FACTS REGARDING REMEDY

Relieves Rheumatism and Any One Can Mix It

Cut this out and put in some safe place, for it is valuable and worth more than anything else in the world if you should have an attack of rheumatism or bladder trouble or any derangement of the kidneys whatever.

The prescription is simple, and can be made up by anyone at home. The ingredients can be had at every good prescription pharmacy and all that is necessary to shake well in a bottle.

Here it is: Fluid extract dandelion, one-half ounce; compound Kargon, one ounce; compound syrup of sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime. A few doses is said to relieve almost any case of bladder trouble, frequent urination, pain and scalding, weakness and backache, pain above the kidneys, etc. It is now claimed to be the method of curing chronic rheumatism, because of its direct and positive action upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys. It cleanses these sponge-like organs and gives them life and power to sift and strain the poisonous waste matter and uric acid from the blood, relieving the worst forms of rheumatism and kidney and bladder troubles. The extract dandelion acts upon the stomach and liver and is used also extensively for relieving constipation and indigestion. Compound sarsaparilla cleans and enriches the blood.

As you or anyone of your family, especially the old folks, may be attacked at any time it would be wise to cut this out and save it.

A well known local druggist is authority that this prescription is safe to use at any time.

Mix it yourself.

MISS ESTHER KUNSTLER.

A Clever Lawyer Who Helps New York's East Side Poor.

New York's east side has a successful Portia, and she is only twenty-two years of age. She rarely loses a case and has become champion for the defense of hundreds not only in the police courts, but in the supreme court. The name of this girl lawyer is Esther Kunstler, and she occupies a cozy office with up to date furnishings at 138 Rivington street.

The girl is becoming famous for court room repartee. "She talks to judge and witness in a "winning" manner, and her witticisms keep everybody in good humor. She generally creates somewhat of a sensation when she appears

MISS ESTHER KUNSTLER.

In any court for the first time, looking more like a schoolgirl than a lawyer, in simple dress.

As she speaks six languages fluently, her list of clients grows steadily. Many of the east side poor whose rights she has championed look upon her as a sort of angel on earth.

Miss Kunstler was born in a small town in Austria and has been in this country fourteen years. When only twelve years of age she began to study the big law books in her father's office, Felix Kunstler being a well known notary public on Rivington street. A little more than a year ago she was admitted to the bar. She loves her profession, and her father says it is hardly likely that she will ever abandon it to marry. On this question, however, Miss Kunstler is uncommunicative.

"My work is my life," she said. "I am happiest when I am defending one of my clients. It is a great work, and it is hard work, and I hope to make my mark some day."—New York Globe.

Don't Remain a Seamstress.

I believe that I have met more unhappy, sickly women among dressmakers and seamstresses than in any other two trades put together. It takes a girl of exceptional will power and physical endurance not to degenerate physically and nervously in this trade. The close confinement, the cramped posture in which you work, the constant strain on eyes, first affect the appetite and then the general health. The girl beyond you cannot stand a draft, so the window is closed, and you get not a breath of God's pure air. The proprietor of the establishment can save rent by selecting a dull, electric lighted workroom, and so you are deprived of God's health giving sunlight. Do not go into a workroom unless you are firmly resolved to bend every energy to getting out of it again—that is, you must determine to learn as rapidly as possible and utilize the knowledge thus gained on broader lines than eight or ten hours spent under the dictation of a forewoman who will drain your lifeblood if necessary to meet the exactions of a wealthy patron.—Anna Steese Richardson in Woman's Home Companion.

The Art of Chatting.

Can you chat? Of course you think you can, but can you? The more you think of it the more you think you could if you would.

Not all of us even know what it is, says the Philadelphia Record. Of a truth, it is not mere talking. Neither does it approach the art of conversation. Conversation, if there be people capable of it, makes fascinating and stately entertainment.

Chatting is different.

Above all, it gets away from speaking on any special subject or hobby. Not that it may not dwell upon one topic, though should it do so it must sparkle from many different viewpoints. Above all, it must not be monologous. The woman who talks continuously of her ailments or servants and the man who never rests his hobby can neither of them chat. In real chat there's the element of the unexpected, the sport of chasing vagrant ideas that are based on everyday topics in which the company joins generally. It's a charming, informal accomplishment, as endearing as mediocre formality is chilling.

Voluntary Well Doing.

Children do many things that they are not told to do, and many of such things are worthy of a little notice. You cannot hope to direct a child in all his doings that are purely "free will" on his part. Many of them you will not see or know of until done. If

DUNBAR ASKED TO SHOW BOOKS

In the Suit to Compel Return of Fees Collected

Salem special: L. H. McMahon sprung a surprise in the Sears-Dunbar suit by serving a summons upon Mr. Dunbar, commanding him to appear before the county clerk at 10 a. m. next Tuesday, bring all his account and bank books, and answer questions under oath concerning the fees collected by him while secretary of state. This proceeding is taken under a statute very little used, and not very generally known, permitting either party to a suit, before time for answer has expired, to compel the other to give a deposition before a justice of the peace of a clerk of the court regarding the facts in issue.

McMahon's move is evidently the direct result of a motion filed yesterday by George G. Bingham, requesting that Sears be required to state more definitely what fees he alleges Mr. Dunbar received, from whom, at what times and for what purpose. This information Sears alleged in his complaint he did not possess, and now he is endeavoring to compel Dunbar to furnish the data desired.

Unless the defense finds some way to block this move on the part of the plaintiff, the hearing on Tuesday will probably be an interesting one. In any event, the legal battle seems in a fair way to commence immediately, instead of waiting the usual formalities. If McMahon can compel Dunbar to produce his books and answer questions under oath in a proceeding of this kind, all the evidence on the question at issue will be produced before the case comes to trial upon its merits.

Trick on a Lawyer.

W. R. Anderson, one of the lively young business men of this city, has a habit of playing practical jokes on his friends, and this time he came near getting a row on his hands. He had been having a lot of legal business attended to by a Salem lawyer, Hon. Wm. Kaiser, and the disciple of Blackstone did not send in any bill. Mr. Anderson was laboring under the impression that something must be wrong if a lawyer did not present his bill, and thought his family might be out of wood or groceries. So he wrapped up a ten-dollar bill and sent it through the mail to Mrs. Kaiser. She was surprised to receive such a letter from a man with whom she is not acquainted, and turned it over to her husband, who came very near handing the matter over to the police. Finally he was able to make out the signature and hunted up his client, and explanations followed. The matter for a time looked pretty serious for Mr. Anderson, who has a habit of getting into trouble furnishing family supplies to poor people.

Drugs

Sometimes one gets "bitten" by buying where he thinks he can get the best at the cheapest price. It is always wisest to be first sure of the quality, and then study the price proposition afterwards. We first aim at giving the public pure drugs, and compounding them carefully and correctly according to prescription. Then we fix the price to allow ourselves the smallest margin of working profit thereon. That is why our store is so popular.
