SENATE SUSTAINS GOVERNOR

And Takes the Side of the Sawmill Men

Passes Chapin Commission Bill in Unemasculated Form

After a warm fight this afternoon in which Bingham led the fight for the shippers, and Johnson opposed the bill, senate bill 129, the compromise Chapin bill, passed the senate by a vote of 17 ayes to 12 nays. Those voting nay were Bailey, Beach, Coke, Cola, Hart, Hodson, Johnson, Loughery, Laycock, Sichel, Smith of Marion, Wheelton. All the others voted aye. This bill leaves the governor to appoint in the first instance, and the people to elect one commissioner in 1908, and two in 1910. The Chapin bill, as it passed the house, places the appointive power in the hands of the three state officials, and is what the shippers do not want.

JOHNSON HIGHWAY MEASURE

It Escapes Defeat in House By a Narrow Margin

Despite strong and apparently organized opposition the house this morning considered Senator Johnson's bill, providing for systematic construction of public highways, with joint assistance of the state, county and property owners, and reported it back favorably with the recommendation that it pass. The same tactics to defeat the bill which were resorted to in the senate, amending section 21, to make the use of convict labor on the roads and in the quarries in competition with free labor, was used in the house, but it was voted down by a large majority, and, although it is expected a determined fight will be waged to defeat the measure on the floor, it is believed it will be adopted.

Everything went smoothly in consideration of the bill, in committee of the whole, until section 21 was reached. This section provides that convict labor may be employed on the road or in rock quarries, in the discretion of the road committee.

Newell, of Washington, proposed to amend this section by making the employment of convicts compulsory, but the proposed amendment was set down upon as a death blow to the bill in that the system was condemned as impracticable so far the state in general is concerned, and would come in contact with free labor.

When the amendment was voted upon and a division was called it was lost by a vote of 32 to 26, and the entire bill was adopted intact.

Runaway With Farmer Ask

Farmer Ask, of the vicinity of Silverton, brought to town this morning a wagon load of spuds, and stopped on High street, near Harvey's grocery, to transact some business, while his four steeds hitched to the wagon load of potatoes stood in wait. Something pertaining to city ways caused the animals to consider themselves safer in the elsewhere, and they immediately started for South Salem by the way of High street. They were making pretty good headway, considering the load, and had narrowly missed several vehicles, when Tommy Jones ran out near his feed yard, and, waving a pair of blue overalls over his head, induced the frightened horses to turn toward his stable, but, instead of going in, they crossed the side walk to the south and landed over the fence into Mr. Reynold's back yard. The potatoes were soon gathered up and the wagon hitched to the horses, that were not seriously hurt, and Farmer Ask again went on his way rejoicing.
