HENERY HOSE HANGE

Murderer of Madge Doyle Executed at Penitentiary Today

Henry Hose was executed at state prison at 12:30 o'clock today for the murder of Madge Doyle at the hotel in Portland in October. The execution was quick, quiet and uneventful. There was nothing sensational and no emotion was displayed. It was all over in a few minutes and was the most rapid artistic execution ever conducted at the Oregon prison. The prisoner was on the scaffold less than ten minutes, and he died in 16 minutes and ten seconds after the drop. His neck was broken by the fall.

On the scaffold, Hose was asked if he had anything to say and in a low voice he said:

"My friends; I committed crime and I never did deny it. I am awful sorry for it; but all I can do now is to pass it up to God for mercy. That's all."

The drop was immediately sprung. Rev. Mr. St. Pierre, the prison chaplain offered a very brief prayer while the attendants were placing the straps around the legs and arms of Hose and while the black cap was being adjusted.

J. W. Knuspel, a young man who is known as the "Morphine Evangelist" in Portland and who is now connected with the North End Rescue mission at Portland, came up from Portland to be with Hose during the last hours. This young man said he felt confident that Hose died a Christian. Mr. St. Pierre also had confidence in the sincerity of his conversion.

The prison doctor, J. D. Shaw, and Dr. Lee Steiner held the pulse of the dying man.

Hose was one of the most calm and cool men who has ever been executed here. Although he has been a morphine fiend, he was not given any drug or intoxicant and he kept up well on his own strength. He ate neither breakfast or lunch and spent the forenoon in conversing with his friends and in prayer.

Hose was a native of Germany and was in the United States army for five years. He served in the army in the Philippines.

He killed a woman known as Madge Doyle in the Winchester hotel in Portland ten weeks ago today. At that time he was practically insane from the excessive use of whiskey and morphine. He had been maintaining an unlawful intimacy with the woman. She had finally deserted him for another man and Hose in a fit of jealous desperation cut the woman's throat and then gave himself up to the police. He was convicted in the district court of Multnomah, November 7.
