

ANNOUNCEMENT

To our many friends and customers: We wish to announce that today we have sold our grocery store to the Moir Grocery Company, for whom we bespeak the same kind treatment that has always been shown us.

We take this means of thanking you for your very liberal patronage during the past five years.

We now intend to devote all our time and energy to our confectionery and bakery departments, and hope to be able to serve you in a more efficient manner than in the past.

Yours truly,

KILLED BY TRAIN.

John Detka, of St. Paul, Minn., Met Death Under Car Wheels Last Night.

A young man, who gave his name as John Detka, of South St. Paul, Minnesota, met a tragic death last night by falling off the overland train in the Salem yards, and being mangled beneath the wheels. He was taken to the Salem hospital, but died in a few minutes after reaching there.

He was stealing a ride on the steps of a Pullman, and fell off between Court and State streets, as the train was approaching the Salem station. A man, who says his name is George West, was accompanying him, and was on the steps of the next sleeper. He was kept in the custody of Sheriff Culver last night, for his possible use as a witness. He says he never met Detka until they met last evening at Oregon City, and really knows nothing of the dead man's history. He gave his name as stated, and last night on the way to the hospital told the same thing to Sheriff Culver.

The man on the way to the hospital said something indistinctly that his partner interpreted to mean that the colored porter on the Pullman had kicked him off the train, but he was not sure of it. The sheriff did not so understand it. West says that when the depot was reached the porter came and told him that his partner had fallen from the train. West did not see him fall.

Detka's skull was fractured and his right arm badly mangled. A portion of a letter was found on his person, presumably written by a sister, and the scapular mentioned in the letter was also on his person. The fragment of the letter was as follows:

"Dear Aloysius—Mother is sending you this box containing a scapular and the little statue of the Sacred Heart. The statue be sure and always have it in your pocket about you, it is a sure protection from all danger, and do not fail to wear the scapular on your body. You have heard the story about the man who wore the scapular who was saved from drowning on account of it hitching on a log. I will write you a letter soon. These two articles are blessed by the mission father."

West says that Detka told him he had been herding sheep in Nevada, and was on his way to San Francisco.

ALBANY AGAINST FARMERS

Seldom has so much interest centered in a football contest as at the game which is being played at Corvallis between the Albany Athletic Club and the Oregon Agricultural College Athletes this afternoon. While it is believed that the "Farmers" will come out victorious their is much guessing as to the score. The Albany boys will probably line up as follows: Fullback, Monteith; halfbacks, Coates and Schiffer; quarterback, Schultz; ends, Jones and Neely; tackles, Marshberry and Ward; guards, Noland Ries; Center Gibbons.

THE MAID AND THE MUMMY.

Musical Comedy at Grand Opera House Was Good Burlesque.

Those who attended the production of the "Maid and the Mummy" at the opera house last night believing they would hear a musical comedy like Carle's "The Tenderfoot" or "The Burgomaster" may have been somewhat disappointed. The "Maid and the Mummy" was only burlesque, but it was good burlesque. The libretto, if it may be termed such, was clean, wholesome, witty and refreshing; the costumes were neat, new, tasty, pretty and artistic; the twenty girls in the chorus were young, rather pretty and light of heels; the young women who had talking and singing parts were talented, and the comedians were fully up to the standard.

The mummy was never absent. That important role was filled by Fred Warren, and so tightly did the whole ensemble stick to Warren that the performance may be termed a one-man show.

Mr. Warren is exceedingly clever, and kept his audience in a roar of laughter. The "maid" was not in the limelight to the same degree the "mummy" was.

On the whole, the musical numbers were good. "Oh, Gee; Its Great to Be Crazy," "I'm so Dizzy" and others made big hits with the Salem audience.

The house was well filled.

CURRENT TOPICS TODAY

Prepared for the Public Schools and the Family Circle.

John Barrett, of Oregon, at present minister to Columbia, is said to be slated for ambassador to Brazil.

A great lockout in the building trades at Chicago is threatened. This will effect 500,000 workmen.

A plot is said to be in existence in the German empire to overthrow the autocratic power of the Kaiser. Secretary Taft says he will not leave Cuba until fair elections are assured on the island.

Murder and robbery has stirred up the people of San Francisco to such an extent that a vigilance committee will probably be organized today to protect the lives and property rights of the citizens.

Count Witte says he will never, never return to power in Russia.

The Willamette Valley Chautauqua Association, which has been holding assemblies at Gladstone Park, near Oregon City for a number of years, was dissolved yesterday. A new association was organized and it is probable that the Chautauqua will be held there as usual.

The Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis will erect a new dormitory.

What Will the Poor Girls Do?
Two of the ballet girls in the "Maid and the Mummy" missed the train at Portland yesterday, and came to Salem on the local, arriving in this city after 6 o'clock last evening. They discovered that in the meantime they had been separated from their jobs. They are still in Salem.

Disease Stamped Out.
According to Dr. Koeler, stock inspector, the laryngitis epidemic, which was running amuck among the horses of this and Polk county, has subsided. There are very few cases and none are serious, except those where the horses have been worked too soon.

The Scio Baptist church is being remodeled.

WORDS OF PRAISE.
Mr. J. H. Eskew, Chandler, Okla., writes: "Let me thank you for what your wonderful curative medicine, Peruna, has done for me. I had suffered from catarrh for ten years before I took your medicine."

Miss Marie Pofrel, Pine City, Minn., writes: "I had catarrh of the throat for nearly three months and have been using different kinds of medicines, which did me no good. A friend advised me to take Peruna, which I did, and after taking two bottles I was cured. I cannot say too much in its praise."

Good Cause for Cussing.

In a short time we shall hear the call of the wild geese as they are making their annual migration towards the south. I can never hear this old, familiar cry without thinking of an accident which befell a gallant captain in one of her late Majesty Queen Victoria's West Indian regiments, while shooting in Manitoba. The captain, a native of Ireland, was returning on a country cart with a friend and driver from a day's prairie chicken shooting, when they observed through the growing twilight a large flock of wild geese (about sixty of them) feeding on a stubble within easy range of a large grass and reed covered slough. The marsh grass was in most places two or three feet high, and it was at once suggested by the driver that "those geese could be stalked."

With Milesian impetuosity the gallant captain, uttering the uncompromising words, "Let me at 'em," plunged out of the vehicle and proceeded to make the attempt. Now the captain was a man of imposing stature, so was compelled to crawl "sinuous and snakelike" for over eighty yards. At last he got within thirty yards of the unsuspecting flock, and then, like the good sportsman he was, scorned to shoot them sitting, he rose majestically from the long grass, remarking as he did so, "Shoo-o, ye divils."

The geese rose instantly in clamorous masses. The captain took deadly aim. Snap went the lock of the right barrel. An imperceptible pause. Then snap went the lock of the left one. No discharge had followed the pulling of either trigger. The geese faded rapidly away. It seems the captain in getting into the cart to drive home had (as every careful sportsman invariably does) taken the cartridges out of his gun, and with the impetuosity of his nation, and in the hurry of the moment, had quite forgotten to put them back when he started on his wild goose chase. It is said that the superstitious driver for a time declined to let the captain into the cart when he came back, on the ground that the obijurgatory remarks which followed in an uninterrupted stream from the discomfited warrior's lips might "bring down a judgment on 'em."—Reginald Gourlay in October Recreation.
