A POINT ABOUT CUT GLASS

To be beautiful cut glass should be absolutely white as well as perfectly cut and polished. However, nearly all cut glass looks white when seen by itself, but a great deal of it looks dark when seen alongside a real white piece.

We sell the white kind and ask you to compare it with any bought elsewhere. White, brilliant, perfectly cut, and a lasting polish are points in favor of our cut glass.

Seeing is Believing.—We make you a tailor made suit, guarantee it in every respect, for the same money that you pay for a "hand-me-down." The Toggery.

An Improvement.—The Rex studio, on Court street, has installed a fine counter in the waiting room.

Supreme Court Cases.

Two cases were argued in the supreme court this afternoon. The first of these is what is known as a bucket shop suit, and is the case of Overbeck, Star and Cook Company against J. C. Roberts. The suit was appealed from Multnomah county. Senator John M. Gearin represents the company and Judge W. M. Calkins the defendant.

The other suit is that of James E. Hamilton against Webster and W. H. Holmes, appealed from Benton county. John Bayne appeared for the plaintiff and respondent, and H. J. Bigger for the defendant and appellant.

CURRENT TOPICS TODAY

Prepared for the Public Schools and the Family Circle.

The city of Seattle has pledged $500,000 stock for the great Alaska exposition to be held there in 1909.

Lumbermen whose sawmills are situated on the Northern Pacific railroad are suing that corporation for damages for failure to furnish cars.

The Chinese minister at London has proposed to the British government a plan to extinguish the opium trade with China.

The chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission has reached an agreement with the President by which the canal will be dug by contract.

The President has appointed Charles I. Magoon governor-general of Cuba, and he will sail for his post on Saturday. The pacification of Cuba is making good progress.

The Portland city council, over the mayor's veto, has passed three new railroad franchises admitting new lines to the city.

The Kilgler Grand. Large crowds are much in evidence at the Kilgler Grand this week. The play being presented by the Brigham-Cooper Company is entitled "The Hand of a Friend," and it is thrilling and interesting, with lots of comedy. The comedy and fun this week is furnished by two Irish lovers. Miss Minnie Gerschel, as "Amelia," and Harry Belmour, as "Conrad," keep the audience busy laughing most of the time. Taken on the whole, this attraction is one of the best so far offered, and is well worth going to see. There will be a special matinee of this play on Saturday afternoon; any seat 10c, and a valuable prize will also be given away after the performance.

Garden huckleberries are being grown extensively in Crook county.

LAW CONSTITUTIONAL.

Attorney-General Crawford Gives an Opinion on Statute Proposed by Water Convention.

In the proposed new water law that the next legislature will be asked to enact is the following clause: "All waters within the limits of the state, from all sources of water supply belong to the public, and, except as navigable waters, are subject to appropriation for beneficial uses."

Some question has arisen as to the constitutionality of this clause, and Attorney-General Crawford, replying to a letter from State Engineer Lewis, has given as his opinion that there is nothing unconstitutional in the clause. Mr. Crawford goes on to say that, in his opinion, the old common law on riparian rights may be modified by the legislature in any way that does not conflict with the constitution, but that the interpretation of what is vested rights in most cases is a question that the courts must decide to the peculiarities of each case. Mr. Crawford believes that the common law on water rights, in many instances, is not applicable in the arid regions of the West.

ADMITTED TO THE BAR.

Supreme Court Licensees Class of Young Attorneys to Practice Law.

The supreme court this afternoon admitted to the bar the following young attorneys, they having successfully passed the examination before the court last Tuesday:
