IVANHOE IS MADE EXCEPTION

But Judiciary Committee Reports Favorably Upon County District Attorney Bill

Among the most important bills acted upon by the judiciary committee of the house last evening was house bill No. 238, by Campbell, of Clackamas, which proposes to create each county a separate district attorney district, which was reported favorably as amended so as not to legislate Col. F. S. Ivanhoe, prosecuting attorney of the tenth judicial district, composed of Union and Wallowa counties, out of office. Col. Ivanhoe's term of office did not begin until July 1st of last year, and will extend until June 30, 1910, so that in providing for the election of the district attorneys of the several counties at the 1908 general election his successor will not be elected until two years later.

Col. Ivanhoe did not fare so well with the committee when the bill introduced by Representative Dobbins, of Union and Wallowa, came up for consideration when his prospective increase of $300 per annum in salary went glimmering. This bill contemplates changing the terms of court to be held in Wallowa county, and also to increase District Attorney Ivanhoe's salary from $1800 to $2100 per year and the Union and Wallowa delegates, to which it was originally referred, reported it back favorably, but it was ushered back into the hands of the judiciary, where it was shorn of its velvety upholstery, and came back somewhat disfigured but still in the ring.

The committee could not see that any advantage could be gained by the issuance of codes and session laws to members of the legislature-elect, before they came to attend the session, and it, therefore, voted to strangle Knovic's bill, of Wasco, which provided for that innovation. Burns' bill, providing for the garnishment of public officials, as custodians of money belonging to judgment debtors, was reported back favorably with an amendment exempting all moneys which may be in the hands of county clerks in anywise involved in litigation.

Other bills acted upon favorably by the judiciary and favorably with amendments were:

House bills Nos. 109, by Jewell, to fix term of county courts for transaction of probate and civil business; 195, by Slusher, to protect witnesses in criminal cases; 251 by Davey (by request) relating to vacating property in unincorporated towns; 302, by Freeman, abolishing payment of fees to district attorneys in divorce cases; 313, by Freeman, fixing time when judgments may be made; 338, by Freeman, providing for the execution of sheriffs' deeds to replace lost deeds, etc.; 299, by Farrell, relating to street and sewer bonds in the city of Portland; 289, by Chase, relating to catching and holding logs floating out to sea, and 271, by Freeman, declaring dogs personal property.

WESTON NORMAL IS SAFE

But There Is a Merry Fight on Between Monmouth and Ashland Schools For Supremacy

Slowly but surely the sentiment of the house is coming around to the way of thinking of the normal in the cutting down of the normal schools to two, as is reflected by the prevailing opinion of the house ways and means committee, and it is quite probable that this recommendation will be made and appropriation bills drafted accordingly. The question then simmers down to which of the two most prominent of the Western Oregon schools will be decided upon, since there is no question that the Weston institution will be allowed to remain in existence.

All members of the committee, in both branches of the assembly concede that the Weston school will not be abolished, but there is a strong fight on for the supremacy of the Monmouth and Ashland schools. The cause of the Monmouth normal is being vigorously upheld by President A. Noltner, of the board of regents, who has been presenting his case to the legislature in the most convincing way at his command, and has furnished each with a typewritten copy of the statistical record of the school ever since its foundation, while the interests of the Ashland normal are being equally well defended by President B. F. Minkley, who is allowing no grass to grow under his feet.

FINED THREE HAZERS

Cost $60 to Paint Skull and Crossbones on German Teachers Door

Doing art stunts on the doors of teachers in Willamette University comes high, and even to the most ardent devotees of painting it may not be considered to be worth the money.

The latest reports are that for painting a skull and crossbones on the gateway to Professor Louis Bach's boudoir cost three embryonic Michael Angelos $60 in cold cash. The total sum is said to have been assessed as follows: Clark Belknap, $30; Mickey McDowell, $20; Omart, $10. The worst of it is these boys say that they did not do the poems in water colors. They paid the fiddler, but some other fellow did the terpsichorean work.

It was believed in University circles that all the trouble growing out of the hazing of Professor Bach was over. The student body held a sort of Hagne peace conference, and sent overtures to the faculty, that if the matter was dropped young Belknap and the others supposed to be implicated would make a manly apology. The boys claim that they had assurances that this would be done, and that the student body adjourned without taking any further action.

But all was not over. There was another faculty meeting that evening, and it is said that about half of the teachers desired to fire the boys bodily, and half was willing to get and forgive. As a compromise measure, it is said that this amount of fines was levied. The final culmination has not arrived. At least one of the defendants he will pay no fines. Some of the boys say the student body will make the coin; and a suggestion has been made, coming from the faculty, however, that the students give a public benefit performance, a concert, and allow the public to contribute the amount of the fine that way.

Loving, Grand Junction, writes: "I used Ballard's Snow Liniment, last winter, for rheumatism, and can recommend it as the best Liniment on the market. I thought at the time I was taken down by this trouble that it would be a relief before I could get about, but applying your Liniment several times during the night, I was about in two hours and well in three days." Running Risks

Despite the prevalence of robbery, a few continue to keep money about their homes. In thus doing, they not only risk the loss of money, but also their lives. How much safer and better it would be if those people were to bring their money to the bank. Are you running any such risks?
