REVIEW OF HOP MARKET

Waterville Times Sums Up Conditions and Notes California Scheme

There is a continual absence of business on the local market. At the moment there are no export orders for either States or Pacific brand, while brewers are showing very little interest. The New York State market shows continual activity at about last quoted prices, with an occasional lot dropping off at a shade better. From the Pacific coast we hear of some talk of consignments to England, but nothing as yet has come of it. The markets there are quiet with very few orders at hand, as merchants are taking care of their contract deliveries for the moment, and at the decline do not seem anxious to take on further commitments. The general quality of the hops grown on the Pacific coast in all three states is of such a disappointing character that to market the bulk of the crop grown a much further decline must set in. From England we hear of reports of a dull market. From the Continent the markets are strong on account of heavy export buying by England.

A plan is proposed by which it is hoped to secure a pool of one-third of the hops in this vicinity and ship them at once to England, says the Santa Rosa, California, Republican. Hops are selling there for 35 to 40 cents per pound, and here they are only bringing about 15 cents at present.

An English firm has made the proposition to the hop growers and will guarantee 14 and 15 cents per pound right here, will pay the expenses of a man chosen by the hop growers to and from England, and will cause the hops to be shipped to England at once. This representative of the hop growers is to have absolute control of the hops, will be furnished with inside information there by the English firm, and will give his personal attention to the market. None of the hops will be sold until this representative says the word and orders them placed on the market. In this manner it is expected that 30 cents per pound can be secured for the hops sent across the water. The English firm will charge only one per cent commission, and out of this will pay the fare of the Sonoma county representative across the ocean and return, and will pay his expenses while he is there awaiting the sale of the hops. The growers will pay the freight and insurance on their hops.

WALLS OF CAPITOL SHAKEN

Steady Roll of Machinery in State Printing Office Undermining Foundation

Very few people are aware that the steady whirl of the machinery in the State Printing Office in the basement of the State Capitol is slowly but surely getting in its work on the walls and foundations of the State House. But it is true.

One of the most important questions that will confront the legislature at the coming session will be the disposition of the state printing office. For a number of years the plant has been located in the basement floor of the capitol, and while the machinery and presses are not very heavy, and the work of destruction their continual running has wrought on the walls of the building, has not been very rapid or marked, it has been a continual grind and strain.

Everybody in the state house, from the head janitor all the way down to the governor of the state, is aware that at all hours of the day the vibrations of the building caused by the running machinery in the printing office, can be felt.

It will be up to the legislature while it is considering the affairs of the printing office, to take the entire business out of the State House before any more damage is done to Oregon's splendid Capitol building.

Just at present the difference of opinion between Willis S. Dunway, the State Printer-elect, and Frank Baker, a former State Printer, and the owner of the plant in the State printing office, is causing some talk. For years Mr. Baker has been leasing his outfit to the State Printer, and is said to have waxed fat and flourished on the proceeds. It was given out that Mr. Baker and Mr. Dunway had reached an amicable agreement on the sale of the plant, and Mr. Dunway had purchased it outright.

Yesterday it developed that no agreement had been reached, and that Dunway had given out the statement that he has purchased two new Miehle presses, and will be prepared to put in a plant independent of Mr. Baker.

It is said that the two men practically agreed on the price of the plant, but other details in the trade caused the disagreement. The valuation placed on the office was $5500.

Senator Kay went to Hon. J. R. Whitney, the present State Printer, and asked his advice on the subject. Mr. Whitney said that it would be good business for the State to purchase Mr. Baker's plant, provided the price was right. Mr. Whitney believes that $5500 is a reasonable price, and, that while the material cost a great deal more than that, some of it is not in good shape. Mr. Whitney advised Senator Kay that if the State should purchase Mr. Baker's plant at that price, and then expend a similar amount in new presses and some other material, it would be a valuable and up-to-date outfit.

The trend of public opinion throughout the State is that this legislature will be compelled by the force of public opinion to buy and establish a printing plant, and also put the State Printer on a flat salary. It is known that Mr. Dunway is opposed to both propositions, and during his campaign he never for a moment pledged himself to bring about either of these reforms.

The story has gone out that Mr. Baker and Jack Matthews will attempt to organize the legislature for the purpose of compelling the State to buy the Baker plant at a fancy price.

On the other hand there is another story to the effect that those members of the legislature known as the "stand-patters" have agreed to fight any proposition to put the office on a flat salary, for a short while at least, in order to allow Mr. Dunway to reimburse himself at State expense for the large amount of money he is said to have spent during the campaign to insure his nomination and election.

The "stand-pat" wing of the party, which is said to believe in paying political debts out of the public crib regards Mr. Dunway as a very patriotic young man, who has always "dug up" when the party was in need of funds, and there has been a kind of tacit understanding that he should be allowed to have the office on its present plan for two years at least.

The profits of the office are said to be about $50,000 a year, or the same as the President of the United States gets, and it is believed that if Mr. Dunway is allowed two years of this, he will be satisfied, and then the office can be placed on a flat salary in time to clear the records of the party before another general election.

These are interesting questions that the legislature will be called on to decide, and they will enter somewhat in the fight for president of the Senate and Speaker of the House.

TRY TO DISSOLVE STANDARD

respect the mandate of the court and appear in person."

New York, Nov. 15.—The Standard this morning declared a quarterly dividend of $10 per share, shortly after which the stock sold off 24 points to 545. The American Express Company this morning raised the salaries of all its employees ten per cent. Twelve thousand are benefited.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 15.—"Rockefeller needn't fear the indictment against him," said Alexander McDonald, vice-president of the Standard, today. "He has had nothing to do with the company for ten years, except to draw dividends, and is able to prove an alibi. The company needn't fear such suits, nor the agitation which is to be expected. The lower courts, which are prejudiced against the wealthy, will decide against us, but the cases will be carried to the higher courts, where they will be tried on their merits. I don't think the company will suffer, and I don't think the Standard will knock other stocks on Wall Street, though it could if it wanted to however."

New York, Nov. 15.—John D. share of the dividend declared today is a little over $6,000,000. The new dividend just declared pays only $6 a share.

The defendants have a month to enter their appearance, and a month after that to file their answer, also the option of filing a demurrer.
