- Smith of Umatilla offered a joint resolution to petition the national congress to remove the tariff on jute. This was referred.
- The same senator introduced a concurrent resolution to have a committee appointed to visit the state institutions, and that the members get no mileage or extra pay. Referred.
- A resolution was introduced by Smith of Umatilla to have a committee appointed to meet with committees from Washington and Idaho to confer on legislation on the Columbia river. Referred.

- Bingham of Lane introduced a joint resolution to have the constitution amended to provide for five members of the supreme court, and that in June, 1908, three members be elected, one for six, one for eight and one for ten years, and thereafter each member to be elected for ten years. This was referred to the committee on judiciary.
- The report of a special committee asking that congress be asked to grant free use of the roads through the Umatilla Indian reservation was adopted.
- Then some minor changes were made in the rules of the senate. The most important of these was the creation of the new committees. When this was done President Haines asked that adjournment be had for 5 minutes to give him time to rearrange his committees.
- After the committees were read, the senate adjourned until this morning.

FLASHES OF FASHION.

Smart Materials For Afternoon Gowns—Round Waist Effect.

Marquisette, an etheralized grenadine, is a new material that is making smart gowns for afternoon receptions and teas. Like voile-chiffon, marquisette must be made over linings of silk.

Net of a coarse variety and dyed in all the fashionable shades is a modish fabric for elegant dresses, combined with cloth of the same color.

Short waists are a feature of many beautiful gowns, though the perfectly round waist line, pointing neither back nor front, is newer and, to most people's way of thinking, much lovelier.

The dominating colors of the season are green, brown, lemon yellow, old rose and wattle blue, which is the soft, faded blue that the Colonials combined with yellow in their uniforms.

The gown illustrated is in striped gray voile. The skirt is plaited about the hips and tucked at the bottom, each tuck being headed with a Greek key design in velvet ribbon. The "jumper" bodice is outlined with the same trimming, and the blouse is of lace.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

Two Styles of Dress Prevail—Marabou Worn Like Ostrich Plumes.

The woman who is anticipating the extravagance of the coming winter made necessary by the continuance of the elbow glove may take heart of grace when she remembers that there are to be two distinct styles of dress equally fashionable. For ordinary street wear, business, shopping and all unsocial purposes tailored coats with long, plain sleeves are worn. It is only for dress occasions and social festivities that the elbow sleeve will continue through the winter.

There is a new plume that heretofore has been hidden away in the feather dustier—the turkey feather—fluffed up and glorified. It is called imitation marabou and is sold in clusters of every conceivable color. It is much prettier than the servery peacock or vulture plumes that have become so common.

Marabou is worn as if it were ostrich plumes, and a giant buckle and a long chiffon veil form the entire trimming of more than one fashionable hat.

A perky little turban of dark blue felt has a band of gold embroidered braid around the crown. At the back above and below this band peeps a little frill of closely plaited sage green velvet ribbon. A wing of blue and green ornaments the right side, springing from a buckle of blue and gold enamel.

In the new hats the shape is the thing, and the trimming is artistically arranged according to individual taste. The boiere illustrated is in white caramel, trimmed with black velvet and buttons of wrought silver.
