

KING OF THROAT AND LUNG REMEDIES

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY FOR COUGHS AND COLDS CURES ALL THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES

SAVED HER SON'S LIFE
 My son Rex was taken down a year ago with lung trouble. We doctored some months without improvement. Then I began giving Dr. King's New Discovery, and I soon noticed a change for the better. I kept this treatment up for a few weeks and now my son is perfectly well and works every day.

COMMONER BRYAN IS APPLAUDED

 make him the standard bearer of his party.
 More than 1500 people listened to his speech for an hour and a half last night and they sat enthralled under the mastery of his argument and the compelling charm of his eloquence and they cheered lustily when he scored telling points in favor of his policies.

Bryan the Man.
 This is the third time Mr. Bryan has visited Salem. He first spoke here at the state fair grounds and was greeted by only a handful of people. His next visit was after he had made the race for President and his greeting was cordial. This time no man could wish for a warmer welcome.

Mr. Bryan looks very much as he did ten years ago. He is a little taller, there is a little less hair on his head and that benign and charming Bryan smile is a little broader than in the plucky days of yore. That smile will never wear off.

Since the Great Commoner's last visit he has circled the globe. He has hobnobbed with emperors, princes and kings. He has been feted by Nicholas, Leopold, Edward and William. He has placed his feet under Alfonso's mahogany, drank tea with the dowager empress of China, played billiards with the emperor of Japan and talked politics with the Sultan of Sulu. He is bigger, wiser and broader than before but his plain democracy is of the same old brand and he is the same faithful disciple of Jefferson as ever.

Bryan's Arrival.
 Mr. and Mrs. Bryan came up from Portland on the 6:30 train. Mrs. Bryan was taken to the home of Judge Thomas G. Halley where she was entertained during her Salem visit by Mrs. Halley. Mr. Bryan was met at the station by W. H. Holmes, Dr. W. H. Byrd, M. A. Miller, J. L. Stockton, W. M. Kiser, A. N. Gilbert, F. W. Durbin, John Bayne, F. W. Steusloff, Judge Halley, Governor Chamberlain, Ex-Governor Lord, W. H. Downing, D. J. Fry, Oswald West, Herman Rothchild, Senator Smith of Matilla and several others and was escorted to the Willamette hotel for dinner.

He was accompanied on the train from Portland by Colonel Robert A. Miller, Judge Alex. Sweek, chairman of the state central committee, J. D. Matlock of Lane, W. F. Matlock of Matilla, O. P. S. McAllister, N. A. Perry, Sherman Wise of Astoria, Turner Oliver of La Grande, A. E. Laks of The Dalles, W. Harey Wells, Judge B. Frank Wilson of La Grande, W. H. Wehrung of Hillsboro, Charles Miller of Forest Grove, J. O. Booth of Grant's Pass, Dr. W. E. Carl of Oregon City, C. V. Galloway of McMinnville and a number of others.

At the hotel he was given an ovation in the lobby and dozens of men crowded around to shake his hands.

The Enormous Crowds.
 Although the doors of the opera house were not opened until 8 o'clock, great crowds assembled as early as 6:30 o'clock and before the doors were opened twice as many as the house would hold were in the streets. A thousand or more had to go home disappointed and hundreds remained in the streets to catch a glimpse of the orator when he left the hall. The jam in the entrance was terrific and at least one lady fainted and had to be carried out of the opera house.

There never were so many people in the building before and every inch of available space was occupied and hundreds stood up during the long speech without a murmur.

Stars and Stripes.
 The stage was decorated with immense American flags. On the stage were seated most of the members of the Oregon legislature, members of the local committee, Judge Sweek, Col. R. M. Veatch, Pere Cochran, C. P. Houston, L. R. Edmunson, L. M. Travis, B. B. McKinney, S. P. Ness, G. L. Gross, J. S. Medley, J. D. Matlock and many others. Many ladies were in the audience and they proved to be the most interested listeners.

Hon. Herman Rothchild.
 When Herman Rothchild, the lone Democrat in the lower house of the legislature, came on the stage he was at once recognized and was given a tremendous ovation. He modestly made Dr. Byrd acknowledge it for him. Other prominent party men were cheered as they entered the hall and perhaps the greeting that Governor Chamberlain got was as hearty as the Bryan reception. The crowd was in a splendid humor by this time and enthusiasm was on every person present.

Oregon Nightingale.
 Mrs. Hallie Parria Hinges, the "Oregon Nightingale" contributed to the success and pleasure of the evening by singing in her own delightful way, four songs. She first gave a patriotic song and as an encore sang a catchy Bryan campaign song that brought the entire audience to its feet. At the close of Mr. Bryan's address Mrs. Hinges sang "The Good Old U. S. A." and in response to deafening cheers sang "The Last Rose of Summer." Mr. Bryan personally congratulated Mrs. Hinges on her lovely singing and thanked her for it.

Governor Introduces.
 Governor Chamberlain introduced the speaker and his remarks were exceedingly brief. He merely said Mr. Bryan was the best loved American citizen in private life. Then Mr. Bryan began his great speech. It was perhaps the best he ever gave in Oregon. All the elements of oratory were blended in the address—deep knowledge of the subjects discussed, flashes of humor, lofty ideals, good natured ridicule of the other party and bursts of the finer sort of eloquence, all expressed in choice English. His greatness was revealed in his generous comments on President Roosevelt.

The entire speech of Mr. Bryan tended to prove that President Roosevelt's best policies were those that had been recommended by Democratic national conventions during the past twelve years.

Among other things he said.

Party is Vindicated.
 "I want now to show you why we should feel encouraged. Let me take first the question which was paramount in '96—the money question. We declared it to be the supreme issue and we went out and made our fight and the argument we made everywhere was that we did not have money enough, that the scarcity of money had made the dollar dear and property cheap, and we pointed out that there was no other way to stop falling prices except to increase the volume of money. We said more money will make higher prices and better times, and we favored the restoration of silver as the only means in sight whereby we could enlarge the currency. Now, we see the answer to our argument, and yet you will find Republicans taug about their position being vindicated.

"Let me illustrate our vindication: Suppose I lived in this city and we had a discussion over the question of water, and the Republicans said you had plenty of water and the Democrats insisted that the city needed more water, if you could suppose Democrats taking that side of it, (laughter), and that we Democrats who wanted more water pointed to a lake called Silver Lake and insisted that pipes should be laid to it and the water brought in that the supply might be increased; and suppose when the election came the Republicans won, and then, after the election, suppose, right in the middle of the city, a spring burst forth that supplied 50 per cent more water than the city had before, and suppose everybody benefited—who would say that the Republican position was vindicated? Now, that is just what happened on the money question. (Loud applause.)

New Reservoir Operating.
 "We said, 'We need more money,' the Republicans said, 'We have enough.' They won; we had pointed to the silver reservoir as the only reservoir in sight from which to draw more money, but when the election was over the yellow springs burst forth unexpectedly, and from them poured this volume of new money. It went through the mints into the currents of business, and today we have more than we had ten years ago. Everybody rejoices, everybody has been benefitted, and yet the Republicans say that they have won on the money question. I say to you that no party was ever more clearly vindicated in its position that we have been vindicated on the money question.

Attacks the Tariff.
 "Take first the tariff. The tariff has been a bulwark behind which many of these have hidden, and even the President, with all his reform tendencies, has not yet reached the point where he can law a hostile hand upon the tariff, even when its schedules have been made the protection of private monopoly. The Democratic party is the only party that can be trusted to remove or to reduce the tariff schedule. (Applause.) What do the Republican leaders say? Let the tariff be reformed by its friends. When will it be reformed by its friends. Never. When a man talks about reforming the tariff by its friends he is either deceiving himself or expecting to deceive others.

The Tariff and Its Friends.
 "Eighteen years ago I told a story to illustrate the impossibility of tariff reform at the hands of the Republicans. It was a good story then, because some of the people said the tariff ought to be reformed by its friends; it has been good ever since and will be just as good a hundred years from now if the Republican party stays in power, for the tariff will not be reformed by its friends. The story is this: A man went into a clothing store and when the merchant was not looking he picked up a coat, put it on and ran out of the store, and the merchant ran to the door and yelled 'stop thief,' but he didn't stop; a policeman came along and joined in the chase and yelled 'Stop thief,' but he didn't stop, and then the policeman pulled out his revolver and said, 'Stop or I will shoot,' and the merchant became excited and said, 'Mr. Policeman, if you do shoot, shoot him in the pants, the coat belongs to me.' (Loud applause and laughter.)

As to Government Ownership.
 "And sometimes a small amendment means a good deal. I know down in our legislature once we had a man who stuttered, and one day they had appointed a committee to visit the penitentiary to investigate and some one introduced a resolution appropriating enough money to pay the expenses of this committee to the penitentiary and return, and this stuttering member got up and said, 'I m-m-move t-to s-s-strike out a-a-and r-r-r-return.' (Laughter.) He was willing to pay the expenses of the committee to the penitentiary, but not back. (Laughter.) And so I just moved a little amendment to strike out 'if,' because I do not expect the railroads to get out of politics,' and it was my observation of the railroads in politics that brought me at last, reluctantly, to believe that ultimately we must have government ownership and operation of the railroads in behalf of the people. (Cheers and applause.)

"I do not know when the people will be ready for government ownership; I do not know when my party will favor it; but, my friends, when I became convinced that ultimately the remedy must be adopted, I spoke out on the subject, because when the time does come instead of having a federal ownership that will do much to obliterate state lines and centralize all power at Washington, I want a democratic plan that protects the states in their rights. (Loud applause.) And I propose a plan whereby the federal government will be limited to the necessary trunk lines and the states have control of all the other lines.
 "And instead of being in the interest of centralization, it is the first composition in a hundred years that looked toward the establishment of stronger and larger states to stand as a bulwark against centralization in this country. (Applause.)

It Takes Nerve

Everything depends upon your nerves. It is nerve force that causes the brain to direct the motion of your body; it is nerve force that causes your heart to pulsate, and send the blood through your veins; it is nerve force that causes your stomach to digest food, your kidneys to filter the blood, and the liver to secrete bile.

In fact, nerve force is the power that runs your body, so if you feel worn-out, irritable, nervous, cannot sleep, or eat well, have pain or misery anywhere, your nerves are weak, and your system run-down. To restore this vitality take Dr. Miles' Nerve which will strengthen and build up the nerves. You cannot be healthy without strong nerves.

"For eighteen years Dr. Miles' Nerve and Anti-Pain Pills have been my close companions. Early in married life, while raising children, my nerves became all worn-out—could not sleep, had no appetite, indigestion very bad, and had such awful dizzy spells. Then I began using Dr. Miles' Nerve, and at once I began to improve, and soon found myself in perfect health."

Conscience Stirs Nation.
 In conclusion, Mr. Bryan said: "It is the conscience that, once aroused, stirs the nation to its depth, and this conscience that takes man from his home and sends him out across the world to do something for mankind, can purify our politics when it is turned upon that subject, and I have been myself surprised at the number of men who are now considering the basis of rewards as worthy of consideration. They are finding the Democratic party, instead of being radical, is the conservative force in this country, and many of them are coming to understand that the sooner they let the Democratic party get in and go to work, the better."
