STILL WANT IMMIGRANTS.

Shaker City Democrat: The annual year, the three hundredth anniversary of the first English immigrants on American soil, will probably see a greater number of newcomers than any year the 300 has known. There are many people that are convinced that there should be further restrictions on immigration and measures to that end have been introduced and submitted to congress. However may be needed in this way cannot be denied that we can absorb and assimilate many more desirable aliens. The immediate need seems to be of some method of regulating the distribution of the immigrants that land at Ellis island. Virtually no effort has been made to induce these people to go where they are most welcome. It is as much for their own interest as for that of the country that they should be placed, not where they would over crowd the industries in which they may engage but where there is a positive scarcity of such labor as they have to sell.

Recently the southern states have expressed a desire that the flow of immigration should turn in that direction. There is no lack of ordinary skilled laborers. The negroes supply the demand at a price which white labor cannot compete against. With the remarkable development of manufacturers comes a competition which makes immigration desirable if not a necessity—an industry and thirty class of workers need a great variety of employment. As are the appeals from that section they meet with little encouragement. The fact of the presence of the south of millions of colored laborers is fatal to a mere invitation. It will be necessary for the south to maintain agents at the ports of arrival to represent the situation as it is.

The northwest has been a chosen destination for the best class of immigrants and they have aided immensely in its development. Of the more recent comers, too large a part find lodgement in the great cities where people are crowded into tenements and have the poorest chance to enjoy the best fruits of the life of freedom which this country affords.

A bill is now before the legislature of Wisconsin which creates a state board of immigration. Its first duty will be to publish bulletins describing the undeveloped resources of the commonwealth. These are to be given to the country advancement associations to be distributed according to their discretion. Also an agent to be maintained at Ellis island, to circulate the bulletins among the arriving strangers. It is expected that through the county societies the many naturalized citizens who have done so much to promote the prosperity of the state will send the descriptive matter, which will be in various tongues, to their former homes abroad and will thus allure people of the same class. Periodically a more comprehensive pamphlet will be issued especially for circulation abroad. It is through the agency of the established immigrants that Wisconsin hopes to attract a most desirable addition to its population.

The Guard is at a loss to understand why Governor George Chamberlain has so suddenly discovered that he is not in favor of higher education. He is himself a university man and has always given out the impression that he would in every possible manner encourage the building up of an institution here that would be a credit to the state and meet its growing needs in every respect, and yet he has blocked the first earnest effort to place the university on a proper footing and makes the improvements necessary to take care of the increasing enrollment.

We cannot believe that the governor is playing politics with the state university and that his veto is merely a gallery play to appeal to those voters whose stinginess exceeds their love for education advantages and pride in the highest ideals of state development and character.

And yet this veto act has that appearance on its face.

The state university has been given only meager support since its foundation when compared with similar institutions of other states. Its buildings are cheap and inadequate, and its comparatively high standing has been gained, under adverse circumstances, solely on account of thorough, conscientious work by its faculty, despite their under pay and lack of encouragement. This condition can exist no longer, because the increased population of Oregon has brought a larger enrollment in all departments, and created also a demand for new departments that call for a larger faculty and better salaries in many instances, where the best of talent and scholarship is needed. The board of regents, composed of nine of the state's most prominent citizens, realized that the tie had come for proper recognition on the part of the state and made estimates of the needed appropriations far in excess of the amount called for in Mr. Eaton's bill. In this view they were supported by almost the entire membership of both houses of the legislature who visited the university, inspected its present facilities and carefully considered its necessities. Against the convictions of all these men the governor sets his own personal opinion and goes on record as opposing the granting of the same advantages to the ambitious young men and women of Oregon, that he was able to acquire in the heavily endowed university of another state.

Of course the Salem Journal and the Salem state senator, Tom Kay, oppose this appropriation. They want to save the money of the taxpayers—so that most of it may biennially be spent on the state institutions of the capital city. The bill for appropriating $40,000 for enlarging the capitol grounds and buying a mansion for the governor is approved, of course, and so is every one of the other "grants" that have been from time immemorial worked through the legislature with clock-like regularity. But the Journal and Tom Kay are shocked when a dollar is "wasted" on education—minds of such men usually are, because all the education in the world concentrated upon them would fail to raise them up to the normal calibre.

Then we have the morning paper of Eugene. Only the other day it criticised the governor and held him personally responsible for the excessive state appropriations. If the governor saw a copy of that issue he probably concluded to apply the old rule, "charity begins at home." The Guard deplored the stand taken by its contemporary at the time, because it is not a good rule in this enlightened day to try to make political capital out of the serious business of government. Consistently, the morning paper should commend the governor for heeding its advice.

The people of Eugene are not interested in the university merely as a local institution; they are not advocating large appropriations in order to boom real estate values or build up business interests here on state appropriations. Their love for the university is honest and sincere, because close association with its membership and thorough knowledge of the splendid work it has done through years of honest, conscientious effort has bred almost a reverence for the institution that has sent so many students out into the world to become useful, and in many instances, distinguished citizens of the state. Its work in the past speaks for itself in every walk and calling of Oregon's public and private life—it is that more of this work may be done that recognition is asked of the state government.

Hunting for Trouble.

"I've lived in California 20 years, and am still hunting for trouble in the way of burns, sores, wounds, boils, cuts, sprains, or a case of piles that Bucklen's Arnica Salve won't quickly cure," writes Charles Walters, of Alleghany, Sierra Co. No use hunting, Mr. Walters; it cures every case. Guaranteed at J. C. Jerry's drug store; 25c.

"THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN."

Popular George Ade Drama Drew Large Crowd Last Evening.

"The County Chairman," the most popular and the most American of any of the plays written by George Ade was the attraction last evening at the Grand opera house. It drew one of the biggest audiences of the season and it was perhaps the most representative Salem audience that has been in the opera house this year. It was composed altogether of people who went to see the play and enjoy themselves.

This delightful comedy has been west at least once during the last few years but until last evening passed Salem by. Mr. Meredith was fortunate in securing it this time. It was especially suitable during the legislature season while the air is replete with politics and the play has more or less politics in it.

As is very well understood the play does not carry the original cast this season but the people selected to play the leading parts were well cast and are actors and actresses of more than mediocre ability. During this tour of the Pacific northwest the company succeeded in pleasing everybody except the dramatic critic of the Portland Oregonian, who by the way is understood to be an Indian himself and perhaps may feel a little local jealousy on account of the growing popularity of the playwright, now that Ade is being heard from outside of his own township.

Nearly the entire membership of the Oregon legislature was in the audience last evening and each and every one of the solons enjoyed the play. This was marked on the part of the older men as the scenes, expressions, slang and music of the late '70s and early '80s appealed strongly to them.

Salem is getting better. It will patronize a good show and it will do it two nights in succession as was the case this week.

Women Who Wear Well.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life often make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliancy vanish like the bloom from a peach which is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women appreciate the shock to the system through the change which comes with marriage and motherhood. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant pelvic drains and weaknesses which too often come with marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate woman's organs, so surely when these organs are established in health the face and form at once witness the fact in renewed comeliness. Nearly a million women have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Ingredients on label—contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs. Made wholly of those native American medicinal roots most highly recommended by leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

For nursing mothers, or for those broken down in health by too frequent bearing of children, also for the expectant mothers, to prepare the system for the coming of baby and making its advent easy and almost painless, there is no medicine quite so good as "Favorite Prescription." It can do no harm in any condition of the system. It is a most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nerve nicely adapted to woman's delicate system by a physician of large experience in the treatment of woman's peculiar ailments.
