Remarkable Cure.

"I was much afflicted with sciatica," writes Ed. C. Nud, Iowa, "going about on crutches and suffering a deal of pain. I was induced to try Ballard's Snow Liniment, which relieved me."

"I used three 50c bottles. It is the greatest liniment I ever used; have recommended it to a number of persons; all express themselves as being benefited by it. I now walk without crutches, able to perform a great deal of light labor on the farm."

25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by D. J. Fry's drug store.

Takes Fire Precautions.

"Lieutenant Frank Lahm, who is now the world's champion balloonist," said an aeronaut in New York, "is a young man with a muscular figure and a resolute face. He is remarkable in aeronautics for his skill and his prudence."

"I once heard an inventor describing to him a rather poor invention in the way of a safety anchor."

"A safety anchor, eh?" said Lahm. "Well, with that anchor I should be about as frightened as the old lady in the skyraper hotel."

"This old lady, on being assigned to a room on the nineteenth floor, asked the bellboy nervously if the proprietor had taken any precautions against fire."

"Yes, ma'am," said the bellboy; "he has. The place is insured three times its real value."—Indianapolis Star.

SOUTHERN RECIPES.

A Few Famous Dishes of Historic Hostesses.

A delightful book for the housekeeper's table is "Famous Old Recipes," compiled by two Philadelphia women. Here are a few of the recipes:

Sally Lunn, by Mrs. D. H. Maury, Richmond, Va.—Take a quarter pound of butter, one pound flour, two eggs, one-half gill of yeast or one-half yeast cake dissolved in a little warm water, milk enough to make a soft dough, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Cut up the butter and melt in the warm milk. When the milk is lukewarm stir it into the flour with the eggs beaten very light, then add the yeast. Butter the mold in which it is to be baked carefully, pour in the mixture and in winter set near the fire to rise. When perfectly light and risen to top of Turk's head bake in moderate oven.

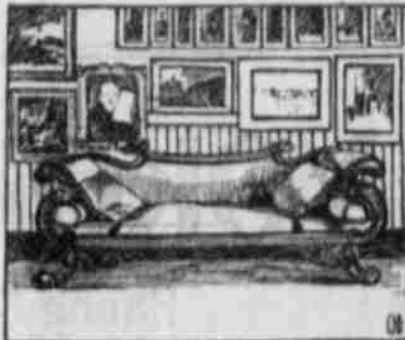

Waffles, by Miss Logan, Kentucky.—One pint of sour cream, two pints of flour, three eggs, one teaspoonful of soda, three tablespoonfuls of melted lard and a little salt. Beat the eggs separately and put the flour and sour cream in with the yolks. Make the batter very thin with sweet milk. Add lard, then soda dissolved in a little milk and lastly the whites of the eggs. Bake quickly in very hot iron.

Okra Gumbo, an Old Creole Recipe.—Fry slowly together one sliced onion and a tablespoonful of drippings or a slice of salt pork. Add a pound of lean beef cut in small pieces and stew quickly. Dredge with a heaping tablespoonful of flour and cook until brown. Add three pints of boiling water, one pint of peeled and sliced tomatoes and one pint of sliced okra. Cover and simmer for an hour and a half, adding salt and pepper to taste. Chicken may be used instead of beef or crabs or shrimp. In the latter case these should be previously boiled and the meat picked out and added last. A little chopped ham is always an improvement. Serve with boiled rice. The gumbo should be very thick when served.

Dolly Madison's Whim: This Is Mrs. Dolly's Own Favorite Cake and Was Taken From the Original Book.—One pound of flour, one pound of sugar, one pound of butter, one pound of raisins stoned and chopped, six eggs, a wineglass of brandy, one nutmeg, a tablespoonful of mace, one dessert-spoonful of soda dissolved in a wineglass of hot water. Beat the butter to a cream, rub the yolks of the eggs and the sugar together and the butter, whip the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth and add alternately with the flour, then the brandy and the nutmeg and lastly the soda. Stir the whole mixture lightly and quickly and bake in a deep pan with the same heat required for poundcake. — New York Telegram.

An Empire Sofa.

Altogether this mahogany sofa is a fair illustration of what should be sought by the collector of the empire.

A GENUINE SPECIMEN.

period. The shape is but slightly modified; the dolphin feet instead of claw feet mark it as rare. Its comparative length furnishes a fair index to its genuineness, as most of the new "antiques" are manufactured on shorter lines.—Good Housekeeping.

New Tea Delicacies.

A popular girl, with a gift for cookery, found a means of increasing her income by booming certain preparations supplied to her by a wholesale house in so clever a manner that no one suspected her of having any interest in any business.

She instituted a series of afternoon teas, to which she invited all her large circle of friends and acquaintances, and soon became noted for her delicious tea. The tea was not made in the ordinary way, but was sweetened with rock candy, a maraschino cherry being added to each cup. She next made a specialty of cakes and beverages in which she could use whipped cream to which vanilla flavoring had been added. This gave to both tea and chocolate a most fascinating flavor. These essences were changed from time to time and included almond and orange flavoring.

A great deal of interest was aroused by the success of these afternoon teas. Questions began to be asked by her numerous friends, and it can readily be seen how valuable an agent she proved to that wholesale house, for the popularity of their specialties became established without any expensive advertising or booming.

Gifts For Invalids.

"You must have had faith in my getting well," said the convalescent brightly, "or you'd never have brought me something pretty to wear." And immediately she tried the dainty lace turnover collar on.

That set the visitor a-thinking. She had brought that particular sort of gift simply from a desire to take something that was out of the ordinary. But if it really suggested getting well and getting out, why, there was much more subtlety in the choice of gifts that might be taken into account when dealing with invalids.

THE BEAUTY QUEST.

Happiness, Smiles and Exercise Leads to Good Looks.

The more beautiful a woman is the more painful is the road that leads to old age and vanished charms, and every one should study how to retain them. Great is the shock when, after a few years' absence, one sees the change that time has wrought in friends and consequently must feel sure in themselves. But years deal far more kindly with some than with others, and the difference generally lies in the persons themselves. Those who look well, as some do to the end, have preserved and not given in to the assaults of time.

But happily there are not nearly such marked changes apparent nowadays in a few years as there used to be, because people devote themselves to the culture of the appearance and tread the road that leads to good looks and to their preservation. The present methods of beauty culture do not assert themselves, and there is little trace of how it is done. If there is a visible "makeup" the success has only been a half and half one, for there is much moral restraint required to be beautiful. Look round at an assembly of people over thirty or forty. It is not their features only that give them age, but the expression, the worried, hard look in the eyes, the peevish, discontented lines of the mouth, the lack of hope and joy visible on the face.

Cultivate happiness, smiles and laughter. They keep you young. Take exercise in the open air daily. Air is all essential. Begin from your earliest days to sleep with your window open and not only have a bath every day, but rub and stimulate the skin in your bath from the head to the heel. Never neglect to go through some exercises which will keep the muscles in order, the head erect, the shoulders well thrown back. Carriage stands you in good stead even in old age. And remember that beauty of complexion depends upon four things—perfect digestion, good blood, an active liver and good circulation. To improve all of these functions the same prescription will answer, and it is: Deep breathing, plenty of pure water—eight glasses a day—fresh vegetables and salads, sufficient sleep to keep the nerves quiet, outdoor exercise every day, little or no alcohol, tea, coffee or drugs of any kind and particularly the powders and potions taken for nerves and insomnia.

Our Turkey—and Others.

The southern cook says that one secret of making the turkey tender is to make it rest on its breastbone instead of on its back when in the pan. In this way the juices are more evenly distributed and every part of the bird is tender and delicate. A bit of pork or bacon tied over the meat while cooking adds a fine flavor to the meat. Stuff the bird with bread or celery, chestnuts or oysters, according to taste and purse.

In France they are apt to parboil M. Dinde, or they roast him without stuffing. He isn't as good as when cooked in his native land.

In Russia they split him and broil him before a big open fire. He is usually blackened and burned before being served, and when he comes to the table he is smothered in hot sauce.

In England they know nothing about making him tender. They cook him as they would a roast—until the blood is longer runs—and then they wonder why he is tough and marvel that he should be our national bird of feasting.

In Germany they get up the bird beautifully, but look out! In the interior will lurk a bologna sausage, put there to flavor the meat. It is all right if you like it.

When Ironing Handkerchiefs.

Begin by ironing the middle. Remember that to iron the edges first causes the middle to swell out and makes them very difficult to iron and fold properly. Always test the heat of the iron on a piece of rag or paper before using to prevent scorching.

A Picturesque Hat.

The mushroom hat is too generally becoming to lose caste in spite of its popularity. The model illustrated is of black velvet, with two long white plumes held in front by a jet clasp.

and then sweeping back and down over the hair in the back. A fold of silver tulle covered with white net is the only other attempt at decoration. Such a hat is suitable either with a severe tailor made or a more elaborate suit for afternoon wear.

Only Contest That Promises
Excitement in Municipal Election Monday

The contest of Wallace G. Trill for the office of City recorder against the present incumbent, Wylie A. Moores, is the only contest in the municipal election to be held next Monday that promises any excitement whatever. In all the wards there will be no contest for alderman except in the sixth. William Lansing was nominated by the Democrats and Leodore Greenbaum and E. C. Churchill by the Republicans. All are well known and estimable citizens, and although party lines were drawn at the primaries, and had to be under the existing law, it is not believed that they will be on election day, and each of these candidates will be voted for by his neighbors without regard to party affiliations.

For all the other city officers and for councilmen in all the other wards, the ticket nominated by the Republicans at the primary comprises all the candidates.

This is considered by many thoughtful people to be the only, or at any rate, the principal defect in the present election law. In local affairs, where party politics should have least bearing, they are forced in and the minority party can have no representation in the local government.

In this particular case, there seems to be no kick coming, as the Republicans selected a ticket that is satisfactory to the entire community, and most Democrats will shut their eyes, mutter a prayer, cross hearts and vote the straight Republican ticket.

The race for the office of city recorder reads like a chapter from a comic opera.

One faction of the Republican party has seen fit to wage a small war on Mr. Moores, but no one could be found to make an open race against him in the primaries. After the primaries, the slate-makers endeavored to select a candidate to run independently, but most of the available timber had voted in the primary, and, having helped to nominate Mr. Moores, could not in honor bolt and run independently. At last the effort was made and Wallace Trill, a young student at Willamette University, from Eastern Oregon, was found to be willing to make the race. Mr. Trill had worked for a while in the city, and was connected in some capacity with the Salem Statesman. At present, after performing his college duties, he publishes the program for the shows at the opera house.

Mr. Trill circulated his petition industriously and secured a sufficient number of signers, but not enough of them were registered to meet the requirements of the law, and his name could not legally be placed on the official ballot. Recorder Moores was trying to find an excuse to waive this section of the law, if possible, when it was noticed that Mr. Trill had also failed to file an acceptance of the request to become a candidate, as the law specifically requires. In fact, Mr. Trill had not advanced sufficiently far in his studies at school to be familiar with the law. He then tried to make Mr. Moores put his name on the ballot anyway. Mr. Moores obtained opinions from the attorney-general and the city attorney, who told him that it would be illegal, but Mr. Trill said that Moores ought to put his name on anyway, and that if the positions were reversed, he would ignore the law, and put Moores' name on the ballot.

Mr. Trill is running, anyway, and is asking his supporters to write his name on the ballot as they vote, the law giving them the privilege to do this.

Mr. Moores has made a splendid record, has given entire satisfaction and has competently performed all the duties of the office in a creditable manner.

The Republican ticket for the other offices is:

Mayor—George F. Rodgers.
Marshal—D. W. Gibson.
Treasurer—B. Frank Meredith.
Alderman, first ward—William Waldo.
Second ward—J. I. Stockton.
Third ward—Gideon Stolz.
Fourth ward—A. L. Fraser.
Fifth ward—J. F. Goode.
Sixth ward—Isadore Greenbaum and C. N. Churchill, Republicans.
William Lansing, Democrat.
Seventh ward—H. S. Radcliffe.
