HEARSES THE FEATURE OF THE DAY CITY IS BECOMING AN INDUSTRIAL CENTER

BURY VICTIMS OF WRECK

This Is Indeed a Sad New
Years Day at the Nations
Capital

Washington, Jan. 1.—This is a sad New Years day to many in Washington. This morning the funerals of 45 of the known victims of Sunday night's horror at Terra Cotta began to be held. Hearses were busy all day carrying their burdens to the cemeteries. Many bodies were so badly mangled their relatives had them interred without taking a last look at their faces. The blame for the wreck rests either upon Harry Hildebrand, engineer of the extra train, or Milton Phillips, operator at Tacoma station. Phillips has been released on $10,000 bond, but Hildebrand is still a prisoner. The engineer persists in his assertion that he saw no light. District officials will make the most searching investigation. The coroner's jury today visited the scene of the wreck.

Children Set Free.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 1.—Two important laws became operative today, the child labor and anti-bucket shop laws. The former frees 5000 children under 12 years of age from the cotton factories.

At the Edison.
The Edison is putting up an intellectual bill of fare to suit the most fastidious. The company closed the year with a splendid four act melodrama "My Partner." The play has snap and go to it, and every member of the company gets every bit of vim and expression out of his or her part. The house was well filled last night and the warm welcome the company received presages a crowded house tonight.

The play will run the balance of the week, and will add to the popularity of the people's favorite little play house.

Organized Crime.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 1.—The Pennsylvania legislature met at noon and organized. Frank B. McClain, of Lancaster, will be speaker.

HUGHES TAKES HIS JOB

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Hughes was inaugurated today as governor of New York. He delivered the shortest inauguration speech in the state's history. His message to the legislature will be sent in tomorrow. It is awaited with anxiety as radical reforms of a startling nature are anticipated by the politicians. Since his arrival here Saturday, not a politician or state leader has called on him.

TEDDY SHOOK HANDS

Washington, Jan. 1.—Nearly 10,000 citizens, representatives of the foreign powers, army and navy officers, statesmen, judges and officeholders shook hands with Roosevelt at today's annual New Year's reception. Last year the President grasped hands with 9072. Although 11 o'clock was announced as the hour of the beginning, the reception line commenced to form at 8:30. The President was apparently as eager to meet the last man in the line which extended its sinuous undulations to the Corcoran art gallery, as the first. The Marine band, 60 strong, was divided in two sections,

TRIED TO DESTROY STEAMER

Odessa, Russia, Jan. 1.—Several sailors were shot in frustrating a bold attempt by political conspirators to dynamite the steamship Gregory Morch last night on her arrival from New York. Loaded with gun-cotton and dynamite, the fuse of a bomb was extinguished but in time to prevent its explosion in her hull. Conspirators boarded the vessel on her arrival and went below decks. Their actions aroused suspicion, and sailors discovered the men lighting the bomb. With pistols drawn the sailors and conspirators fought, two of the conspirators were shot and the others routed.

SALEM AND SOME OF HER INDUSTRIES

A Goodly Number of Factories Furnishing Employment to That Most Important Factor of Every City the "Tin Bucket Brigade"

In course of a few years Salem is destined to become one of the principal manufacturing centers of the state and the northwest.

Already there is a long list of manufacturing plants, the annual product of which aggregates hundreds of thousands of dollars in value. All of these are receiving the hearty and patriotic support of the people of the vast territory contiguous and the list is being added to annually.

Sooner or later, with the steady influx of capital to develop her now dormant resources and industries, the immense water powers of the natural mountain streams, flowing from all directions, will have been harnessed and utilized, more inter-urban electric railways will traverse the valley in all directions out of the capital city; these will mean a trebled population, an increase in raw products, and the factories will increase as a natural consequence.

Be it said to the credit of Salem's citizenship that there has not been an industry established, however great or small in its incipency, that has not been accorded generous support and patronage and has grown and branched out in its prosperity in proportion to the increased demand for its product. There is hardly a single one of the forty or more manufacturing establishments that is not upon a sound financial basis, and every one is enjoying a healthy prosperity and continually branching out.

The list of manufactures includes a woolen mill, two flouring mills, two saw mills, two planing mills, one cannery, stove works, iron foundry, big brewery and ice plant, three fruit

Little 1907

The baby year came in last night
On the wings of the western breeze,
From out of the Nowhere, far away,
In the midst of the Sundown seas.
On his breast he wore a crescent brooch
Of sapphires and emeralds twenty,
And on his back from a ribbon hung
A golden "horn of plenty."
His little tunic was edged about,
With lilacs and Springtime posies,
And on his baby brow he wore
A wreath of but half-blown roses.

And these he brought from the far-away,
From the lands where the fancies rally;
A gift the elves had sent themselves
To the fair Willamette Valley.
Sapphires for skies, and emeralds, sward;
A verdure never ending,
The curling horn to show the wealth
Of her golden harvest's sending
Posies, the beauty of glade and glen,
And pool where the river dallies,
Roses, fragrant and red to crown
The beautiful Queen of Valleys.

one playing during the reception while the other rested. Populars airs prevailed, including a "Hot Time," "The Old Apple Tree," etc. The day was bright, almost spring-like and temperature. The old year cried itself out with a continuous down pour or rain, lasting until dark.

Pure Food Law.
Washington, Jan. 1.—The pure food law goes into effect today. Secretary Wilson says it will do more than anything else to bring this country into the foremost place in the world's commercial race.

CAME NEAR DEATH

Havana, Jan. 1.—Three hundred persons, officers and their families narrowly escaped death by the premature explosion of signal bombs fired last night to welcome the New Year. Captains Furlong, of the general staff, and Geddings, of the medical corps, were severely injured. The accident occurred at a reception tendered General Bell by the officers of the club. Bell today assumed the rank of major general and sailed at noon for Washington. General Wint becomes commander at Havana.

Wilmington, Jan. 1.—John Farrell, a motorman was fatally hurt, and others slightly injured in the wreck.

King Oscar Much Worse.
Stockholm, Jan. 1.—King Oscar did not pass a good night. A bulletin issued by his physicians this morning says his sleep is disturbed and that his temperature is about the same. His condition is otherwise unchanged.

His majesty's sleep during the day was very much disturbed. His condition tonight is serious.

To Succeed Cassatt.
Philadelphia, Jan. 1.—James McCrea, first vice-president of the Pennsylvania, will be elected Cassatt's successor at the meeting of the directors today, according to positive information from the directors.

Pope's New Year Sentiment.
Rome, Jan. 1.—The pope, speaking of the new year, said he hoped 1907 would bring consolation and satisfaction to compensate for the bitterness and tribulations of 1906, and that his prayers would be especially for that portion of the French people which is transgressing.

King Will Knight Bryce.
London, Jan. 1.—It is declared that knighthood will probably be offered to James Bryce, the newly appointed British ambassador at Washington.

SUICIDE LEAVES MILLIONS.

Supposed Worthless Stock of Man Who Ended Life Worth Fortune.
London, Jan. 1.—There was tragedy—grim, underlying tragedy—in an auction sale in London the other day.

Think of it. In February last a well known city man, confronted on every side by financial stress, committed suicide. He held in one company shares which are today worth between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

These were shares in the Vaal River Diamond company. When the desperate financier took his life the shares were of comparatively little value. The other day a $5 founders' share was sold for no less than $32,500. A lot of six fetched $172,500.

The city man in question was Ernest Schwabacher. He was 56 years of age when he was found shot in his bed in Conduit street last February. At the inquest it was stated that, except financial troubles, he had nothing to worry him. He was a proud man and took pride in his position in the city that misfortune drove him to his death. When he killed himself he held scrip which, nine months later, would have made him a rich man.

The late Mr. Schwabacher's total indebtedness to his creditors was about $500,000. His shares were only held by him nominally at the time of his death, as his creditors had a lien on them. When he died the Vaal $5 shares were worth $3.

The auction sale the other day which carried in its train so tragic a life story, took place at the Mart, Tokenhouse Yard. "An opportunity of acquiring untold wealth," said the auctioneer, Mr. Cranfield, as a preliminary to the sale. Long before the time fixed the room was so crowded, mainly by stock exchange men, that the auctioneer had to push his way to the stand. The six shares were put up in six separate lots. The bidding was animated.

There was another notable feature of the sale. By a clever maneuver one buyer made a profit of $15,000 in half an hour. Seeing the enhanced price which the final lot realized, the purchaser of the first lot commissioned the auctioneer to put up his lot again on behalf of himself. He had paid $16,250 for it; he sold it for $31,250, the purchaser being the buyer to whom the other five lots had been knocked down. The buyer to whom all the shares have gone is, it appears, a well known diamond merchant connected with the company.

Got Their Jobs.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 1.—Governor Higgins and the other state officers were inducted into office this morning when the legislature met.
