FIRE SWEEPS THE SANTIAM

DETROIT AND BERRY HAVE CLOSE CALL

Several Houses Burned in Latter Town and Much Valuable Timber Destroyed --- Many Campers in Path of Fire

Heavy Rain Last Night Aids Fire Fighters and Flames This Morning Are Under Control---Supposed All Campers Are Safe

Mill City, Or., Aug. 13.—The fire which swept up the Santiam has done an immense amount of damage, but how much it is impossible to estimate until the burned area can be surveyed. Every available man joined the fire brigade, and a long and desperate fight was made, and finally a hopeless one. Early in the evening, however, the rain began to fall, which soon developed into a generous shower. As a result the fire at noon today is under control, and it is thought that, unless unforeseen conditions arise, the further spread will be prevented.

Many campers were in the line of the fire, but, as the burned area was only a mile or two in width, it is thought all escaped to the hills on either side.

hope had about been abandoned, word was received here today that the town of Detroit had escaped destruction from the immense forest fire which is sweeping up the canyon of the North Santiam. The fire is raging in the dense standing timber back in the mountains, and great loss is ensuing. The Zan-Fletcher-Linn camping party, of Portland, had a narrow escape, but managed to reach Detroit in safety.

The latest reports are that the fire is eating its way through one of the finest belts of timber in the Cascade Mountains. It extends for a mile and a half either side of the North Santiam river and has also turned up the Breitenbush canyon.

Detroit, the largest town in the Santiam canyon, and terminus of the eastern division of the Corvallis & Eastern railroad, escaped because of the cleared country surrounding it. The fire burned over the heavy timber on all sides of the town.

While no loss of life has been reported, there are known to be parties of campers directly in the path of the flames. The campers on the Breitenbush river or beyond Detroit, at any of the numerous camping grounds that mark the course of the Santiam river and its tributary streams are within the possible path of the flames. The bridge across the Breitenbush river has been rendered useless.

Flames Surround Detroit.

The conditions at Detroit during the time the fire was passing were something terrible. With miles of forest burning on every side, and, within a short distance of the town, the heat was all but unbearable, and the smoke almost suffocating.

The distance from the mouth of the Breitenbush river to Detroit is about a mile. Heavy timber extends from Berry to the Breitenbush. The fire ran through this at a high rate of speed, extending over four miles within a little more than an hour from its inception. If the campers at the Breitenbush learned of the approach of the flames early after the fire started, they could have reached Detroit easily.

Excursion Train Blocked.

The regular excursion train which is sent to Detroit every Saturday night, ready for the through trip to Newport Sunday morning, was unable to reach its destination. The night was spent at Mill City, 20 miles this side of Detroit. At that point the great fire was plainly visible, and the smoke was quite dense, although the wind was blowing up the canyon.

The fire has severed communication with the burning district, and all territory beyond, and reports are at best meagre. Communication has always been maintained from Mill City, the end of the telegraph line, to Detroit and way points by means of a private telephone line. Now nothing will be known until it becomes possible for people to cross the burnt district.

The fire is now known to be the most destructive that has visited the North Santiam country since pioneer days. Numerous mountain homes and a great amount of valuable timber have been destroyed. The two mills at Detroit are thought to be near enough to the timber to make it impossible to save them. The railroad has been rendered impassible, and logging camps have been wiped out.

The fire was started by hunters. The Virginia mine is owned by J. W. Duff, of Los Angeles. The fire was under control this morning.

The Albany Herald Sunday morning says:

Once more the fire fiend is abroad in the Cascade mountains and some of the finest timber on the Cascade forest reserve on the north fork of the Santiam river is on fire. Yesterday afternoon the fire broke out in the timber near Berry, 53 miles east of this city, on the Santiam river, and last evening for a distance of four miles the finest trees in the woods were ablaze. The fire burned the little town of Berry on the road, according to reports received late last evening, and the railroad bridge across the Breitenbush river, a couple of miles this side of Detroit was damaged. The fire early in the evening was reported to be on the Marion county side and burning for a distance of four miles along the C. & E. railroad, but later the report came that the flames had jumped the Santiam river and were invading the fine timber on the Linn county side.

The fire was believed to have started from a camp fire left by careless fishermen along the river, and as the grass and underbrush is dry and a sharp wind is blowing through the Santiam canyon, it took the flames but a short time to spread to the fine timber and in a few hours the woods in every direction were ablaze. The flames were reported rushing with frightful velocity up the Breitenbush river burning the timber on either side of the Breitenbush spur used as a logging road.
