ATTORNEY-GENERAL HOME.

Made Arrangements for the Prosecution of Oregon's Claim Against the Government.
Hon. A. M. Crawford, attorney-general for the state, returned home this morning from a visit to Washington and other Eastern cities. Mr. Crawford visited the capital to arrange for the prosecution of the claims of this state against the United States government. These claims have been pending for more than 40 years, and amount to more than $300,000. During the Civil War the United States troops stationed at the various forts in Oregon were called to the East to take an active part in the great conflict. Oregon was then asked to supply these posts, which was done. Oregon paid and maintained the soldiery during the war, and now it seems that the state is in a fair way to receive compensation.

The play is said to be having phenomenal success at Portland.
M. E. Walker left this morning for a visit at Eugene.

Not Suffering from Cancer.

It is hardly true that Mrs. Eddy is suffering from an incurable cancer. It is evident, however, that the 84 years are wearing upon her frame. Her body is succumbing to advanced years. She has incurred the enmity of powerful members of her church by her despotic manner in recent years. This fight is caused by her refusal to designate her successor, and the several factions now the head are now fighting for mastery.

Mrs. Eddy Admits Reporters.

Concord, N. H., Oct. 30.—Held about with "safeguards," Mrs. Eddy granted an audience to a limited number of newspaper men today, including the Scripps-News manager. She is said to have sanctioned the set at rest the report that her health was undermined, but the effort failed of its purpose. Her failing health is evident in her face and manner.
Mrs. O'Brien's clear young voice questioned:
"Are you in perfect health?"
"I am," was the piteous attempt at an answer, as she surveyed the questioner with wonderment, evidently trying to comprehend the meaning of the demonstration. It was plain that she regarded her privacy outraged, but a stronger mind had forced upon her the necessity of making a good impression.
"Have you any physician other than God?" asked Mrs. O'Brien.
"Oh, what? Oh, yes, I hear you. No, I have no other physician than God. I am resting in his everlasting arms."
The testimony was only half audible to those about her. She turned wearily toward Mr. Fry, who was standing near, in the uniform of a footman, ready to assist her to her carriage.
Mrs. O'Brien pushed into the hall and begged, "Mrs. Eddy, won't please tell us, do you drive out every day?" She paid no heed, but murmured something which the stenographer near by took to mean yes. She was then taken to her carriage by Frye and a strong man. The interview terminated, lasting seconds, and disproves the report to a certain extent that she cannot walk nor talk, but that's all. It is her parent, that she is on the verge of a complete physical breakdown and is weaker than seemed probable.
