

Thin Hair

Yes! We had noticed that your hair was looking pretty thin, and that it lacked luster and life. But we didn't like to speak of it! Of course you know Ayer's Hair Vigor is a regular hair-grower, makes the hair soft and gives it life and strength. This isn't the kind of hair that falls out! No, no, it keeps the scalp so clean and healthy.

PURSUED BY RUSSIAN TERRORISTS

Grand Duke Cyril of Russia and his beautiful wife Melitta, the daughter of the late grand duke of Hesse, fled long ago in precipitate haste to the French capital in order to escape from the clutches of the revolutionary Russian revolutionists, who had undertaken to assassinate them and to bring their scalps, so to speak, to the leaders of the revolutionary party in Russia. The party, for reasons best known to themselves, have endeavored to maintain strict secrecy regarding this sensational conspiracy, and exercised all their influence to suppress all reports relating thereto in the French newspapers. The details, however, are well known to a select circle, and are, as follows:

It is well known that numerous members of the Russian imperial family have left Russia to take up their residences abroad since the revolutionary disturbances in their country made life at home insecure and scarcely worth living. Some of these grand dukes and grand duchesses are living in Paris, some in South Germany, some spend the greater part of their time on the Riviera, and others flit about from place to place in search of pleasure and recreation. Not long ago the Russian secret service police discovered that the Terrorist revolutionary party had resolved to carry out the assassination of all the Russian grand dukes and grand duchesses who had fled from their homes to take up their residences in foreign countries.

The revolutionary leaders calculated that the assassination of the Russian grand dukes and grand duchesses who have fled from Russia would create a great and lasting impression on the powers that be in St. Petersburg by convincing them that even flight in the far ends of the world cannot save them from the powerful Terrorist organization.

Firstly, Cyril and Melitta are first cousins and the marriage of relatives of this degree is prohibited by the Russian state church. Secondly, Melitta's first husband, the grand duke of Hesse, is the czar's brother and it would, therefore, be extremely disagreeable to the czarina if Cyril presented to her as his wife her own brother's divorced consort. Finally there are considerations of state. Cyril stands high in the line of succession to the Russian crown. There is nothing between him and the imperial crown of Russia but four insecure lines, none of which is worth much from the point of view of a life insurance company. These are the czar, the czar's weakly son, the czar's consumptive unmarried brother, and Cyril's own father, who is an old man. Consequently Cyril may easily become emperor of Russia and it was considered undesirable that he should contract a marriage prohibited by the church or to unite himself to a lady about whom scandalous things had been said in connection with her divorce. Cyril ignored all these obstacles and married Melitta at Munich. The czar retaliated by expelling him from the Russian army and navy and ordering him never again to appear at the Russian court.

Cyril and Melitta were indifferent to the czar's displeasure. So far from being hurt, they rejoiced in being able to live a free, untrammelled life, according to their own desires. It seemed to them that they had reached the end of their troubles and vicissitudes, and that, like hero and heroine in some fairy tale, they would live happily ever afterward. They were rudely disillusioned by the information that they had been marked out as the first victims of the Russian revolutionary conspiracy of assassination. They were staying at this time at a fashionable Paris hotel, and the Parisian police warned them most solemnly to quit the city and seek security elsewhere. Cyril and Melitta laughed these warnings to scorn and continued to pursue their gay Parisian career of pleasure. They were shaken in their feelings of security by the discovery that a dish set before them and of which they would, but for a lucky chance, have partaken, contained sufficient poison to kill a whole battalion. On the following day an intruder was seized in their suite of apartments armed with dagger and revolver, and provided with a couple of small bombs. On another occasion two bombs were found in their apartments set with time fuses to explode at an hour when Cyril and Melitta would certainly be seeking repose. When two other attempts to "execute" them had been frustrated, Cyril and Melitta found that their nerves were somewhat shaken, and decided to take flight from Paris. They proceeded to Biarritz, where they found that their lives were equally in danger. From Biarritz they went to Aix-les-Bains, thence to Geneva, and from Geneva to Munich. The emissaries of the Russian revolutionary party pursued them around Europe and manifested their dangerous vicinity by a variety of alarming indications. Cyril and Melitta have now taken refuge at their estate in the vicinity of Coburg, where their palatial residence stands in a park of many hundred acres. This park has now been inclosed with a high barbed wire fencing, and no boundaries. A perfect army of private detectives is on duty day and night to prevent the invasion of suspicious strangers and to guard over the life of the grand duke and grand duchess. Things have come to a pretty pass when two such royal personages as Cyril and Melitta must conceal themselves as hunted fugitives from bloodhounds of the Russian terrorist organization. They belong to the two reigning families of the world's mightiest empires.

To Increase Stock Six Millions.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 14.—The stockholders of the Philadelphia company, one of the subsidiaries of the United Railways Investment company, will hold a meeting here this afternoon to vote upon a proposition to increase the capital stock of the corporation from $36,000,000 to $42,000,000. The increase will consist of 120,000 shares of common stock, and the new stock will be offered to stockholders of the controlling company. The proceeds will be used to pay for the stock of the Beaver Valley Traction company and the Washington and Canonsburg Railway company, which were purchased last year, and to provide additional power for the Allegheny county light company and the Pittsburg Railway company.

Equivalent for Cordwood.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—Under the new army appropriation act, which went into effect on July 1, army officers are able to purchase fuel oil and gas under the allowance for fuel. They have been permitted for years to purchase certain kinds of fuel, principally wood and coal, at the rate of $3 a cord for standard oak wood. It was necessary to establish an equivalent rate for spruce, pine and different kinds of coal. The new army act removed certain restrictions which existed and admitted as fuel oil and gas. The experts who were engaged to determine what is the equivalent in each case decided that 120 gallons of oil or 17,000 feet of gas may be regarded as a fair equivalent of one cord of standard oak wood.
