

"GIVE BOSSY A CHANCE," THE MOTTO

Willamette Valley Dairymen Held an Interesting Meeting Saturday Which Was Addressed by Professor McKay, Dr. Withycombe and Others

"Give Bossy a chance, give her careful attention," was the motto of the dairymen assembled in the city hall Saturday afternoon.

The meeting was called to order by J. R. Shepard, of the Salem creamery, and George W. Weeks was chosen chairman of the meeting. The first speaker was Professor McKay of the Iowa State Agricultural College at Ames. The Iowaan said he was astonished at the tremendous growth of forage plants in the Willamette Valley. He believes that the people of the valley have not as yet realized the wonderful adaptability of our climate to the dairying industry, and for stock raising. Iowa exports $3,000,000 worth of butter annually but here in Oregon dairy products according to Professor McKay, can be produced with less expense.

"Oregon should not import butter but should supply your home market, Alaska and the Orient," said he. Energy is one of the real assets of the dairymen, but with it must come the intelligent breeding of stock. "For practical dairying I do not recommend full blooded stock, but rather good selection of your herds," said he. "Feed your cows all they will consume." The successful and intelligent dairymen should give particular attention to his herd and care for his animals. In breeding it is well to arrange so as to have the cows fresh in the fall. This method has a tendency to make the calves ready to go to grass in the spring and to make the cows give 25 per cent more milk.

Dr. James Withycombe, of the Oregon Agricultural College said that it was encouraging to those interested in dairying to have such men as Professor McKay come across the continent to give us his ideas and to hear his views on the dairy outlook in Oregon. "The well bred farm cow never fails to yield her regular monthly stipend. The dairy cow, as I have said before, is the wet nurse of prosperity in Oregon. The basic wealth of our state is agriculture. Dairying within the next few years will have become Oregon's greatest industry. We have as yet no conception of the possibility the Willamette Valley offers as a dairying center. When we think of Holland and Jersey; when we see little farms producing cows profitably, then we begin to appreciate what can be accomplished here in Oregon where conditions for dairying are almost ideal." He predicted the time was not far distant when the waters of the Willamette would be used to irrigate during July and August, and that the large farms would be sub-divided.

Speaking of fodder for dairy cows, he said: "We do not need to depend on alfalfa alone, there is the vetch which gives an excellent feed; corn, too, can be raised here to advantage." He spoke of the work at the Agricultural College experiment station and explained how 30 tons of green feed had been raised on an acre of what is termed "poor white land."

State Dairy and Food Commissioner Bailey made a few remarks and explained how the interest in the dairy industry was started in Oregon through the efforts of the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Agricultural College. He made a plea for diversified farming and stated that raising wheat is no longer a paying industry. He volunteered the assistance of his office to any farmer.

Justice Thomas G. Halley made one of his characteristic talks on "The Cow as a Machine." "When you buy a machine you try to keep it in good condition and do not neglect it. You clean it, oil it and keep it under shelter in bad weather. Why not show the same care to your cow—she is a God-made machine." The judge favored the starting of a crusade in behalf of the cow. He is of the opinion that a cow should be fed good, nutritious food, not the leavings that the farmer has left after feeding his horses. With the dairy industry should follow the fattening and raising of hogs for market. He suggested a motto to be placed over the door of every barn—A. C. H.—alfalfa, corn, hogs. He advised farmers to read dairy literature and farm journals and to keep well informed on farm and dairy questions.

M. Mortensen, of the Hazelwood Creamery, said: "Oregon dairymen take better care of their milk than any other dairymen I know. Cleanliness is the motto of the up-to-date dairymen. Keep your milking utensils clean, especially the separator. Do not be deceived by the agents of certain separators who tell you their machine does not have to be clean. By keeping the dairying utensils clean you have removed a large number of the germs that otherwise would pollute the milk." He briefly referred to the dairying condition in Denmark where schools are conducted to teach boys and girls how to milk properly. His remarks were of a practical nature.

The last address was made by H. E. Lounsbury, of the Southern Pacific, who expressed much pleasure at seeing such goodly attendance at this particular busy time in the life of the farmer and dairymen.

"I would like to draw a comparison," said Mr. Lounsbury, "between the resources of Marion county in this state and Linn county in Iowa. Marion county has a larger area than Linn county and this county's resources are perhaps more varied. Linn county has 430,000 acres which are divided into 3567 farms, valued at $19,000,000, with a population of 60,000 people as compared with 390,000 acres divided into 2750 farms which are valued at $19,887,000, and the population 30,000 people in Marion county. Marion county excels all other counties in the production of hops and prunes, and probably in producing cherries and berries, and should be the first county in the Willamette Valley in the dairy pursuit. I believe that the principal resource or industry of this county in the course of a few years will be dairying, because, as has been stated, the conditions are ideal."

At the close of the addresses the dairymen present asked questions on different phases of the dairy industry which were answered by Professor McKay and Dr. Withycombe. One of the points brought out was that the 100 headed cabbage which can be cut green all winter long is an effective food.

Says the Nigger Lied.
Pittsburg, Pa., July 23.—Attorney Stanton, representing Hooe, the negro coachman, announced in court this morning that when the Hartje case was called that he had quit Hooe, because the negro lied to him so much that he couldn't place a bit of reliance in any of his statements. The attorneys for the defense rested, and rebuttal testimony is being taken.

The new management of the Hotel Salem is making extensive repairs to the hostelry. Some of the rooms have been entirely renovated, others partially so. The roof is being painted, and the carpenters are still busy making changes in the appointments of the hotel.

Professor J. H. Ackerman, state superintendent of public instruction, returned home yesterday from California, where he had been delivering a course of lectures at the University Normal school at Berkeley.

EVANS WAS NOT AFRAID

Blood-Curdling Notice to Quit City Has No Terrors for Mission Preacher

The Rev. U. G. Evans, the pastor of one of the rival flocks of religionists who composed the pentecostal mission, has been back to Salem, notwithstanding the blood-curdling message that was posted on his door warning him to keep away from Salem at the peril of his life.

Moreover, he says, he has ascertained the author of the warning. He said that an old man, who was angered by some of the happenings in which Evans was said to have figured, came to him and confessed that he was the culprit.

The Rev. Mr. Evans said that he at first thought the notice to "vamoose" was given by a rival in love, but the confession of another man has caused him to change his mind.

Mr. Evans says he is little disturbed by the recent split in the church of his choice, but says he is coming back to Salem, and will erect a building here.

PRISON GETTING EMPTY

Ed Morgan escaped from the road gang at Sublimity Saturday while at work with the convict gang on the rock crusher. Morgan was serving a three year term from Josephine county for larceny. H. A. Schmidt escaped from the same place at the same time. He was also a short term man and had but a few months to serve.

Leon Harant escaped from the gang at work at the state fair grounds Saturday. He walked away so quietly that persons who saw him supposed that he had been sent away on an errand by the guards. During the present season, seven prisoners have escaped from the penitentiary road gangs, and all of them are still at large. These escapes are from a gang of about 60 prisoners.

J. S. Cooper, a prominent hop grower from Independence, was in the city today. He stated that the buyers in that neighborhood have offered as high as 13 1/2 cents per pound for this year's crop, but none came to sell at that price. He is of the opinion that the 1906 crop will be less than at first anticipated. Mr. Cooper has two yards that will probably yield 100,000 pounds. Levi Herren, of Turner, was in the city today. He came to Oregon in 1845 and to Salem in 1846. Then there were several prominent buildings where the city now stands. There was
