

FOREST FIRES SUBDUED

Flames in the Cascades Under Control and no Further Spread Anticipated

The fierce forest fires in the Cascade mountains, along the waters of the Santiam river, in Marion and Linn counties, have been subdued. There seems to be no longer any danger of the flames extending into new and unburnt timber.

The men who went to the scene of the fire from the sawmills have all returned to work, and the fire is now being guarded by a force of men from the logging camps of the Curtis Lumber Company.

Good rains fell Saturday night and Sunday, and these helped to subdue the raging fires.

The fire has destroyed about 2000 acres of very fine timber in the Cascade mountains, the greater part of it being in the timber reserve.

The expense of fighting the flames after they crossed into the reserve is borne by the federal government, and the men who were at work there have given their time to the forest ranger for the district, who will certify it to Washington, when payment will be made. Some of the men who came down from the mountain after the fire were rather dissatisfied with that arrangement, as they did not wish to wait long for their pay.

Salem Boys Visit Caves.

Newport, Aug. 31.—Mac and Lawrence Hofer and two young men from Portland have just returned from exploring the caves near Rock Creek on the coast north of Yaquina Bay, and about eight miles from Siletz Bay. The rock promontory there is far wilder and more picturesque than at Seal Rocks, and the black lavatic cones tower up like pyramids and church spires, and there are caverns in behind them such as pirates haunt and are described in Robert Louis Stevenson's most fantastic fiction. There are caves as large as houses, that the boys explored. The walls of these caves are worn perfectly smooth, caused by drift wood getting into them and being tossed about by the waves, grinding off all the rough places. In all the caves visited only one person had inscribed initials, and that was so long ago as to be almost invisible. The caves are unnamed, and have not been much visited or described. Another expedition is planned during this month. To go one must stay over night, and there is not a sign of habitation on that part of the coast.

Of Interest to Sick People.

We have all the sympathy in the world for sick people, and want to treat them in a serious way. There is no humor in pain and affliction, but hard earnest fact. It is impossible for the patient to impress on others the extent of suffering they endure, and their anxiety for relief. To get well or be relieved is their one thought. Any remedy that will bring this about has their everlasting gratitude. We have thousands of letters from people who have had dyspepsia, sick headache and bilious attacks, who tell us how thankful they were for having used Dr. Gunn's Improved Liver Pills. They are sold at all drug stores for 25c per box. Only one for a dose. These pills remove the cause of disease and make the skin clear and healthy looking.

MRS. HINGES WILL SING.

Other Attractions Engaged for the Coming State Fair.

President W. H. Downing, of the State Board of Agriculture, is in the city today, after a week's strenuous labor in the harvest field. He is rejoicing over the great crops, and is also rejoicing over the greatness of the fair that will be held this fall, and President Downing realizes that it will be difficult to make as good an impression with the state fair this year, following upon the heels of the great Lewis and Clark fair, but he says the board proposes to make greater efforts than ever before to give the people of Oregon what will be the largest and most attractive and entertaining state fair ever held in the state.

As one of the crowning attractions for the evening entertainment, the board has just closed a contract with Mrs. Hallie Parrish-Hinges to sing a number of her most popular songs each evening. This will be the first real opportunity for the public to hear Mrs. Hinges since she has returned from her studies in the East. She has always been recognized as Oregon's greatest singer, but it is now conceded that her work is far superior than ever.

Among other attractions are little Emily Lindsay-Squier, the juvenile impersonator, who did some superb work at the state fair last year, and who has the reputation throughout the length and breadth of the land as the greatest child elocutionist living. She will appear every evening at the pavilion.

The Rose City quartet, of Portland, recognized as the best in the West, has also been engaged. This quartet has been heard in Salem, and made a great impression on the people. They will render a very popular part of the evenings' programs.

The different exhibits are coming in freely, and all these different signs of the times point to the greatest fair ever given.

Divorce Mill Grinds.

Two more divorces were granted this morning by Judge Galloway. This docket, in the number of actions for divorces, is a record-breaker. The docket entries made this morning are as follows:

In the case of Adolph Wolfe & Son, et al., against T. A. Livesley & Co., et al., an injunction suit, the demurrer and motion to dissolve the injunction was argued in part, and continued until tomorrow.

Laying Crushed Rock.

The laying of the crushed rock on the "object lesson road," conducted near the fair grounds by the government experts, began at 9 o'clock this morning, and by the noon hour 40 rods of crushed rock had been put down. Eleven convicts are assisting in the laying of the crushed rock.

Restores the bile more fluid, and thus helps the blood to flow. It affords prompt relief from biliousness, indigestion, sick and nervous headaches, and over-indulgence in food and drink.

G. L. Caldwell, Agt. M. K. and T. R. R., Checotah, Ind. Ter., writes, April 18, 1903: "I was sick for over two years with enlargement of the liver and spleen, and I had given up all hope of being cured, when my druggist advised me to use Herbina. It has made me sound and well." 50c. For sale by D. J. Fry.

NEWS FOR DIVORCEES

Supreme Court Decision Not so Sweeping as Was First Supposed.

The decision of the supreme court in the case of Haddock against Haddock which, recently made public, scared many people who had been parties in divorce proceedings, is not as sweeping as at first declared, according to the assertion of Judge Gantenbein of the circuit court this morning.

It was reported locally that by the decision of the supreme court a divorce secured in a state other than the one in which the marital domicile was and in which service on the defendant had been made by publication instead of in person would be recognized only in the state in which the divorce was granted. Judge Gantenbein declares that such a divorce would undoubtedly be recognized in all the states except New York, Pennsylvania and South Carolina.

The recent supreme court decision is the case of Haddock against Haddock is not as sweeping as was generally supposed," said the judge this morning. "The courts of all the states except New York, Pennsylvania and South Carolina have been accustomed, as a matter of comity, or judicial courtesy, to give full faith and credit to the decrees of the courts of other states in divorce proceedings, although service may have been made on the defendant by publication of the summons, and the marital domicile not in the state where the divorce was granted."

"The supreme court of the United States in its decision particularly specifies that the courts may continue to recognize the divorce decrees of courts of other states, and in all probability the courts of all the states except the three mentioned will continue to do so."

The decision of the supreme court in the Haddock case was that the New York courts could not be compelled to recognize a divorce granted in a Connecticut court where service had been made by publication. The court reached this opinion by a bare majority, standing 5 to 4.

"Supposed a man and wife lived in New York," continued Judge Gantenbein, and the wife went to Ohio and began a suit for divorce in which service on the husband was had by the publication of a notice in the newspapers. The divorce, if granted, would be recognized not only in Ohio, but in every other state in the union except New York, Pennsylvania and South Carolina.

"But if either the husband or wife were to remarry in any of these three states, they would be liable to prosecution for bigamy. In all the other states the validity of the divorce would not be questioned."

A divorce cannot be obtained on any ground in South Carolina. In New York divorces are granted for infidelity only. Pennsylvania allows a little more ground for divorce, but ranks third in the severity of its divorce laws.

Wilbur Larremore, writing on this subject, says in the July number of the North American Review:

"It does not seem likely that the decision of the supreme court in the Haddock case will make any substantial change in legal policies. Its main purport is to sanction the continuation of their own policies by New York and other eccentric states."

"Those states that have proceeded under the federal constitution in recognizing foreign divorces are now released from that position, but it seems not improbable that they will incline toward adhering to the former result through comity, especially as the majority opinion of the supreme court of the United States pointedly leaves the way open on that ground."

That the United States supreme court may reverse its decision after a change of personnel is thought probable by Mr. Larremore. If the decision is reversed it would mean that the courts of all the states would be compelled to recognize the divorce decrees of every other state, regardless of how service of the suit was made or on what grounds the divorce was granted.
