

LISCHEN MILLER ALWAYS SWEET

"Rejoice, O ye children of men for them to whom the gates of death swing open and the physical being heaves beneath the weight of years. Tired souls fret against the no longer welcome bonds of flesh when the fires of youth have burned to ashes, and the worn out brain refuses to record the spirit's vision.

Weep not for them that are free from bondage of mortality. Mourn not for death to them brings freedom and joy. Grieve not when life's candle burns low and the thoughts of the hearts are as a confusion of many waters. For in that hour shall the soul seek its freedom.

Pray then for death and the joy that is born when flesh and spirit are severed.

Weep not, nor stumble, O beloved, when the day which thou hast loved is hid from thine eyes.

As a seed both in the ground and in the air to stem and leaf, to bud and bloom, so lieth the mortal part of man when death sets free the soul, and out of his dust shall arise the life and the rest.

The soul of man, O beloved, was hid with God in the beginning. In Him alone doth it live and move, not in time alone but throughout eternity and the eons upon eons that were before time was.

Rejoice then, O soul, that thou art of God and not of the dust save as all things come and increase was born of one father.

Bring unto thyself the song of being of unity and love. And in thy singing know thyself and the wonder that is thine when thou attainest to thine own.

Have you ever slept out under the stars where the dew of heaven fell on your upturned face and the cool night breeze blows over you softly like the breath of a wandering spirit, from the faroff world? If you have not you have missed one of the joys of human existence and know not the fullness and peace that is born of midnight communion with the glory of the constellations.

There is a hilltop invitingly near my cottage door. It is in spite of its nearness, so remote from the world as if it rose from some lone island of the sea. A green wall of young oaks rim it in and beyond their warm darkness is spread the rippling beauty of the valley's floor with the golden grains and not with houses; to southward rises a lofty crest clothed and crowned with sander, pointed fir.

On warm nights we climb by winding paths to this dear place and spreading our simple couch lie down to rest and pleasant dreams. Sometimes we wake to see the waning moon rise in luminous softness above the shad-owy Cascade range. It is a pale and fading orb, and as it floats dreamily through the silvery night it is like a lovely wreath enveloped in passive sadness.

HARTJE DIVORCE TRIAL

Pittsburg, July 21.—With each succeeding day of the Hartje divorce trial new sensations are developing and Thursday was no exception to the course of events in the famous legal battle. Misses Ida and Helen Scott were the star witnesses today for their state. Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje, Helen's next examination closed when the court adjourned this afternoon, and counsel for the libellant had introduced a number of letters said to have been written by her, which prove, according to the counsel for Mr. Hartje, that Helen Scott had known of the alleged relations between Mrs. Scott and "Tom" Madine. Helen denied the authorship of all of these letters charging them.

Lawyer Accused of Stealing.
John Freeman, attorney for Mrs. Hartje, openly charged the other side with stealing a certain paper from his office. Counsel for Augustus Hartje, the libellant, in the case, declared this false, and J. Scott Ferguson said he could prove that the papers were not taken from Freeman's office but were picked up outside that place, where they had been carelessly laid.

Meek, Freeman and Ferguson became almost beside themselves when the charges of theft were made. A scene of greater excitement has rarely, if ever, been witnessed in a local courtroom. The result of the trouble was apparently a victory for Mrs. Hartje, as W. R. Rogers, attorney for the libellant, was compelled to return Mr. Freeman, by order of the court, a paper prepared in Mr. Freeman's office, as well as another letter of Mr. Freeman's which he said had been taken from his office.

announced that he will go on the stand as a witness for the defense and explain his connection with the case.

Young Duke's First Anniversary.
Gotha, July 19.—Charles Edward, duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who assumed the reigns of government a year ago today upon reaching the age of 21 years, is celebrating the first anniversary of his accession to the throne. There was a military review this morning, followed by a levee, at which the young duke received the congratulations of his court, of delegations from various parts of the duchy, and from representatives of many German and other principalities. This evening the students will celebrate the anniversary with a grand torchlight procession. A state dinner will also be given this evening.

The young duke is the son of Leopold, duke of Albany, and a grandson of our late Queen Victoria and the young consort, Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. He succeeded to his present throne on the death of his uncle, Prince Alfred, duke of Edinburgh, July 30, 1900. The young duke receives $15,000 a year out of the income of the Gotha domain, $25,000 paid into the public exchequer, the rest is divided between the duke and the state. The duke's father receives one-half of the excess of revenue over expenditures from the other domains, about $25,000. About 50,000 people live in the duchy.

used on the line between this city and Turner. It is the intention of this company to fill in the high bridges along the line, placing these pipes to back the water beneath the fill. A steam shovel will aid in the work, which will take some time to complete, as some of these trestles are quite high and it will require a very large quantity of dirt to fill. The work will not commence for a few weeks. —Dayton Courier Press.

Could Not Keep the Log.
J. J. McLaughlin, proprietor of the Cyren cigar store, who is rustling at Gate Creek, on the McKenzie, is laid up in camp with a badly sprained back. He was standing on a log fishing and got a nibble which so excited him that he fell a distance of seven feet, striking on his back among the boulders.

An eye witness claims Jay was screaming about baseball, muttering that he would "make a home run and win the Springfield bench." He was seen to swing his fish pole at an imaginary sphere, and tumbled off the log in a heap. —Eugene Register.

Human Bones as a Fertilizer.
Down in Mexico when people have been buried long enough they dig up the bones and sell them for fertilizer. At Guadalajara the other day the bones of 117 men, 123 women, 83 boys and 85 girls were taken from the graves of the municipal cemetery, some on the ground having expired. The bones were stacked in a corner of the cemetery, and will be sold to a purchaser from the United States to be made over into fertilizer. Many cartons of human bones are shipped out of Mexico annually for this purpose, thus relieving the overcrowded condition of the cemetery.

American Not Discontinued.

In order to set at rest the many rumors regarding the American and its future we will announce to the public that it is not the intention to discontinue its publication. The whole thing tersely put is that the present published equipped the shop too extensively for the volume of trade now enjoyed and consequently finds it too his interest to dispose of some of the heavier machinery, but the American will continue publication for a long time yet, if not under the management of the present publisher, then under that of an experienced journalist of ability. —Blue Mountain American.

Wedding Pearls Mean Tears.
(Boston Transcript.)
Princess Ema, now Queen Victoria of Spain, wore pearls on her wedding day. She made a great mistake. Pearls worn at a wedding means tears are to be shed through the married state, so runs the Spanish proverb.

When the Empress Eugenie was finishing her toilet to go to Notre Dame, on her wedding morning, an old Spanish servant of hers burst into tears, and, reminding her of the native adage, begged her not to wear her pearl necklace. Eugenie, paying no heed to the warning, wore the necklace all the same and her life, as all the world knows, has been one long tragedy. Her necklace was a remarkable one, consisting of a large number of pearls, so the bride who only wears a few need not dread the proverb so much, for, after all, no woman's life is entirely free from tears.

A Tragic Finish.
A watchman's neglect permitted a leak in the great North Sea dyke, which a child's finger could have stopped, to become a ransom break, devastating an entire province of Holland. In like manner Kenneth Milver, of Vancouver, B. C., permitted a little cold to go unnoticed until a tragic finish was only averted by Dr. King's New Discovery. He writes: "Three doctors gave me up to die of lung inflammation, caused by a neglected cold; but Dr. King's New Discovery saved my life." Guaranteed best cough and cold cure, at J. C. Perry's drug store. 40c and $1.00 trial bottle free.

Klamath Is Booming.
Klamath promises now to be one of the big and populous parts of Oregon. Lying a desert waste since the world began it will now make happy homes for men in which to be the civilization of all the ages. The campaign of irrigation now on foot, but the lack of irrigation through modern science and stationery, may be said to have the aid and the new of earth's resources. Stripping slowly beneath a burning sun these vast plains will awake to a realization, the like of which is scarcely pictured in dreams.

Only 21 Years Old.
"I am only 21 years old and don't expect ever when I get to be 200 old to feel that way as long as I can get Hewitt's Bitters," says Mrs. E. E. Brewster, of Dublin, Va. Surely there's nothing who keeps the old as young and makes the weak as strong as this great tonic medicine. Dyspepsia, neuralgic, inflamed kidneys or chronic constipation are unknown after taking Hewitt's Bitters a reasonable time. Guaranteed by J. C. Perry, Druggist, Prince St.

"Other Mary" and Tom Madine.

The "Other Mary," a servant girl who knows Tom Madine, the correspondent, made her first appearance on the stand today. She testified that it was she who telephoned to Madine, while he was working at a livery stable and who wrote to him sometimes as often as twice a week. The letter alleged to have been stolen from Mr. Freeman's office along with other papers is said to have begun with "My Dear Mr. Madine" and Judge Fryer's announcement that any stolen papers would have but very little influence on the court broke a terse strain of curiosity in the courtroom that had been whetted to a fine edge. Just what is in the "Bills" letter and what the Scott had to do with it may remain a mystery.

Letters to Prove Intimacy.

Toward the close of the examination of Miss Helen Scott, Mr. Rogers sprang a surprise upon the attorneys for the defense by producing a number of undated letters, the parts of which had been pasted together. The letters were written upon the stationery of the hotel Winkler and the Florence Villa, and were addressed to "Dear Mrs. Mary." Witness admitted that several of the new exhibits had been written by her self, but denied the authorship of the others, although she said the handwriting looked like hers. Mr. Freeman started to his feet and objected to their being introduced upon reduced examination.

Mr. Rogers then stated that his object in producing them was to show that, outside her previous denials in the witness stand, the witness had shown that Mrs. Hartje and Tom Madine had been in correspondence with each other, and that the letters could show the truth of his statement. The court was then adjourned in order that the counsel for the defense might have an opportunity of examining the new exhibits. This was said to be the substance of what the district for the prosecution have all along promised.

E. Her's Stronous Denial.

During the course of her examination Miss Scott was asked by Mr. Freeman whether or not she had written in good faith the alleged letters to Mrs. Hartje, a statement that she Mrs. Hartje and Tom would not say to her and wife, but that they would have to wait for some time. She strenuously denied the statement.

Miss Scott was shown the letters filed in the case and picked out a number of the number of having been written or transcribed bearing either to herself or one of her sisters. She said the name Annie Lane had been given this kind of letter paper and that she would believe quite frequently. The testimony caused a sensation, and the plaintiff's attorney followed with a working cross-examination to break the effect.

John L. Watson, who is now under $2000 bail on the charge of conspiring with Augustus Hartje, the plaintiff, and Clifford Ross, the representative, to defame the character of Mrs. Hartje

Hibernians to Elect Officers.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 19.—The biennial national convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians is drawing to a close. Today will be principally devoted to business. It is expected that the election of officers will take place this afternoon, and perhaps the time and place of the next biennial convention will be decided. The present national officers are: president, James E. Dolan, New York; vice president, James Sullivan, Philadelphia; secretary, James P. Carroll, Columbus; treasurer, P. O'Brien, Richmond, Ind.; national directors, J. T. Henneberry, Butte, Mont.; John P. Keating, Chicago; P. D. Farrell, Grand Rapids; George J. Butler, Louisville.

The Massachusetts delegates have started a very promising boom in favor of the election of the Massachusetts state president, Matthew Cummins of Boston, for national president. He has many friends throughout the country and it is probable that he will be elected in recognition of his valuable services in helping it about that the study of Irish history was introduced into public and parochial schools in Massachusetts, Pittsburg and Cannon delegates are working hard to secure votes for the selection of their respective cities as the place for the next convention of the order. This evening the grand banquet by the local lodge to the visiting delegates will take place. Many interesting addresses are on the program for the evening.

Costly Bags.

A New York newspaper recently printed an editorial entitled "costly success," which editorial referred to the appropriations by congress of $100,000 for the distribution of parasiticide insects to be used on the war on gypsy moths. R. S. Rowland, a member of the New York Audubon Society, writing to the New York paper, says: "In conclusion you say that there are two ways to combat these insects, spraying and the use of parasites. There is another check, equally natural and probably much more effective. If a little more attention were devoted to the adequate protection of our native birds hundreds of thousands of dollars would be saved in agriculture and horticulture. Out of some thousands of birds native to North America scores a half dozen have proved to be important instead of beautiful. The cuckoo, warblers, chickadees and many other of our common birds have been proved to be invaluable as destroyers of gypsy moth. The non-protected ground has great numbers of the potato beetles and the scales are attacked more severely by the various parasites. To protect our native birds means nothing, and it cannot fail to give marked results to the country's food production."

Returns from 4700 Sheep.

The Malheur Livestock & Land company has received returns on a shipment of 17 cars of sheep just marketed in Chicago. The net price realized ranged from $4.40 to $4.74 a head. Three cars brought the latter figure. Mr. O'Neil says last year the top price realized by the same company was $4.20. A car of sheep contains 200 head, and at these prices such a shipment realized a handsome sum. —Rising Statesman.
