DIED IN NEXT CELL

Negro Has no Regards for Thaw's Feelings and "Kicks the Bucket" in Cell Above Him

New York, July 5.—Thaw's rest in the Tombs was broken by the death struggles of Robert Cambridge, aged 21, a negro prisoner, charged with larceny, in the cell immediately above, who died of uraemic poisoning. H. Selars McKee, president of the First National Bank, of Pittsburgh, in this city, is an old friend of Thaw's father. He says many persons in New York are willing to add Thaw for the sake of the friendship they bore his father. The district attorney continues seeking evidence that Thaw poisoned White with leaded. It is alleged that Thaw rebuked every man who even spoke to his wife in the restaurants, and his conduct was so objectionable that one restaurant keeper ordered him to go there no more.

Evelyn visited her husband today, and remained some time. The woman was weak and nervous from the strain, and her health is poor. Attorney O'Connell interviewed Thaw in his cell this morning, and announced an absolute denial that Evelyn, before her marriage, had prepared an affidavit in a contemplated suit against the man she afterwards married. Despite this denial, the story won't die. It is reported that Abe Hummel was the attorney for the woman engaged at that time.

Cholera in Manila.

Manila, July 5.—In the 24 hours ending at 8 o'clock this morning there were 29 cases and 23 deaths from cholera.

era in this city. In the provinces 12 cases and five deaths are reported. The situation is improved. The report of the 5th shows 19 new cases since midnight of the 4th, and 10 deaths. Robert Imobertz and a man named Hayt, both Americans, were stricken. The disease has not appeared in the American section of the city. The Americans so far stricken live in the native sections. The authorities believe the disease is now under control.

The Isthmian Ditch.

Panama, July 5.—The canal commission reorganized today, according to the recent appointment of the President. The Standard is endeavoring to have the railroad burn oil instead of coal. The majority of the commission favors oil. The Fourth was celebrated on the Isthmus by the natives and Americans enthusiastically.

'No Likee' Brick Pile.

San Francisco, July 5.—Saloons were opened today for the first time since April 18th, and, contrary to expectations of the police, but few drunks were reported up to 11 o'clock. The threat to force all arrested for intoxication to clean brick is credited with keeping down inebriety.

After John and Standard.

Tokio, O., July 5.—Prosecutor William Davis has filed an information against John D. Rockefeller and the Standard Oil, charging them with violation of the anti-trust laws.

Rockefeller will be tried in Findlay, if service on him in Ohio can be secured.

Suicided at Sea.

New York, July 5.—P. N. Woolfuff, aged 36, a Chicago salesman, committed suicide by cutting his throat while at sea on board the steamer Majestic, which arrived today. On July 2d he was buried at sea. The reason for the act is unknown.

Chicago Markets.

Chicago, July 5.—Wheat 79% @ 79%, corn 52% @ 51%, oats 35% @ 35%.

ROBBED WORKING WOMEN

Chicago Real Estate Man Steals $100,000, and Commits Suicide When Theft Is Discovered

Chicago, July 5.—Frank D. Callum, head of a large real estate firm, committed suicide this morning to escape, so it is alleged, prosecution on a dozen criminal charges. A case filed against him by Miss Nellie Alpine, charging him with misappropriation of funds entrusted to him for investment, was set for a few hours after he died today. The aggregate of the claims will reach $100,000. It is alleged his victims were women wage earners, the largest claim being $7400. He tried asphyxiation, but his family prevented this, and called in a physician. Callum shot himself dead while the doctor was preparing medicine. He broke his leg two months ago while leaving the court room, the other having been previously amputated.

WE HAVE A JUDGE IN CHINA

Washington, July 5.—The President today appointed Attorney General Whiffey, of the Philippines, to be first United States judge of the extra territorial judicial district, created by congress, comprising most of the seaboard provinces of China, and part of Korea, with headquarters at Shanghai. The salary is $10,000 a year.

BODY FOUND IN A SHARK.

College Student Disappeared While Swimming.

New Orleans, July 5.—A week ago one of the students at St. Stanislaus college, at Bay St. Louis, on the Gulf Coast, was captured by a man-eating shark, while swimming about half a mile from shore. The boy was never seen after his was dragged under the water. Since that time Gilbert Marshall, a West Point man, who is at Bay St. Louis, on his vacation, and his brother, Carl, have been making a determined fight on the larger sharks, and have landed four which have been interfering with the bathers.

The largest specimen was caught yesterday, after a fight of three hours. After dragging it to shore, the two young men, as a matter of curiosity, cut it open and found part of the head and arms of the unfortunate student who disappeared in the fish's mouth.

KNOCKED OUT IN THE THIRD.

Ben Schuyler, of Coos County, Easily Whipped by Martin Denny.

Marshfield, Or., July 5.—Martin Denny, formerly of Portland, defeated Ben Schuyler, of Coos county, on the Fourth in the third round of what was to have been a 20-round contest. The sporting fraternity of Coos Bay was well represented at the ringside, and $1000 went to enrich the Denny supporters. Schuyler was the aggressor in the two initial rounds, but blew up in the first of the third, and went to grass from a left uppercut on the jaw.

He struck the improvised floor with more force than the blow contained, and was counted out by Referee Tim Sooley. Arriving later, he made his corner, but in a wobbly condition.

Cases Postponed.

Chicago, July 5.—The Alton rebate case and the Dowie case were both postponed on account of the sudden death of a cousin of Judge Landis.

Meldrum Gets Three Years.

Portland, July 5.—Henry Meldrum, former United States surveyor-general of Oregon, convicted in November, 1904, on 21 counts of forging land affidavits, was sentenced this morning to pay a fine aggregating $5250 and costs and to three years' imprisonment on McNeil's Island. He was released on bonds until Monday, pending his decision whether to take an appeal.

DAGO STABBED NEGRO

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 5.—This morning Secretary Loeb spent two hours in the President's library. Luncheon followed the morning's work, and the President, his wife and boys, on horseback, took a ride along the Cove road. Last night during a celebration by local negroes, Italian passing objected to being made targets for firecrackers, and one stabbed a negro sailor from the President's yacht, the Syph. The tar was taken aboard the ship in a critical condition. His assailant escaped.

U. of P. Summer School.

Philadelphia, July 5.—The third annual summer school of the University of Pennsylvania opened here today for a term of six weeks. The enrollment is larger than during the first two years. The enrollment at the first summer school was 137, at the second 212, but this year it is more than 300. The courses this year have been increased and the faculty has been enlarged. The curriculum includes almost the entire course of the college in a somewhat abbreviated form, but with essentials retained. There are no entrance examinations. The summer school has grown beyond the use of teachers only, and many professional men, anxious to increase their general knowledge, attend the course. Both men and women are admitted. The course, which will close on August 16, is under the direction of Prof. Arthur Hobson Quinn.

In addition to the regular lectures and recitals there will be a number of excursions during the summer for the members of the summer school. These will be in charge of Dr. James F. Willard, the Harrison fellow in history. Among other places the University observatory, Crump's shipyard, historic Germantown and other places of interest will be visited. This program includes also an automobile ride to Valley Forge.

Cab Strike in Jerusalem.

Constantinople, July 5.—Interesting reports of a strike of the cabmen in the Holy City have arrived from Jerusalem. It was thought about in the following manner:

The Turkish authorities, moved at last by the bitter complaints of the traveling public, made a feeble attempt to grapple with the crying evil of the scandalous overcharging on the part of local jehus and the horse and carriage owners, from which visitors to the cradle of Christianity have suffered so long. A regular tariff of legal fares was introduced, much to the disgust of the drivers and proprietors, who saw their revenue, obtained from fleecing tourists, appreciably diminished in future. So they struck in a body, and for the first time, pedestrians could proceed on their way unmolested by the clouds of malodorous dust whirled up by the miserable nondescript boxes on wheels known as public conveyances. A crowd assembled at the well-known Jaffa Gate, enjoying the spectacle of foreign visitors arriving by train from Jaffa, tramping with their luggage through the thick dust to their destinations. The strike, however, only lasted a few days. The city authorities gave way to the demands of the strikers and the tariff was withdrawn. Intending tourists will do well to remember that they still remain in the hands of the "Philistines" when they visit Jerusalem.

SALEM'S GREATEST HOLIDAY

The Weather Was Perfect, and the Decorations, and Floats the Finest Ever Seen in the Willamette Valley

Neighboring Towns and the Country Sent Hundreds Salemwards and the Lowest Estimate Says 10,000 Visitors

Never before in the history of Salem was the birthday of the nation celebrated in a more fitting and splendid manner than yesterday. The program was arranged with care and in such a way that there was something doing every minute in the day, and the people to whom was assigned the working out of the details, planned the features so there was not a hitch or a jar to mar the success of the splendid celebration. From the time the opening salutes were fired as the first rays of the morning sun fell on the domes of the capital city until late in the night, strains of patriotic music filled the air; above all this was the din of bombs and firecrackers and the occasional shouts of a happy and prosperous people.

The entire affair was a success. It was suitably led up to by the local lodge of Elks, who have been holding a gay festival—their Skidoo, in the city for several days. Enthusiasm had already been worked up to the proper pitch and every one was willing and ready to celebrate. The weather was auspicious. It was perfectly fair, but not quite so hot as it was on the two previous days.

Only a few of the neighboring towns held formal celebrations this year and hundreds of people came in from the towns and ranches along the valley to help Salem make a giant success on Fourth of July day. They came by train and boat and in private conveyances from all the country around. And they all enjoyed all the features, the parade, the patriotic exercises at Marion park, the music, the address of the president of the day, Frank Davey, and the splendid address of former Governor Geer.

The Big Parade.

The grand marshal of the day was Adjutant General W. E. Finzer, Major F. A. Loomis of this city acting as adjutant; Corporal John Holman was color bearer.

Colonel L. K. Page was marshal of the first division and his aide was Lieutenant J. D. Scott. Then came the Salem Military band, followed by sixty men from Company M, O. N. G., in full uniform. The Liberty car was of quaint and pretty design, being surmounted by an attractive dome, under which Miss Olive Mitchell, the Goddess of Liberty, stood with graceful poise and queenly dignity. She was attended by Misses Matilda Eckert, Alta Cameron, Bessie Schultz and Beulah Myers. The float was drawn by a pair of magnificent white horses.

Then came nearly 100 of the gray-haired and venerable members of the Grand Army of the Republic, each carrying a flag and adding solemnity to the parade.

The speaker of the day, Hon. T. T. Geer, Frank Davey, Miss May Chapler, Dr. Davis Errett, came next in a carriage.

The second division was in charge of Capt. C. L. Dick, with Chauncey Bishop as aide. The Monmouth band led the division and was followed by the Chomawa Indiana battalion 225 strong. This boys did some good marching and were under command of Disciplinarian Brower.

Then came the pretty float of the Woodmen of the World. It showed that the order was for the protection of the widow and represented a happy home, though the mother was a widow. On each side of the floats were escorts.

Following this was the float of states prettily decorated and made most attractive by the 48 pretty little girls dressed in white and waving tiny flags who were grouped about Columbia, cleverly impersonated by Miss Gladys Cole.

The Pansy float, so called on account of the large pansies painted on the sides of the car, came next. Through the center of the corollas bright-eyed and smiling little girls posed their heads and smiled regally at the crowd that lined both sides of the streets.

The third division was under the command of Hon. F. T. Wrightman, J. W. Willson acting as aide. Here the Woodburn band figured prominently. The Salem fire department was represented with engine and hose carts simply, but artistically decorated.

The Modern Woodmen of America had a very pretty car. A huge log with wood-choppers about it, and the uniform degree team escorting it made an attractive combination.

The United Artisans lodge was represented by a beautifully decorated float, upon which rode a bevy of Oregon beauties.

The Salvation Army's car was unique and represented the work the Army is doing in large cities. This regenerated convict caused considerable comment.

The employees at the Jorgensen blacksmith shop also had an attractive float, giving an exhibition of horse-shoe-making "while you wait." The anvil rang out and the men at work appeared to be contented in their lot as the "village blacksmith" of old. The Sheldahl pony riding on the float did not appear disturbed by the hurrahs and noise about him.

Shafte & Emmett were represented by a quaintly decorated sprayer which, whenever a gentle spray as it went up and down the line of march.

The car loaded with grain and cereals of all kinds was that of Tidson & Co. and was the subject of much admiration.

The Quoniam Studio had a unique car with a huge white umbrella protecting a bevy of pretty girls from the heat of Old Sol's rays. The girls requested the crowd to look pleasant and sympathetic the prettiest dices along the line of march. "If they missed you you're lucky."

D. W. Gibson had charge of the fourth division and the Victor Point band discouraged sweet music for that section of the parade.

Hal D. Patton, the instigator of the pug ugly parade, rode in state and incidentally called attention to his book store.

The Capital and the Home bakeries had each a handsome float.

The Capital City Laundry, which will be open July 10, took this occasion to make its initial bow to the public.

The Mitchell Wagon Co. representatives had a long float loaded with swell rubber-tired buggies.

The Capital Soap Works were also represented and a merry bunch of little people blew soap bubbles and an old lady was doing her week's washing.

Steiner & Berger had a splendid advertisement of their business and their float was attractively decorated.

"Houses built while you wait" seemed to be the motto of the Carpenters' Union. Their's was a clever display of how union men build handsome residences. Unique and cleverly designed was the float of Stockton & Co. It consisted of a huge crescent and a number of large glittering stars. The creation was one of the newest in the parade. Miss Beauchamp and Miss Montgomery rode on the float, and whoever rode in the crescent reminded one forcibly of the fanciful picture of Beauty riding
