DOING THINGS FOR SALEM.

The Capital Journal is proud that after seventeen years of waiting there is to be an electric line to the Salem Indian school at Chemawa.

THAT LINE SHOULD HAVE BEEN CONSTRUCTED TEN YEARS AGO, in the business interests of the city, but no one seemed to be willing to take hold of it and push.

At present there are about one hundred men and teams at work pushing the line through to Chemawa. The indications are that the cars will be running by September 10th.

That will be according to the contract. The company deserves credit for trying to perform its part. It secured a valuable franchise on the strength of its pledge.

The Journal believes in doing things for Salem. A newspaper is compelled to TAKE A STAND FOR THE PUBLIC INTEREST AT ALL TIMES, and not to be a mere drag on the business of the town.

The Journal has a consistent record for doing things for Salem of which it is proud. But it is always ready to EXPOSE HOT-AIR AND SPECTATIVE ENTERPRISES FOR GRAFT ONLY.

It believes no obstacles should be thrown in the way of any transportation enterprise that wants to come into the city, but the interests of the people should be made paramount.

CUMMINS IS COMING.

Governor Cummins of Iowa is thus endorsed by the Portland Journal: The success of Cummins in Iowa means much. It is extremely significant. He stands for something. He is the La Follette of the great corn state.

Well, what, outside of an office, does he "stand for?"

Tariff revision. Proper taxation of railroads. Honesty and decency in political life.

Executive ability, fearless and free. All these things, and more, Cummins stands for and represents.

He is one of the coming men. Watch them.

The country needs and demands something else than egg-walkers—men who never have an idea, and if they have, don't dare to express it.

The La Follettes and Cummins are coming to the front.

Men who in public life are able and willing to help their fellow men! Men who dare to be honest and true!

Watch such men. It's interesting, and important.

GREAT ELECTRIC BUILDER.

H. E. Huntington is said to be interested in the Willamette valley electric lines.

He will make no mistake in entering one of the richest and most undeveloped fields in the United States.

The valley is being covered with surveys and projects, but the real builder and exploiter has not yet appeared.

Ralph D. Paine in "The Builders," in The Outing Magazine for August, says this of Huntington:

As Los Angeles pictures the expanding Americanism of this century, so H. E. Huntington, the man who has led in its promotion, is a type of the American builder of today and as he has driven his electric roads through the heart of Santa Anita ranch, so he is everywhere in his part of the country infusing old conditions with the new spirit of progress.

There has been nothing of the bizarre or spectacular about his program of expansion. A trained railway man, schooled by his uncle, C. P. Huntington, he has swung his energy away from the steam road, to become the foremost promoter of the electric trolley as a means of developing and exploiting natural resources. He has made all the towns of southern California near neighbors of Los Angeles, and this task has been accomplished in less than ten years. First came the purchase of existing lines, then consolidation and reorganization, and after that rebuilding and new construction until within the city limits of Los Angeles alone there are two hundred miles of trolley tracks. Now you can whirl out into the country over standard gauge, double-track lines operated by automatic signal systems, at express speed.

SOME AMERICAN STATISTICS

(Pendleton East Oregonian.) The fiscal year of 1905-6 has ended and from the seat of government at Washington comes rolling in a flood of statistical matter touching the commercial record which has been made, which is not only beyond the dreams of the fathers, but calculated as well to stagger the imagination of the present generation.

The commerce of the United States for the year just closed is represented by the following figures—$3,000,000,000.

This means capita export and import business of $33 for every man, woman and child in the United States.

The commerce of the year increased $330,000,000 over that of the year preceding.

In other words, the value of our annual commerce has doubled in 10 years.

But what is more important still is that American exports have exceeded American imports by more than $500,000,000—the balance of trade in our favor.

While economic theorists have been fitting from one Chautauqua platform to another and pleading for such changes in the law as would permit the enlargement of "the markets of the world," the total export of American manufactures aggregates $600,000,000—which is an increase of $57,000,000 over the preceding year, and an increase of $370,000,000 over the record made 10 years ago.

Forty years ago the total value of manufactures exported was only $31,000,000.

During the year just closed the value of breadstuffs, provisions, cotton and mineral oil exported amounted to $899,878,504—a gain of $139,118,750 in one year.

Ponder over these figures carefully and you will no longer wonder why everybody is busy who cares to be.

TWENTIETH CENTURY PROVERBS.

It is easier to find a wife than to lose one.

The reason why people always like babies and kittens is that they always act naturally.

The great trouble of practicing what you preach is that it is so easy to get out of practice.

When he lends a helping hand, the average man makes so much noise that it spoils the effect.

You have probably observed that there is only a few dollars' difference between "nenni" and "laziness."

The woman who never wonders what her husband does with so much pocket change is a pearl of great price.

It is always difficult for a young man to understand what there is about his sister that attracts other young men.

When there is plenty of champagne at the wedding reception, all the guests never saw such a pretty bride before.

It sometimes comes to pass that after a man has eaten everything that has been set before him, he wonders what ails him.—The Bohemian for August.

EDITORIAL REVIEW.

Grover Cleveland has been famous for many years as a fisherman. Every one knows of his long, silent fishing days at Buzzard bay and at a certain island at the head of Lake Erie. Mr. Cleveland's book, "Fishing and Shooting Sketches," which will be published this month gives a new and intimate view of Mr. Cleveland as fine a sportsman as ever held a rod or steadied a gun. His love of sport for sport's sake, his simple appreciation of nature; his quiet contempt for the so-called "fisherman" who thinks of nothing except of making a "killing," and who is unwilling to sit in the boat unless the fish are biting constantly; his sane, sound philosophy of outdoor life—all these give us not only a new intimacy with one of the finest characters in our national life, but furnish also a guide-book to the spirit of true American sportsmanship which few people who love the outdoors can afford to neglect. By the Outing Publishing Co., 35 West 21st street, New York.

A student's geological map of Oregon has been prepared and published by the State University. The notes are by a student, Ellen Condon McCormick, and seem to be interesting to persons of almost any age or occupation.

The Outing Magazine for August is a midsummer fiction number with some sterling American short fiction. The number is notable, moreover, for its beautiful colored plates made from characteristic paintings by such men as Schoonover, Kemp, Kreighoff, and Wyeth, among others. There are many other features in this number of The Outing Magazine which are worthy of mention, such as verse by Bliss Carmen and Eliza-Roberts Macdonald, and a pretty fantasy in prose by Edwin Stanton Babcock. This is one of the most attractive magazines The Outing Company has ever published.

In the August number of the Atlantic, as befits a midsummer number, fiction holds the first place. It is an uncommonly readable group of short stories that the editors have brought together, comprising some of the strongest work of our best story writers. Norman Duncan's "The Wayfarer" is one of the most imaginative and telling of his many stories of the sea. Mary Heaton Vorse has a very amusing story dealing with "Some Further Adventures of the Yachtsman's Wife;" M. E. M. Davis has an effective bit of symbolism in "The Forerunner;" while W. J. Hopkins, whose Clammer stories were such a success in the Atlantic last year, appears in a new field with "The Fall of the House of Johns." Related to the fiction of the number in its interest is remarkable study of "The Novels of Mrs. Wharton," by H. D. Sedgwick, and a curious chance brings it about that two of the three admirable poems of the number are by distinguished writers of fiction, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps and Thomas Nelson Page.

TAKES OPTIMISTIC VIEW.

Subscriber Says Best Way to Clean Up, Is to Clean Up.

Ed. Journal: A few days ago there was an ugly—but perhaps true—communication appeared in your paper signed "Scavenger." It told about dusty, grass-grown streets in Salem. Now, that is no news, and neither does it do any good to tell the world about our short-comings. Of course, it would be better if we didn't have them, but the way to get rid of such eyesores is to get to work and clean them up. I notice one part of town where these conditions are overcome, and that is on East State street at the Electric grocery store. There the streets are sprinkled in blocks each way by Mr. Eppley's private enterprise. He has a force pump in a well, and by hard work pumps the water onto the street through a hose every morning and evening. This keeps it cool and clean and no doubt draws trade for the store. Mr. Eppley's outfit no doubt also affords considerable protection.

against fire, and probably reduces his insurance rates.

By the way, there is talk of a volunteer fire department in that part of town, and it should be encouraged, not only by the neighborhood, but by the city council as well. That section of Salem is doing considerable building and improving. Many new sidewalks are being built, but there are many old ones that need fixing up. Besides there are a lot of crosswalks out there that the city should renew. The people are very anxious to get better service out there, but this can only be done by having sidewalks, and houses numbered, and they are striving to get these things as fast as they can. It is to be hoped the city fathers will take hold with the people, and show a willingness to help those who would help themselves. SUBSCRIBER.

Rheumatism.

When pains or irritation exist on any part of the body, the application of Ballard's Snow Liniment gives prompt relief. E. W. Sullivan, Prop. Sullivan House, El Reno, O. T., writes, June 6, 1902: "I take pleasure in recommending Ballard's Snow Liniment to all who are afflicted with rheumatism. It is the only remedy I have found that gives immediate relief." 25c, 50c, and $1.00. For sale by D. J. Fry, Salem, Or.

BROWNSVILLE NOTES.

Real Estate Lively in This Busy Town.

Mrs. May McClaran has sold her fine farm one mile east of Brownsville. It contained 68 acres, and was one of the richest pieces of land in Linn county. R. Robertson was the purchaser. He closed the deal today with the Brownsville Real Estate Co., of which R.W. Tripp is manager.

T. L. Case, of Missouri, is in the city, and he is contemplating purchasing a large tract of timber land near Brownsville. He also wants some city property.

J. Goldstein, proprietor of a new clothing store in Portland, was in the city Tuesday. He made arrangements to open a clothing store here, and will locate in the Venner block.

Henry Knuths purchased a 5-acre tract along the river south of Brownsville. It was sold to close up the Washburn estate.

C. O. Anderson, of Hartsburg has opened a first-class jewelry store and has purchased a house and lot from Mrs. E. E. Warner.

H. W. Freeze will leave Tuesday for a nine-month sojourn in Boston.

The Baptists of Brownsville expect to make a $2500 improvement on their church here. They have purchased the lumber and will commence work next week. This will make one of the best churches in the Willamette valley.

Cures Sciatica.

Rev. W. L. Riley, LL.D., Cuba, New York, writes: "After fifteen days of excruciating pain from sciatic rheumatism, under various treatments, I was induced to try Ballard's Snow Liniment; the first application giving my first relief and the second entire relief. I can give it unqualified recommendation. 25c, 50c, and $1.00. For sale by D. J. Fry
