Some Fun Over Proposed Bird Laws
Will Makes Fight For Recall Amendment to Constitution

by my watch that it is time this house to order," said Mr. Davey, whom the house had presented with a gold watch.

house laughed, and then continued in a lot of senate amendments.

B. 104, Smith of Umatilla, to license for embalming dead bodies. Applicants must have the year's experience as embalmer. Reynolds pointed out that he could practice without an embalmer's license, and as they could practice without a license, they would not get a license without a license. It legalized those now in business and no one could get in. Lane, said no one could without a license in the foothills. Embalming bill was embodied. Motion to indefinitely postpone.

B. 115, Smith of Umatilla, to change county and municipal health laws and defines duties. Passed.

B. 216, Marion county delegate to increase salary county clerk 1908. Passed.

B. 419, King, to appropriate for a bridge across the Snake River. In committee of whole it was passed favorably. Mr. King said section of the state had been representing here for three years and had got nothing back. Bill was lost by 23 ayes, 26 noes.

B. 286, Burns, appropriates to import English nightingales, mockingbirds, etc. Favorably reported by Chairman Reynolds of committee on horticulture with amendments. Mr. Barrett said it useless to bring in birds for the growers to kill as a bill introduced. Mr. Davey said if we could induce these birds, warbling the only to be found in paradise. Those who had heard these birds sing in their native haunts in the islands could appreciate these birds and hear their songs they did not part with them for $50.

Mr. Burns also spoke for these birds which he had seen in Ireland. Mr. Perkins of Jackson, said these birds were not always living on the ground. He wanted the right to protect himself against the depredations of the birds. The birds would put some of them out of business. Mr. Purdy said this house would have to answer without throwing any money to the birds. He loved a skylark as much as a speaker Davey, but he was opposed to the appropriation. Mr. Purdy said these birds destroyed the apple and codling moth, of which they were deadly enemies. Mr. Purdy said no birds no fruit. Mr. Purdy at one time killed off the birds and nearly lost all her fruit. When the birds were restored they had fruit. Germany today had more birds than any country in the world and more fruit. The bill was further along as there were more uses than ayes.

Mr. Coffey stated that the senate was refusing to receive any bills from the house since last Monday night. He moved that the speaker appear before the senate and be heard as to the reasons for such action. Chief clerk instructed to notify the senate.

Mr. Davey appeared before the senate and made a statement of the position of the house and was given a hearing.

B. 166, Newell, more stringent law closing act, indefinitely postponed.

The committee on resolutions reported recommending Mr. Freeman's amendment as indirect or unfair methods of reporting the state laid bill.

The committee also reported recommending amendment to the constitution providing for recall of any official after period of six months. The resolution on adoption was defeated. Mr. Barrett objected to 25 per cent as a sufficient petition of recall. Mr. McCue said this power of recall was a dangerous precedent. It was considered opposition to a recall election. Mr. Newell said that a recall power would give the people a check over the railroad commission. If 25 per cent of the people petitioned to recall an official and if he did not want to resign he could face an election. It was a power the people would be slow to abuse. Mr. Jackson said it would destroy majority rule and substitute rule by a slight minority. Mr. King said it was pure socialism and it was indefinitely postponed.

Same committee killed printing 2000 copies fish laws and 4000 copies of game laws.

Concurrent resolution for printing copies of laws of this legislature and laws passed by the people proceedings of legislature and to be distributed. Adopted.

Mr. McCue moved to reconsider vote by which house refused to order publication of 2000 copies of fish laws. Mr. Coffey asked what it would cost? Mr. McCue plead for the publication of these pamphlets. Mr. Newell said if they printed the fish laws they would have to print for all departments. The resolution was defeated.

Resolution requiring publication of 5000 copies of Chapin law was discussed. Mr. Chapin moved that a price be put on the pamphlets. Mr. Perkins said the pamphlet should be free. Newell said the railroad commission could have all the printing done they wanted. Mr. Rodgers said the legislature alone could order copies of law printed. Chapin motion to re-refer was carried.

Senate concurrent resolution to appoint three representatives to act with the board of education to consider courses of study at state university and agricultural college, defeated.

For joint committee to confer with committee from Washington to investigate fisheries of Columbia, to be allowed no per diem or expenses, adopted.

Senate joint memorial relating to veterans of the Bannock war being reimbursed for losses at battle of Willow spring, adopted.

Senate concurred resolution relating to reciprocal demurrage adopted.

House concurrent resolution relating to water powers belonging to state be leased, adopted.

Senate returned house resolution for adjournment Saturday at noon without receding from its position.

Rodgers moved to adjourn to 10 a. m. Thursday.

Campbell objected as there were over a hundred bills to act on Rodgers motion lost.

S. B. 222, Bingham and Coshow, to regulate corrupt practices, indefinitely postponed.

Report of committee to visit state prison, read and adopted.

Report on Boys' and Girls' Aid society, read and adopted.

Klinger-Grand Theatre.

On Friday evening, February 22, the Margarita Fischer company will present the rural comedy drama "Down on the Farm." The play revolves around a tragedy in the life of Ruth Walton, an innocent country girl, who is inveigled into a mock marriage by an unscrupulous man of the world. She believes him her lawful husband until after the birth of a child, when she learns of his villainy. The child dies and is followed by Ruth's mother. Alone and broken hearted she starts out with the purpose of beginning life anew in a place where her past history is unknown. She goes to the country and is taken into the home of Martin Shaw, a Nebraska farmer, who believes in living up to a literal interpretation of the scriptures. For several months all goes well, when the reappearance of her villainous lover and the chattering of neighborhood gossip expose to her friends the hidden chapter of her life. Exciting climaxes follow this incident. Allen Shaw, the son of the farmer, who has fallen in love with Ruth, and Mabel Halstead, his cousin, prove strong champions of the girl, while there is arrayed strong against them the father and several neighbors and friends. All ends well in the last act, when the truth is finally understood and the curtain falls with others happy besides Ruth and Allen. Miss Fischer as Ruth Walton portraying the conflicting emotions which the part calls for, those of hatred for the cause of her downfall, remorse for her own innocent sin, and love for Allen, give her an excellent opportunity to show her versatility. There is a strong vein of comedy throughout the entire play that will keep the audience in good humor and is sure to please.

Tonight is the last performance of "La Belle Marie," if you have not been to see it go, you won't regret your time and money.

WORLD DEMANDS WATERWAYS

Up to State and Nation to Do Part in Solving Transportation

Washington, Feb. 21.—Notification from Russia that the Eleventh International Navigation congress is to be held there in May, 1908, has brought forcibly to the attention of the government the fact that waterway navigation is commanding the attention of the whole world. The forthcoming meeting, which is to be held in St. Petersburg, will be attended by delegates from every civilized nation and will lead to the most comprehensive discussion of water transportation that the question has ever received abroad. In forwarding the notification, Consul General Watts reports:

"The purpose of the congress is to create an increase of general interest in matters of navigation, naval construction and the importance of waterways; the study of theoretic and practical questions relating to hydro-technical construction (sea and river); the industrial commercial and technical exploitation of rivers and seaports. Reports on these subjects will be publicly discussed and scientific excursions organized in order to study hydrotechnical works, seaports and waterways in Russia."

This evidence that Russia is awakening to the necessity for developing its great navigable rivers is of especial interest at a time when the house has approved and the senate is considering the greatest appropriation bill ever framed for development work on the rivers and harbors of the United States. It goes to prove that the great commercial nations realize that they must undertake such development work if they are to be considered factors in the trade of the world. England, Germany and France long have recognized that thorough and steady development affords certain assurance of commanding positions in the foreign trade, and as a result these three nations have captured and are holding markets that rightfully belong to the United States.

Aside from the advantage gained by these foreign rivals in lower transportation charges, the fact that the railroads of this country are unable to handle promptly the enormous traffic of the United States is an added reason why world-markets are being wrested from American manufacturers. The national government has not been devoting funds sufficient to insure development of waterway transportation and, in his recent speech in the house, Congressman Joseph E. Ransdell of Louisiana, president of the National Rivers and Harbors congress, pointed out that in the past less than three per cent of the total appropriations of the government have been devoted to internal improvements. In an appeal for fair recognition of this important work, he said:

"I earnestly implore you to study this great subject of waterway improvement, to my mind the most important one today before the American people, and use your great influence in and out of congress in favor of a broad and liberal, and truly national policy toward our waterways, in favor of an annual rivers and harbors bill carrying $50,000,000 every year."

Mr. Ransdell's appeal was greeted with loud applause, disclosing the new and favoring attitude taken by congress in respect to the question. It is not known yet whether the national government or the National Rivers and Harbors congress will appoint delegates to the Russian meeting, but it is altogether probable that some such action will be taken.

JACOB MILEY DIES

An Old Pioneer of Aurora Passes Away Suddenly

Aurora, Ore., Feb. 21.—Jacob Miley, residing near this city, died Sunday, February 17, of heart failure. He was sitting in a rocking chair talking to his wife and brother, William, and had just lighted a cigar when he suddenly pitched forward, and fell from his chair dead. The funeral was held from the family residence Tuesday, and the remains were interred in the Aurora cemetery. The funeral procession, which was headed by the Aurora band, was one of the largest ever known in this section.

Jacob Miley was born near Columbus, Ohio, September 25, 1838. He emigrated to Missouri in 1847, and joined the Bethel colony at Bethel, Mo. After living a few years there he left and went to Nineve, Mo., where he was married to Elizabeth Miller, Nov. 15, 1863. There were seven children born to them, five boys and two girls, of which number two boys were taken from them by death. In 1865 he came to Oregon and located on the home place where he resided until his death. In 1876 he lost his wife through death, and after remaining single for about seven years he married Mrs. Weyman, which union was childless. At the time of his death Mr. Miley was 68 years, 4 months and 22 days old. He leaves a widow, three sons, two daughters, and three grand children and many friends to mourn his loss.

Dr. Stone can be found at his drug store, Salem, Oregon, from 6 in the morning until 9 at night.

Four brothers and two sisters survive him, John Miley, who lives at Fegley, Mo., William Miley of Aurora, Henry Miley of Sullivan county, Co., Mrs. Kate Steinbach of Aurora, Mrs. Emma Erich of Bethel, Mo.

Mr. Jacob Miley was an exemplary citizen, a good neighbor, a staunch and true friend, a faithful husband and affectionate father and this community suffers a great loss by his demise.

A singular thing in connection with Mr. Miley's death is what his brother, William, told your correspondent. He had not been to his brother Jacob's house for over four years, but Saturday night something seemed to say to him that he should go and see him, and the presentiment was so strong and vivid that he went out to the farm Sunday forenoon, and it was at 3 o'clock in the afternoon while talking to him that Mr. Miley suddenly died.
