

GOVERNOR VETOED 12 BILLS YESTERDAY

These Are Merely a Forerunner of What Is Coming Today and Tomorrow

The governor vetoed 12 bills yesterday. Besides those printed in The Journal which he returned without his disapproval before The Journal went to press, he returned last night six other bills with the official veto.

These are:

S. B. 77, Hodson, relating to the sale of land under the Carey act.

S. B. 88, Beverman, relating to the Seventh Agricultural District society.

S. B. 198, McDonald, relating to the First Agricultural society.

S. B. 96, Johnson road law.

S. B. 166, relating to Eastern Agricultural society.

H. B. 245, causing partners to reveal interest in business.

H. B. 260, Belknap, First Oregon Agricultural society.

In his message the governor gives reasons for the vetoes.

In bill 260 he says:

"The further extension of these societies is of doubtful propriety in view of the fact that those already created are asking for increased appropriations at each recurring session of the legislature. If the policy now in vogue of increasing these societies continues, the time is not far distant when every county will be created into an agricultural society district, and each will thereafter beseege the legislature for increased appropriations.

"The purpose, in part of these associations is the display of the agricultural, horticultural and other resources of the state, work which is being done most effectually at institutes held by the farmers in all or nearly all of the counties in the state in the course of each year at practically no expense to the state."

Regarding H. B. 245, he says:

"The tendency in modern legislation it seems to me, is to interfere too much with the private business and affairs of individuals, and I can not see any reason why the terms of this act should be made to apply to many old and well established business houses in the state. There are many in every city that are doing business under some name or designation disclosing no member of the firm or persons interested therein, and yet their financial standing is fixed definite and certain. If those who are doing business with them desire to ascertain the names of the proprietors, it is not difficult to ascertain them, and in those few cases where this information is refused no prudent business man can or will do business with them or extend to them credit; I do not see the necessity for such an act either for the protection of the people generally or the business men in particular, and I therefore return the same with my veto."

S. B. 166, provides for the establishment of an agricultural society. The governor questions the advisability of these societies and says in conclusion:

"The further extension of these societies is of doubtful propriety in view of the fact that those already created are asking for increased appropriations at each recurring session of the legislature. If the policy now in vogue of increasing these societies continues, the time is not far distant when every county will be created into an agricultural society district, and each will thereafter beseege the legislature for increased appropriations.

"The purposes, in part, of these associations is the display of the agricultural, horticultural and other resources of the state, work which is being done most effectually at institutes held by the farmers in all or nearly all of the counties in the state in the course of each year at practically no expense to the state. But horse racing is usually made the most prominent feature of many of the fairs held under the auspices of these societies, and I question very much if the good done by them in the way of displaying the resources of field, farm and range justifies their further extension, or the constantly increasing appropriations asked for their support."

Regarding the Johnson road law the governor says:

"First. There is no power vested either in the state authorities through the highway commission or the engineer provided for in the act, to initiate proceedings to improve or build a highway in any of the counties in the state, neither have any of the county authorities power to initiate such proceedings. This power rests solely with the property owners within two miles on either side of the highway proposed to be improved and those within one mile beyond the terminus of such highway. The power of initiative should be vested either in the commission or in the county authorities or in both as well as in the property owners along the highway to be improved.

"Second. Because of this lack of power the result may and probably will be that a large fund will be drawn each year from the taxpayers and continue to be accumulated in the vaults of the state treasury. It may safely be predicted that, laboring under the present heavy burden of taxation, no property owners in the state along any highway there-of, will seek voluntarily to impose upon himself burdens in addition to those he is now compelled to bear. If the law is to remain in its present shape a very much smaller tax should have been levied to inaugurate a system which in the very nature of things must be problematical, leaving room to extend this system if future demands might justify.

"Third. A more serious objection than those stated is to be found in the fact that when the amount to be assessed against the abutting property owner is determined and becomes established as a fixed lien, the county treasurer upon an order of the county court executes non-taxable certificates therefor, certifying the sum assessed against each tract of land, which certificates are payable in installments of one, two, three, four five and six years from date with interest at a rate not to exceed six per cent per annum payable annually. If any installment is not paid when due the whole certificate becomes due and payable and the holder thereof may sue to foreclose the lien, recover his debt and reasonable attorney fees in addition.

"Money and evidences of debt of every kind escape largely the tax gatherer without laws of exemption. A law which has for its purpose the raising of so large a sum of money as that proposed to be raised by the bill under consideration ought not to exempt the interest bearing certificates issued thereunder from taxation. Those who can afford to buy the certificates ought to be willing to bear their just proportion of the burdens of government. Any measure which exempts such property from taxation is vicious in the very nature of things and I cannot give my approval to it.

"The taxes that have been imposed upon the people by the legislature which has just adjourned are larger than they ever have been in the history of the state, new burdens have been added and no new subjects brought within the taxing power and hence there is all the more reason for withholding my approval from this bill in the present emergency."

The reason for vetoing S. B. 198 were based on S. B. 166.

The reasons in S. B. 88, were also contained in the veto 166.

S. B. 77 was also vetoed.

The governor said that in the absence of the irrigation code which was defeated at the present session this law is ill-advised.

The Longfellow Centennial.

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 27.—The 100th anniversary of the birth of Henry W. Longfellow is being celebrated here today with great ceremony. The Historical society of Cambridge has planned extensive memorial exercises and public exercises will be held in Sanders theatre tonight. The principal addresses will be delivered by William Dean Howells, President Charles W. Elliott of Harvard college, Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson and Prof. Elliott Norton of Harvard. The cantata, "The Village Blacksmith," adapted from the poem of Longfellow, will be sung by a chorus selected from the public schools of Cambridge. The entire day in the public schools will be a "Longfellow Day," and appropriate exercises will be held in each school, which will include brief addresses and the reading of essays upon the poet's life and work, written by the students. A "Children's Hour" in the new lecture hall will include the children's portfolio exhibition was opened in the fellow exhibition was opened in the Cambridge public library this morning. It consists of portraits, early and rare editions from private collections, autographs copies of some of the poet's works and manuscripts, an original oil painting of Longfellow by Badger, about 1837, shoes of Darlecarlian peasant, spoken of in Frithlaf's Saga, brought by Longfellow on his return fro Europe in 1837 and given to him by an English nobleman, Longfellow afterwards presented these to Prof Norton, who now lends them for exhibition. There is also a bronze plaque portrait of Longfellow; a letter to James Russell Lowell, accompanying his poem on Longfellow; first edition of poems; bust of Longfellow; original portrait of Longfellow and his daughter Edith, by Healy; original manuscript of "The Children's Hour"; original proof sheets of "Hawatha," with many corrections in Longfellow's handwriting; "Poems of Slavery," first edition, 1842, presentation copy given to Nathaniel Hawthorne; "Outre Mer," two volumes, 1855, Hawthorne's copy, with autograph in each volume; Healy's portrait of Longfellow and a portrait of the first Mrs. Longfellow. A small commemorative volume was issued today containing a hitherto unpublished paper in the nature of a sketch of the poet, by Prof. C. E. Norton, together with some of the shorter poems of Longfellow, particularly such as are autobiographical in character. A large paper edition has been issued, limited in number, but an inexpensive popular one is also published to bring the work within the grasp of school children. A commemorative bronze medal has been struck from a design by Bela L. Pratt and two hundred copies have been issued. From this number a few copies are to be reserved, so that hereafter they may be awarded, one each year, under the auspices of the Cambridge Historical society, as prizes for essays upon the poet's life and work to be written by the pupils of the schools of Cambridge.

London, Feb. 27.—In honor of the Longfellow centennial the members of the British Literary society will hold a banquet tonight which will be attended by all the prominent literary men in England. All over the county "Evangeline," "The Song of Hawatha," and "The Village Blacksmith" are known the great poet's memory is being duly honored.

TO THE PEOPLE OF SALEM. A PROCLAMATION G. W. PUTNAM CO., PHARMACISTS

Inasmuch as it has always been our policy to take the people of Salem into our confidence in all matters pertaining to VINOL, it is with pleasure that we are here able to present an illustrated exhibit of the process through which VINOL passes in its manufacture.

This exhibit not only demonstrates the fact that VINOL is a real scientific preparation made from fresh cods' livers, but shows by illustration every ingredient of which VINOL is made. This proves to the people of Salem that VINOL not only complies with all conditions of the new Pure Food and Drugs Law, but always has done so, inasmuch as its ingredients have always been made public and its qualifications never misrepresented.

We are sorry we cannot print in the Journal this exhibit in the natural colors of the material contained in the different jars. We have a booklet showing this exhibit lithographed in colors, a copy of which we will be glad to hand to anyone asking for it at our store. These newspaper illustrations, however, will serve to assure our customers and friends that VINOL is in no way a secret preparation, but is as ethical as any preparation put up or prescribed by anyone.

THE DELICIOUS COD LIVER PREPARATION WITHOUT OIL

HOW VINOL IS MADE

FROM FRESH COD'S LIVER

The Chopped Cod's Liver Showing the Separation of the Oil

A Fresh Five Pound Cod's Liver Containing All Its Natural Oil from which are procured the Valuable Medicinal Extractives used in making VINOL

VINOL the Finished Preparation, Containing the Concentrated Extract of the Cod's Liver and Solution of Iron Peptonate in pure native wine

¶ In making VINOL, the Fresh Cod's Livers go through the several stages represented by these illustrations, reproduced from the originals, all of which proves that VINOL is a real Cod Liver preparation, made by a scientific process which eliminates the oil and retains the valuable medicinal extractives.

We ask you to study this exhibit so you will fully understand how the valuable medicinal extractives are recovered from genuine fresh cods' livers and the unnecessary oil omitted. This will show you positively that VINOL is not made of drugs or chemicals which are said to resemble the medicinal elements found in cod liver oil, but that VINOL actually does contain in a highly concentrated form all the medicinal extractives of cod liver oil, actually taken from genuine fresh cods' livers, together with organic iron—a constituent for the blood—dissolved in a pure native wine as a preservative. VINOL, unlike oily preparations, is easily digested and agreeable to the weakest stomach. For these reasons we believe VINOL is far superior to old-fashioned cod-liver oil and emulsions for coughs, colds, bronchitis and throat and lung troubles, and as a body builder and strength creator for old people, delicate children, run-down persons and after sickness.

Know, therefore, all persons who are in need of such a medicine that we will supply them with VINOL on a positive guarantee that if it does not succeed in benefitting them, we will refund the entire amount of money paid us for the medicine.

You see OUR FAITH in VINOL, and you must admit that we know something about medicine; therefore, when we tell you that VINOL is the most valuable Cod Liver preparation on the market, and a wonderful tonic-reconstructor and builder of strength, appetite and health at the same time delicious to take we are not unreasonable to expect you to believe us.
