Thinks Oregon Should Make Fine Exhibit to Attract Immigrants

Jefferson Myers, president of the Provisional Jamestown Exposition, for the state of Oregon, is in the city today on business connected with the work.

Governor Chamberlain, taking in view the fact that when the next legislature makes an appropriation for Oregon's representation at Jamestown, it will then be too late to do a lot of preliminary work that is necessary to the success of the enterprise. He then appointed a provisional commission, composed of Jefferson Myers, Henry Blackman of Morrow county; D. H. Jackson, of Jackson county; Tom Richardson, of Multnomah, and A. H. Dovers, of Portland, to look into the object and general scope of the Jamestown exposition and to make a report to the governor, who in turn will submit this report to the legislature, together with such recommendations as he may choose to make.

The commission recommends that the different counties in the state make as good exhibits as possible at the coming state fair and save the best of those that are not perishable for the Jamestown fair.

Mr. Myers feels personally that whatever Oregon does at Jamestown should be done largely in the way of county exhibits, and that the best results can be obtained by beginning now. He and the other members of the commission are deeply interested in the success of the state fair and believe that a good state fair will mean a good exhibit at Jamestown.

Mr. Myers says that from the best information that the committee can obtain, he believes that the Jamestown fair will be one-third larger than the Lewis and Clark fair, and it will be almost in the center of the most densely populated part of the country, and the exhibits Oregon sends will be seen by the class of people that Oregon desires to attract.

Representatives of the commission will visit the state fair, also will visit all the district and county fairs in the state this fall. Also in October one or more members of the commission will go to Jamestown and do the best for Oregon that can be done.

President Myers has received letters from the governors of a number of Western states asking for copies of the report which he will make to Governor Chamberlain, which will be sent to the legislatures of these states. It will be seen that Oregon is in the lead in this, and so far is the only Western state which has appointed a provisional commission.

Mr. Myers and the other members of the commission are doing all possible to encourage as many private citizens and firms as possible to send exhibits to Jamestown.

Preparing Final Report.

The members of the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition Commission, appointed by the state of Oregon, are at work preparing a final report to the governor, as required by law. Governor Chamberlain will submit this report to the legislature, and the law provides that it shall be printed.

Jefferson Myers, the president of this commission, was in Salem this morning, and he says the report will soon be ready to send to the governor.

Development the Order of the Day Over on Coos Bay

Mr. W. A. Ackley, merchant tailor, formerly from Elma, Washington, and Mr. P. A. Moss, of Ontonagon, Michigan, who has a stock of electrical supplies here, have purchased the two buildings on Sherman avenue from Mr. Painter. Each of these parties will use this building for his respective business. The sale was consummated through Wood Bros.' real estate agency.

Mr. A. W. Myers, of Spokane, Washington, is expected on the Bay soon to open his new department store at North Bend. The building is nearing completion, and will be ready for Mr. Myers' $75,000 stock by the first of August.

Mr. F. H. Brigham, architect for the Myers block, is preparing plans for Mayor Simpson's $25,000 residence, to be built here this summer.

Wood Bros.' real estate agency recently closed a deal with J. W. Dunn, of Portland, for six lots in the post-office block. The price was $6100.

Outside people are taking great interest in Coos Bay this summer, and especially North Bend, where a great deal of property is changing hands, and many improvements are being made.

Yearly Meeting of Friends' Church.

Newberg, Or., July 7, 1906. The morning business meeting was opened with Bible reading and prayer by Anson Cox, of Caldwell, Idaho. Fraternal epistles from Wilmington and Baltimore yearly meetings were read.

The committee on arranging conferences reported they arranged for and held during the past year two conferences, one at Salem, Oregon, and one at Seattle, Washington. Following the reports of the matters considered at the conferences, Charles Replogle, of Everett, Wash., gave an account of the work of the Friends' church in the state of Washington.

The following changes in the discipline of Oregon Y. M. were made, to-wit:

1. That only active members of the church over the age of 14 years be entitled to a vote in such church business, as is required by the laws of the state under which the church was incorporated.
2. The way of obtaining consent to request for the establishing a monthly meeting was changed.

A proposed change in the article in regard to "divorce" in the present discipline was indefinitely postponed. The proposed amendment would have made the discipline of the church much more strict than it is at present.

The afternoon session was principally devoted to foreign missions. A letter from the missionary at the foreign mission station in Alaska, which is supported by Oregon Friends, was read. Mrs. Anna Moon, who has just returned from the work was present, and gave a short talk on the work.

The main address was given by Chas. Replogle, who was a missionary on Douglas Island, Alaska. The session was very inspiring and helpful.

The Phenomenal Berry.

George Weeks, the well-known dairyman and fruit grower of this county, who has bought a fine farm two miles north of the city, was the first to introduce the Phenomenal berry, a cross between a raspberry and a blackberry, raised by the wizard, Burbank, that promises to surpass in quality and yield and popularity all hitherto known berry varieties. He sold many thousand plants last year, and will have many more. The first crop of fruit this year has pleased all who have tried them, and they have proved all that is claimed for them. They are not as sour as the Logan berry, are devoid of whiskers, have a fine flavor, and bear an immense crop. Mr. Weeks has five acres, and a reporter, who went through the patch last Sunday, found the plantation a very interesting one. Mr. Weeks is not much changed from the time he was running the cow ranch on North Howell prairie, and has a faculty of digging up more work than three ordinary men can do. But such a man is an inspiration to others, being at the same time enterprising and industrious, and keeping up with the scientific and commercial phases of the fruit growing business.

Chairmen of Committees Meet to Audit and Settle All Bills

The chairmen of the several committees which had the Fourth of July celebration in charge met at Zadoc Bigg's drug store last evening, and made their final reports. The report of Mr. Riggs, of the committee on finance, shows the following amounts received:

General subscription	$1160.20
Goddess of Liberty	315.25
One load wood	1.00
Hal Patton, bunting	9.85
Old Fourth of July committee	51.35
Total	$1537.65

Hal Patton, chairman of the committee on comic parade, baby show, etc., reported that $120 was appropriated and he turned $26.14 back to the general fund.

Chauncey Bishop, of the committee on sports, drew $29.50 from the fund; took in $160 from the baseball games, and turned $20.25 back to the treasurer.

Out of an appropriation of $125, L. K. Page, of the committee on decorations, had $5 and a lot of handsome flags left over.

E. C. Dick, Z. J. Riggs and E. T. Barnes were appointed a permanent Fourth of July committee. It will be the duty of this committee to settle the remaining bills that were incurred and to publish a detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures, and to take charge of the money, flags, bunting, etc., that are left over.

WILLAMETTE VALLEY CO. CAN'T GET CARS

Mayor Waters Says no Delay or Compromise Will Be Accepted

(Portland Telegram, July 9.)

If the plans of the Willamette Valley Construction Company do not mis-garry cars of the Oregon Electric Railway Company will be running on the Salem end of the road by September 1st, of this year. Chief Engineer Stewart announced this morning that efforts are being made to secure cars, and if cars can be gotten they will be put into service on the date mentioned.

The line will probably be completed from Salem to Chemawa by the time it is desired to commence operation, and the cars will run over that section. The company had not intended to attempt to operate cars so early, but the Salem people have petitioned for a service for the state fair, and for this reason every effort possible is being put forth to get part of the line in operation by that time.

"Our greatest difficulty now," said Mr. Stewart, "is in securing cars for the line. We will not be able to use our own, because we will not have our power plant in operation that early, and our cars cannot be run by the power which we will secure from the local company. It may be necessary to secure cars fitted with motors suitable to the power available. We cannot secure those here, because the Portland Railway Company's cars are of narrow gauge, and will not fit our tracks. The O. W. P. Company has not enough cars to meet the demand of its own service. Hence we are forced to look elsewhere for what we need. We hope to secure suitable rolling stock in San Francisco or Seattle. If it cannot be secured in either place we will have to secure something from the East that will serve the purpose temporarily."

Mayor Waters Talks.

Mayor Waters was seen in reference to the above, and said there was no intention of the city government to allow delays in the completion of the Willamette Valley Company's line from Chemawa to Salem. "I have notified them that they must put up a new bond, as I do not consider the old bond in good form or satisfactory. I shall not approve the franchise unless they do put up a bond that is as good as wheat, and there will be no temporizing. When this city gives away valuable street privileges, the recipients should show good faith, and use them according to the exact terms of the contract, and if this is not done the franchise should be revoked and the bond sued upon. I believe the people will sustain the administration in compelling one of these corporations to live up to its agreement. It is in the interest of corporate property that they play fair, and not practice deceptions to get privileges they never intend to carry into effect. I have no reason to think that the line will not be built and in permanent operation by September 10th, and there is no good reason why it should not be. It is a small demand on the part of the city."

Another American Invasion.

American slang goes abroad, especially to England, as rapidly as American apples, because the English enjoy its raciness and novelty. But our ambassador, Mr. Reid, warns the English against this most American of literary products, which he condemns as degrading to the old mother tongue. The English will now show their feeling in the matter by welcoming our slang more heartily than ever. Mr. Reid may be shocked but he cannot control the linguistic currents of civilization.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

IMPLEMENT HOUSE

Farm Machinery of all sorts, Vehicles, Bicycles and Sewing Machines, Salem, Oregon.

GETHRO'S LAST WORDS

(Boston Journal.) Representative Frank J. Gethro was expelled from membership in the Massachusetts house of representatives yesterday by a vote of 153 to 54.

Gethro did not wait to hear the inevitable. While the roll call was in progress, which was to declare him guilty of attempting to bribe members, he arose in his seat, and in violation of all precedent, interrupted the roll, to beg, in a strained voice, that he be excused from voting. Then he strode down the aisle toward the door.

The other members watched him furtively as he walked. He stopped near a window and turned and faced the House. Many expected an outbreak, but Gethro, if he had any intention of saying anything, changed his mind.

With white, set face, and trembling lips he watched the proceedings for a moment or two and then turned again toward the door. With bowed head and averted face the doorkeeper awaited his coming. When it was apparent that he intended to leave the doorkeeper gently opened the door, swung it wide and held it. Gethro bowed his head as he passed through the door, and the attendant, with head still turned away, swung the door shut and held it.

There was an audible murmur of relief in the chamber and the look of distress upon the faces of many of the representatives relaxed. Gethro had been on the floor as a member for the last time.

Early in the day's proceedings Gethro made the following statement, vote, was his final word:

"I stand before you," he said, "a man accused of disloyalty to his constituency, accused of a crime, the heinousness of which I now recognize, the crime of the betrayal of the interests of the people confided to me. You are my comrades and associated in the important and essential business of legislation for the people. But you have another relation to me. It is that of brotherhood and fellowship as man to man. I know you all. You know me. I demand at your hands justice. If justice means that you should condemn me, I am content with your verdict. I ask you to be fair with me. I have been attacked in the press of Boston. It has been said that I was indicted by a grand jury of Suffolk county, and this very house was has been accused of having used its influence to secure a reconsideration of that vote for the purpose of exonerating me. I am now addressing you, fellow members, I am charged with the crime of attempting to bribe you. I ought not to fear the outcome. I do not fear it. If there are any men in this house who agreed to be bribed by me they know it as I know it. I sat them here and now to rise in their places and denounce me. We are bound under a solemn covenant to the people who sent us to represent them. I may have been true to my covenant or false—I do not argue it now.

"One thing I ask. Be level. Be square. Do not play the part of the Pharisee or the hypocrite. Vote me out of the house because of facts proven, not because of facts reported by an unfair committee. Damn me for all time if you will but let your verdict be based on conscience and duty. I hope and I want to hope to go on record that when the roll is called among those who vote to ruin me by expulsion or suspension, there will appear only the names of men of blameless life and stainless devotion to the duty which devolves upon each of us. I can only hope that on the roll of those opposed to me there will not appear the names of those who have taken bribes or who have agreed to accept a bribe.

"The penalty of sin, if I have been sinful, I am prepared to undergo. But I am innocent or guilty. If innocent I demand acquittal. If guilty, I demand and exact that the voices of the innocent rather than the voices of the guilty shall convict me.

"Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

Honeymoon Reading.

The house had quieted after the wedding. Mother and Aunt Mary were in the parlor talking it over.

"So it's over," said Aunt Mary, leaning into mother's eyes.

"Yes," said mother bravely, "though a little tearfully, 'it's over' and begun."

"They'll be happy, I'm sure."

"Yes, they are very well suited to each other."

"Very. I could see that. They both have studious habits."

"Yes. But Mary"—mother paused and the gleam of mischief evoked in Aunt Mary's eyes, "Mary, she can't have much sense of humor, though it's my own girl, I say it."

"Why not?"

"Do you know what they took read on their wedding journey? 'Suffolk county's 'Travels With a Donkey'."
