He makes no mention of the fact that he came to my office about 9 o'clock Monday morning and registered. And again, by appointment with me, at about 1:15 in the afternoon. At this time I suggested to him there might be a question as to the validity of some of the signatures on his petition. He was in the office some time.

I saw no more of him until about 9:30 Tuesday morning, when in my office, in the presence of disinterested persons, he admitted that he had not filed any acceptance of his nomination, and he said nothing about being in my office the day before "to correct any clerical errors or omissions in his petition."

I at no time told Mr. Trill that I would not put his name upon the ballot, but I did say that, according to my interpretation of the law, Trill's name shall appear upon the Section 2796, his nomination was not complete. It is not in my province to abrogate the law.

Personally I am willing that Mr. Trill's name should appear upon the ballot, and let the voters make the choice. Respectfully,

Timidity of the Ostrich.

"It is a strange circumstance that with its powerful means of locomotion as well as ability to defend itself from attack, the ostrich is more easily scared than probably any other bird or animal possessing even elementary powers of self-protection. A dog or other small animal, insignificant in comparison to the great bulk of the ostrich, is likely to scare it so completely as to cause it to rush headlong into a fence or some other obstruction which will maim it so badly as to require its destruction. This excessive timidity causes the breeders to adopt strategic measures when the time comes for plucking the valuable feathers for market. The birds are so timid that they quail at being driven even from one field to another, unless some one goes ahead of them. The plan usually adopted, therefore, is to have a man go ahead on foot, calling them as the farmer's wife does her chickens, and tolling them on with a little grain. Another man follows on horseback, and between the confusion of being followed and led there is little trouble in leading the birds in which ever direction is desired. When the plucking times comes the ostriches are thus driven in from the pasture and placed in a small pen surrounded by a piked board fence six feet high. At one place is the 'plucking box' set in the side of the fence, and with palings only four feet high; the ostrich gets into its empty head the entirely erroneous notion that the low fence offers an opportunity for escape and deliberately enters the trap. It is immediately caught from behind, and a hood placed over its head before it knows what has happened. The hood may be nothing more than an old black stocking, but it serves the purpose just as well as if the ostrich had deliberately poked its head into the sand.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Result of Training.

The Irishman wanted to sell the dog, but the prospective buyer was suspicious and finally decided not to buy. The man then told him why he was so anxious to sell. "You see," he said. "I bought the dog and thraimed him meself. I got him so he'd bark all the toime if a person stepped inside the gate, and thought I was safe from burglars." Then me woife wanted me to thraim him to carry bundles, and I did. If I put a packet in his mouth the dog would keep it there till some one took it away. Well, one night I woke up and heard some one in the next room. I got up and grabbed me gun. They were there—three of the scoundrels and the dog."

"Didn't he bark?" interrupted the man.

"Sorra a bark; he was too busy." "Busy! What doing?" "Carrying a pattern for the burglars!"—Dublin Freeman.

X-RAYS

Count Boni after all may have his uses. A vaudeville company (American of course) has offered him $400 a week, and a Paris restaurant keeper has made him an offer of $10,000 a year as head waiter. It is somewhat less than the salary paid him by Anna Gould, but probably all he can earn.

The dispatches this morning bring the sad news that Mrs. Potter Palmer, who was detained in Seattle, chafed over her delay.

Demand for Apple Trees.

A dispatch to the Oregonian from this city Tuesday says:

The recent agitation over the growing of apples in the Willamette valley and the frequent publication of reports of the high prices that have been secured for first-class apples, is evidently having the effect of stimulating an interest in apple-growing. There is an unprecedented demand for apple trees, and some of the small nurseries report being entirely sold out of the varieties most in demand.

The larger nurseries still have stock, but they are not likely to have many to carry over into the next year.

There is a large demand from Idaho and Montana, from localities where the fruit industry is still in its infancy, and where the growers are setting out large orchards. The market is much larger than the Oregon market, for the demand in this state comes principally from people who are adding to their orchards or are replacing other fruit trees with apples. The varieties in most demand are Baldwins, Spitzenbergs and Gravensteins.

The Shell Mounds of Florida. As to the age of the shell heaps only conjecture is possible. The presence of trees of great age on them, and even their hiding by dense forest growth gives some idea of their antiquity. Some heaps or parts of heaps may, of course, be the work of comparatively modern people.

A large heap at Cedar Keys investigated and reported by S. T. Walker, showed six inches of soil on top. Below this were several feet of shells with fragments of fine pottery of "elegant design," and neatly made implements of bone and shell with axes, arrow and spear heads of stone. Then came two feet of soil with a few fragments of pottery inferior to the first. Below this were four feet of shells with pottery rudely ornamented and primitive implements of bone and shell. Next below there was more soil and three feet of shells, the lowest strata of shells that a conservative estimate of the time required of the deposition of the soil since the builders ceased adding to the heap, and, relying on a critical comparison of the pottery and implements in the different strata, in which the stages of growth, rude, heavy pottery. ### Catarrh of the Stomach

A PLEASANT, SIMPLE, BUT SAFE AND EFFECTUAL CURE FOR IT

Costs Nothing to Try.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing; headaches, sickle appetite, nervousness and a general languid languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanson, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. R. S. Workman, Chicago, Ill., writes: "Catarrh" is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge therefrom passing backward into the throat reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but today I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion, Catarrh of stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

are clearly marked, would give 1900 years as the age of the oldest shell heaps. One investigator describes an oyster-shell heap with every indication of artificial building, and which covers a large surface six feet deep near Orange lake. The present elevation of the lake is forty-eight feet above the sea, and the nearest living oyster bed is forty-three miles distant. The heap must have been made when the lake was still an arm of the sea, before the state attained its present elevation. The divisions of the heaps by layers of soil may indicate the ravages of disease, removal, forced migration on account of enemies, and so irregular occupation and work of successive races and generations in the making of the mounds.—Charles de Wolf Brewer in Records of Past.
