Prunes

Gile & Co. at present employ about 65 people, and are supplying the East with many carloads of fruit. Tilton & Co. have shipped up to the present time this season over one million pounds of prunes, and their average shipments are about two cars per day. They employ about 60 girls and 40 men. There is a great demand for Oregon prunes, and the local dealers have no trouble in disposing of their fruit.

CURRENT TOPICS TODAY

Prepared for the Public Schools and the Family Circle.

Trains between Portland and San Francisco are to be run on ten hours shorter time schedule in the spring.

The time between the two cities is to be reduced from 36 to 26 hours.

Meat packers and officials in Vermont have been indicted for selling diseased meats.

Portland bank clearings show an increase of five millions for October.

The British house of lords has made radical changes in the educational reform bill, passed by the house of commons.

The Ute Indians, who left their reservation in Montana, on the ground that they were starving, have so far not been captured by the U. S. cavalry.

Strained relations between Spain and the Vatican may result in a new ministry and a political revolution in that country.

The moderate elements in Cuba are organizing to oppose American intervention leading up to annexation.

Saturday will be observed by the Japanese in all countries as the birth day of the Mikado, or Emperor, of that country.

The cabinet of Spain will ask for a new law to better the condition of woman and child labor in that country.

New laws proposed in France provide for government ownership of railroads and coal mines, and abolition of death penalty.

Paper Changed Hands.

Beginning with this morning, the Albany Herald is published under the new management. It came out today with Walter Lyon editor and manager, in a new dress and enlarged form. It announces it will be independent, Republican in politics and that it will cover the field between Salem and Eugene.

A Year of Blood.

The year 1903 will long be remembered in the home of F. N. Tackett, of Alliance, Ky., as a year of blood; which flowed so copiously from Mr. Tackett's lungs that death seemed very near. He writes: "Severe bleeding from the lungs and a frightful cough had brought me to death's door, when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, with the astonishing result that after taking four bottles I was completely restored and as time has proven permanently cured." Guaranteed for sore lungs, coughs and colds, at J. C. Perry's drug store. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

San Francisco Hotels.

Contract have been let and the work of demolishing the old walls is now progressing. The new building will occupy the entire Market street frontage, but 94 feet will be reserved in the rear for grass and flowers. The famous court will be reproduced with some changes. The building will cost $3,500,000, with an addition $700,000 for furnishing, and will contain 700 rooms, each with bath. There will be nine stories.

The Fairmont Hotel.

The Fairmont occupies an entire block on Nob Hill, being bounded by Powell, California, Mason and Sacramento streets. Its position, commanding the bay and surrounding mountains, make it an exceedingly attractive stopping place. While the woodwork was burned out, the walls were not damaged. It is being rapidly refitted in magnificent style. A fine ball room and splendid banquet hall are among the distinctive features of this palatial establishment. Its seven stories with their six hundred rooms, decorated by skilled artists, will be equipped with every convenience for the comfort of its guests. Opened in February.

The St. Francis Hotel.

With the completion of the new north wing, the St. Francis will have over 650 rooms, more than 85 per cent of which will have baths in connection. The management is installing every appliance which modern ingenuity has devised to insure comfort and convenience. The object is to make the St. Francis known the world over as a hotel without a peer.

FINE NEW MARKET.

F. P. Farrington Has Inaugurated a Splendid Place in the Steiner & Berger Store.

Salem is putting on metropolitan airs. She has now a real up-to-date meat market. F. P. Farrington has leased the old Steiner & Berger store on State street, has had it handsomely and artistically renovated, has opened an up-to-date market, and will cater to the best of the Salem trade.

Mr. Farrington will carry meats, poultry, oysters, game in season and everything will be strictly first-class in every particular.

The sausage machinery and all the appliances of that kind have been installed in the basement, which has been specially fitted for the purpose, and has been arranged with sanitary plumbing.

Cleanliness is the chief motto of Mr. Farrington, and nothing will be kept around the shop unless it is scrupulously clean.

Mr. Farrington has provided himself with accomplished help, and all customers will be courteously treated, and will be given just what they ask for in the way of the best meats.

DIED.

EDWARDS.—At the family home on Ferry streets, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, Salem, Oregon, Wednesday, October 31, 1906, Evelyn, the 3-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Edwards, of pneumonia.

The funeral services were held at the home at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, and interment in City View cemetery.

Typhoid Germs Lurk in Dead Ends.

A Hoquiam, Wash., special says: Dr. Ralph C. Matson, the Portland bacteriologist who was called to this city by Mayor McIntyre to analyze the city water and determine whether it was responsible for the recent epidemic of typhoid fever, has decided that question in the affirmative. He found a number of water mains with so-called "dead ends," where the water stagnates; he also found the cases most numerous and malignant in the vicinity of these "dead ends."

Dr. Matson has examined the blood of a number of patients and declare the disease to be true typhoid. In regard to the assertion that the disease had been disseminated through the milk supply he says:

"If this be true, it is on account of the dilution of the milk with city water, or because germs were distributed by washing the milk cans with city water. Oysters and contaminated vegetables are sometimes the cause, but here I have examined typhoid patients who have in no way been exposed to contagion from such sources and can only decide the water supply to be the direct cause of virtually all the cases."

Mayor McIntyre, being a well-read physician himself, is deeply interested in the matter and the action of the city authorities is eagerly awaited by the citizens.

Trick of a Yankee Sailor.

At one time during the war 1812-1815 with Great Britain a British privateer made her rendezvous and cruising ground at the head of Long Island Sound, not far from Stonington, Conn. From this point of vantage she levied contributions upon the American vessels that plied between New York and the New England ports. The unfortunate coasters were compelled to halt when threatened with the Englishman's guns and submit to having their cargoes examined, the stores, provisions or anything that was likely to be needed.

Of course, protests were of no avail, as it was war time, when might made right and the strong preyed upon the weak. No opportunity for reprisals presented itself to the unarmed merchantmen until at length Captain Chase, who sailed the sloop Echo out of Stonington, resolved to attempt by strategy what could not be effected by force.

The captain prevailed upon an American colonel in Stonington to furnish him with 50 men, who, when the time for sailing arrived, were concealed in the hold of the sloop, between which and the cabin was an opening through the bulkhead. A number of live sheep were then brought on board, which occupied the deck of the craft. With this strange cargo Captain Chase got his vessel under way one fine morning and steered for the entrance of the sound, bound, as every one supposed, to New York.

When the Echo arrived within hailing distance of the privateer, according to expectations, she signaled to heave to by the report of a gun from the latter and a ball that came whistling across her bows. As the sloop came up into the wind in answer to this urgent summons an officer on the quarter-deck of the privateer hailed her through his speaking trumpet with the usual questions. When he asked, "What are you loaded with?" the Yankee captain answered:

"Meat on deck and 'sass' (vegetables) in the hold."

The sloop was ordered to come alongside, and when this was done nearly all of the privateer's crew boarded her, impelled by curiosity to examine her unusual cargo, leaving only five or six men to guard the British ship. As the foot of the last Englishman touched the sloop's deck the Yankee captain gave a signal, and up the cabin companionway rushed the forms of armed men. The privateer's crew, who had left most of their weapons on board their ship, were taken completely by surprise and were quickly overpowered by the half a hundred Americans. The few men on board the English vessel also surrendered, and as the sun was setting that evening the patriotic citizens of Stonington were surprised and gratified to see the victorious Echo sailing into the harbor accompanied by a large ship, from whose masthead floated the stars and stripes. Captain Chase had returned the same day with his sheep and a valuable prize he had captured without the loss of a man on either side.
