KNOCK OUT THE EXEMPTION

The householders exemption of three hundred dollars has been knocked out by a close and rigorous construction of a constitution drawn over fifty years ago.

Some non-resident taxpayers in New Hampshire brought the suit and got the Oregon supreme court to apply the principle of non-exemption in the interest of the non-resident.

If the fact were dug up and made to appear THIS LITIGATION WAS THE WORK OF OREGON TAX-DODGERS, who by knocking out the exemptions of the little fellows get relief for themselves by paying less taxes.

The plan to tax everything at its true cash value is part of the program to CATCH THE LITTLE FELLOWS WHO CANNOT HIDE THEIR PROPERTY AND WHOSE WEALTH IS ALL OUT IN PLAIN SIGHT.

Those unfortunate New Hampshire capitalists who have large holdings in Oregon mortgages were afraid some little fellow struggling to get a roof over his head and support his large family would not be taxed.

As a constitutional convention has been prohibited, the only hope the people can have lies in the prospect of getting Mr. U'Ren to draw up a proper amendment allowing some little exemption if it is thought best.

Under this decision the furniture, the bedding, the hog, sheep, calf, cow and dog OF THE LABORING MAN AND WIDOW WILL BECOME ASSESSABLE AN CAN BE TAKEN FOR TAXES.

A progressive income tax originating with New Hampshire capitalistic influences, that would relieve all the small home owners, may now be looked for.

Of course, the relics of barbarism in the old Oregon constitution, such as forbidding free negroes in the state, and taking a delicate woman's bed from under her for taxes, will remain.

There should be no exemption for the poor and unfortunate. THEY ARE THE PEOPLE WHO VOTE AND TOIL AND WHO RAISE FAMILIES. The bank director class don't raise many children.

Illinois, Weekly Times. PEKIN IS A FLOURISHING CIVILIZED CITY IN A PROSPEROUS FARMING COUNTY of the benighted state of Illinois, but the people seem contented.

Of course, they are prosperous, but they have very harsh, barbarous and unfeeling taxation laws. They publish the assessments there.

Before equalization, the real estate and the personal property of every person who has anything is printed by precincts in separate lists.

This shows how much a man gives in his property for and discloses the methods and doings of that highly respected class, the tax-dodgers.

THE PRINCIPAL FIGHT ON THE WILLAMETTE VALLEY TAX BILL, was that it contained this feature of the law that has been in force in Illinois.

Of course, it catches the big fellows. They shine with their lands and mortgages and brick blocks and fine residences and stocks and bonds.

But it also catches another class as is shown by this extract from the paper before us:

Ripper, Geo. T. $263.00 Ripper, Henry 485.00 Ripper, Geo. G. 40.00 Ripper, Ph. B. 85.00 Ripper, Carl 193.00 Ripper, Ph. A. 82.00 Ripper, John 192.00 Ripper, Peter G. 165.00

The Ripper family are not in the real estate list. IT IS REMARKABLE THAT MORE PEOPLE APPEAR IN THE PERSONAL LIST THAN IN THE REALTY LIST.

It would be interesting to secure publication of the assessment of last year, and in a parallel column show the assessment this year, when all is supposed to be assessed at its cash value.

The comparison would show the relative increase in values and would reveal who has been escaping in the past. But no such law will be allowed.

NEARLY CUT IN TWO BOY STILL LIVES

Victor Hageman's Body Placed in Plaster Cast—Patient's Will Power Aids in Making Good Fight for Life.

The Seattle Times of Wednesday says: With his body, which was almost cut in half by a buzz saw, enclosed in a plaster cast, Victor Hageman, the young Ballard shingle weaver who fell on a slipper saw at the mill of the Seattle Cedar Lumber company yesterday, is making a strong fight for his life, with the prospects are good for his winning. Perfectly conscious through all his terrible experience, he says he is determined that the job which was only half done shall not be completed.

This remarkable manifestation of a will power under such trying conditions has caused the attending surgeons to marvel and wonder and to express a confidence that has a good fighting chance and may recover.

The saw had cut through the skin and flesh for a distance of sixteen inches along the right side. Three ribs were cut in oblique manner, as the sharp teeth plowed through in search of the vital organs. The lungs and the liver were exposed, while the right lung arose to the upper part of the chest cavity. Not any of the organs were cut and to this the present condition of the victim is largely responsible. His movements while on the saw caused the wound to assume a width sufficient to admit both hands of the surgeon laid edge wise.

At the Ballard hospital yesterday the parts were brought together and stitched up. He passed a very comfortable night and this morning the body was enclosed in a plaster cast. The absence of hemorrhages, which it was feared would develop during the night, along with the determination of the patient to recover, makes his chances for an ultimate recovery very good.

Cheerfully Recommended for Rheumatism.

O. G. Higbee, Danville, Ill., writes, Dec. 2, 1901: "About two years ago I was laid up for four months, with rheumatism. I tried Ballard's Snow Liniment; one bottle cured me. I can cheerfully recommend it to all suffering from like affection. 25c, 50c and $1. For sale by D. J. Fry.

NOT ON YOUR LIFE

The Horse Editor Kicks at the Idea-But Oh! What's the Use

A San Francisco dispatch of July 26 says that any woman in San Francisco who professes to wearing a No. 8 shoe can have as many pairs as she needs by applying at the relief warehouse. Fourteen hundred pairs of shoes, all No. 8, are lying in that warehouse waiting to be carried away by refugees. They were sent to San Francisco from Chicago, where, according to ancient tradition, a No. 8 shoe is reckoned dainty.

In the same depository for relief supplies are hundred of dozen of suits of dolls' underwear sent by kind-hearted people to relieve the distress of San Francisco. It is nice underwear, apparently. The skirts are about six inches long and you can stretch them until they are a foot wide. They are mostly all low-neck shirts.

In the relief warehouse are also 4000 golf suits, contributed by some tenderhearted devotee of the crooked stick and checked ball, who could not think of seismic disturbance and wholesale conflagration depriving the population of the pleasures of the game, and his (or her) esthetic soul rebelled at the thought of the glorious game of Scotland being played in other than fitting attire. Such a profusion of warm colors had never been seen here since the days of the dons and their bull fights.

But the suits are here—4000 of 'em—complete from feathered headpiece to abbreviated trousers, and those fuzzy stocking (what's the Scotch for 'em?) which make a bank clerk's calf look like a football player's.

The distribution of them was planned, but the refugees didn't take kindly to kilts.

Baseball Players and Foot Racers!

Louis J. Kruger, ex-champion long distance foot racer of Germany and Holland, writes, October 27, 1901: "During my training of eight weeks' foot races at Salt Lake City, in April last, I used Ballard's Snow Liniment to my greatest satisfaction. Therefore, I highly recommend Snow Liniment to all who are troubled with sprains, bruises or rheumatism." 35c, 50c and $1. Sold by D. J. Fry.

A Hungarian View.

The quality of womanliness is denied the American woman by Dr. Emil Reich, the Hungarian philosopher and sometime professor at a Cincinnati college, who has been expounding platonism and things to smart audiences in London's Mayfair.

Dr. Reich criticises the feminine American ungalantly in an article in London Opinion. Here are some of his arguments:

"Not only is the American woman not womanly, in the sense in which all nations in Europe understand this word, but she cannot possibly be womanly. The role, the necessary role, she plays in the states renders it indispensable that her fiber of womanliness be blunted and coarsened at an early date. Having in youth been educated with men, having seen of them far too much at a time when first impressions are strongest, she soon gets inevitably tired of men.

"There is no romance between the American young girl and young man; protracted familiarity has long undermined all possible romance. There is satiety on both sides, but more especially on the part of the girl. When she is 20 she is radically cured of all real interest in men. When she is 20 man is more or less a hateful sight to her. She simply does not care for him.

As to Veils.

The veil occupies such an important place in the well-dressed woman's toilette that the demand for new ideas is constant. At present the brown lace veil is prominent. First we had the bandeau of brown tulle, no matter what the shade of the hat, and now we behold the brown lace veil worn over blue, green or even white hats. This veil is worn loosely, but is never thrown back over the hat like a chiffon veil. An attempt was made to introduce other lace veils in colors to match the costume, but the brown one alone has survived.

VENISON SECRET OF AGE

Grants Pass, Ore.—Deer meat, outdoor air and plenty of work and sleep are the things that have made it possible for William Ferren, the "Chetco packer," to reach the ripe old age of 100 years.

This month Mr. Ferren came down from his mountain cabin in the wilds of the Chetco country to visit relatives here and to celebrate his 100th anniversary. With him came his pack train of ponies and the old packer loaded them, placing the packs and throwing on the sacks of flour and grain as adeptly and easily as a man of 40.

He is the oldest packer left in the west, and he has been hitting the trail regularly for the past 55 years. Over a half century ago Ferren and his pony carried in supplies to the miners of Chetco from Crescent City. For the past 25 years, or since the coming of the railroad, the source of supply has changed and he makes his trips to and from this city instead of from the coast.

Despite his 100 years, Ferren is still straight of back and light of foot. He thinks nothing of a 35 or 40-mile tramp in a single day over a rough mountain trail and there are few young men who can cover more ground on "one shift" than he. "There is no secret to it," the old packer declares. "Let any man eat as much deer meat as I eat, sleep as much as I sleep, and work as much and as hard as I work, and he will live to be as old as I." The old man is a great believer in venison as a health-giving food, and he has always lived in the mountains where he could always find a deer when his meat supply got low. He also believes in always going to bed tired, sleeping in the open air and near the ground, "where the medicine is."

Ferren is a small, wiry man. He has a long flowing beard and a head of heavy hair. His steel gray eyes are as keen as those of a boy, and still hold the sparkle and merriment of youth. He says he does not feel old, and never intends to feel that way; that he has reached the age of 100 without any trouble, and that he sees no reason why he should not live 20 years more, and he feels sure he will live that long if the deer are not all exterminated. The old packer only kills a deer when he is in need of meat and declares that if every one had done this there would have been venison for all and people would have lived longer as a consequence.
