkish women. The veil is fastened on each side of the head in such a manner that it covers the lower part of the face and leaves only the eyes and part of the forehead exposed to view. The effect of the arrangement is rather striking and peculiar and has attracted considerable attention. Several of Miss Sherman's friends have already taken up the fad and during the last few days several of them have appeared in public with their veils arranged in Turkish fashion.

WANTS TREES SPARED

"The Groves Were God's First Temples" it is Sacrilege to Destroy Them

Salem, Ore., June 23, 1906.

Editor Journal:

In your issue of Saturday "A Reader" calls for the destruction of the "unhealthy and unsightly trees" along the State street border of the University campus, and "hopes that college people will be sufficiently up to date to remove the trees," etc. It is not always wise for any of us to assume that only those who agree with us are "up to date," and if this proposition is "up to date," I think there is an almost universal sentiment in this community that we should cling to the ideas of the forefathers. Salem's trees have always been her pride and among her chief beauties, and there is hardly a feature of the town that has attracted more frequent and more favorable comment from strangers than the view from the northeast corner of the campus of that double row of trees. Your correspondent has uttered the first discordant note. I had occasion this morning to walk the full length of State street, and I felt just as healthy and much more comfortable as I walked under the shadow of those trees than I did as I walked in the hot sun from Twelfth to Twenty-first street. An occasional tree with decaying branches should be taken out, but for every one taken out at least two should be put in. They are not "unsightly," and all the "unhealthy" trees in the whole row wouldn't furnish Messrs. Clough and Rigdon enough patronage to buy a breakfast in the next fifty years. The destruction of so many of our beautiful shade trees during the past few years has detracted from the beauty of our town, and has been almost universally regretted. While the laying of cement walks has made the removal of many of them necessary, many could and should have been saved. The maple, too, is preferable to the smaller trees, because when trimmed as it should be to the height of at least fifteen or twenty feet, it gives an abundance of space under its limbs for the free circulation of air and sunlight.

It is a singular mania that would prompt the cutting down of a beautiful tree which in takes at least a generation to grow, and it is an unfortunate mental condition that keeps some people awake every night in the year worrying because the maple leaves are to litter the sidewalks for two or three weeks in the fall. Severe cases of this kind might be cured by spending a hot summer in the shadow of a clump of sage brush in Nevada, or under the shade of a juniper tree in some of the almost treeless regions of eastern Oregon. Milder cases would respond to treatment compelling them for the next three months to take the sunny side of State street, and imposing a heavy penalty upon any one of them found walking through that avenue of "unsightly and unhealthy" shade trees fronting the University campus.

As a member of the board of trustees of Willamette university and at the risk of being considered "out of date," I wish to be recorded as a friend of that avenue of shade trees, and I shall vigorously protest against their removal. CHAS. B. MOORES.
