"Cravenette" Dress Goods

"Cravenette" is a process which makes cloth non-absorbant and can be applied to almost any class of material. This process is a patent and is owned and controlled by B. Priestly, and no goods, called Cravenette, without the Cravenette brand is genuine.

Have you noticed that other dealers advertise Cravenette Rain Coats? If Cravenette was not the best they certainly would not handle them. This is one of the strongest recommendations it can receive.

When you want a thoroughly reliable rain-proof material, ask for and insist on Cravenette.

We are showing a fine line of shadow checks and stripes in light and medium tan shades, light and dark browns, navy, dark grays and blacks in plain and fancy weaves, 54 to 60 inches wide. ## EXAMINATION OF REMINGTON of conditions found there.

Constable Amos Beach—Saw Remington first coming from the direction of Hardeastle Avenue. Followed him into a place of business. The first thing he said was:

"I know what you are after. Take a chair and I will tell you all about it."

Said he had been down to Slaughter's and did the shooting. Had stood it long enough. Had his life threatened and his home fired. Said he had fired three shots. At first he said he had thrown the gun into the river, afterwards that he had hid it in a fence corner. No questions were asked as to whom he had shot, he assumed that the marshal knew it. Said Slaughter yelled when he hit him, and then ran. "Yelled like the dickens." Didn't say where Slaughter ran, nor in what direction. Fired the first shot in the air.

In company with Remington and Deputy Sheriff Esch went to Kennedy's field, climbed over the fence and went to a log then went back to the fence and found the gun. The initials "E. L. R." were on the barrel of the rifle. It was a Savage rifle 30-30 calibre.

Remington said he was afraid any second that he would have a hole put through him or that he would be burned out, and had not slept for several nights. Couldn't stand the strain any longer. Didn't know what Slaughter was doing when he shot him.

"It was dark in the room when we examined the gun, and couldn't tell how recently it had been fired."

Remington seemed to be in a very excited condition. Talked fast and showed signs of fatigue. Wore light pair of low shoes. Thought Remington was in the act of putting something away when he entered the store. Did not change shoes until after he had told story. Couldn't repeat exact language, but remembered enough to satisfy him that Remington had done the shooting. Did not have him under arrest, defendant practically gave himself up, and the warrant was issued later.

Has been constable and marshal for the past 18 years.

Wm. Esch, deputy sheriff—Met Remington in justice of peace office. Asked him if he would accompany marshal and himself to where he had the gun concealed. He consulted his attorneys and then went with them to the spot and secured the gun.

DICK MAY LIVE.

Policeman Busick's Victim Has a Possible Chance for Recovery.

The condition of Frank Dick, the young German who was shot at the passenger depot Sunday morning by Night Policeman Busick, is considered by his doctors to be equally as favorable as it was yesterday. In fact the physicians are more hopeful today than they have been at any time. If Dick survives the wound it will be an instance of remarkable surgery. So far no complications have arisen, but the wounds are of such a serious nature that it will be next to impossible for the injured man to survive them.

May Have Been a Negro.

Dayton, O., Nov. 27.—Thomas Wilson, a restaurant cook, was found to have been a passenger on the car with Dona Gilman. Wilson says he saw the girl leave the car and a negro jump off 20 feet beyond where she alighted. The negro addressed a sentence to her, which Wilson could not understand. The police are after the negro.

The Fresh-Air Fad.

Foul air—which has for its accepted meaning air heavy with the gases and odors or decay—is not, in itself, poisonous, or even unhealthful. Unless it contains such a large proportion of foreign gases that it is noticeably lacking in oxygen, its chief effect is psychic. Some persons, in brief, cannot abide a stench. It sets their nerves on edge and excites their imagination and the result is that they grow pallid and, at times, seagick.

Thus, indirectly, it may weaken them and make them an easy prey to wandering microbes. But of itself, it produces little direct harm. Medical students, breathing the unspeakable gases and odors of the dissecting room manage to eat vast dinners and grow fat. Tanners, garbage men, workers in fertilizer factories and other persons who are habitually surrounded by hair-raising aromas are ordinarily just as healthy as other folk.

That foul air is usually laden with rather more germs and germ-bearing insects than air which seems (to the nose) to be pure is beside the point. Experience shows that pure air often contains as many of the enemies to health as the most foul exudations from a sewer outlet. The stegomyia fasciata, which carries the germs of yellow fever, would be just as deadly on a mountain top as along the shore of a Louisiana bayou. Hence the absurdity of shotgun quarantines and all of the other medical manifestations of alarm that appear when yellow jack rages on the gulf coast.—Dr. Leonard Keene Hirschberg in American Magazine.

The American.

I am bred of the soil; this is my motherland; Sinew and bone and blood, spirit and strength of hand, All have risen from her; of and within me lie Only her elements—bred of her soil am I.

I am sprung of Aiens, you say? My forefathers braved the deeps, None of the red man's blood wildly within me leaps. Aye, but body and soul, sinew and blood and bone, Out of her elements, and part of them, I have grown.

One of her breed am I, and dear is her soil to me; Justly my pride is great in her glorious destiny; Justly I give him hate who shames her to glut or greed— I am sprung from her clay, I am one of her breed.

She is my mother; proud am I of her worth, To all of her glory I am heir by the right of birth; Let him who would shame her know that my curse in his face is thrown, For I am bred of her soil, sinew and blood and bone! —S. E. Kiser in the American Magazine for November.

The Facts.

The One—And you say this horse hasn't any faults? The Other—Not a single fault. The One—But he appears to be blind in his right eye. The Other—Well, that's not his fault; it's his misfortune.

Tommy's Query.

"Yes, Tommy," said the teacher, as she turned the globe, "up in the polar regions all the Esquimaux wear fur coats." "Gracious!" exclaimed Tommy, "are all the Esquimaux actors?"—Chicago Daily News.

About Socialism.

Socialism is so much to the front at the present time that its seems hardly possible to believe that many people had the vaguest idea as to what socialism meant only a few years ago. Here is a true story illustrating an ignorance which was common. A young scion of the aristocracy was eager to master the methods of journalism, so entered a daily newspaper office. One of the tasks which the editor set him was to compile an index of the contents of each day's paper for the use of reference. He went on with his work for some time. Then one evening a leader writer wanted some recent references to speeches on socialism. Not a single speech was indexed. "But whatever are all these references under the heading 'Socialism'?" asked the editor, to whom the matter was referred.

"O," said the young journalist, "I've entered all the balls, parties and festivities. That's all 'socialism,' isn't it?"—London Daily News.
