KUROKI CAPTURES THE CITY

Japanese Invade the National Capital in Full Force

Washington, May 17.—Beyond the scene of military and civic pageants, it is doubtful if a conquering hero ever was accorded a more rousing and cordial reception than that which the doughty Japanese general, Baron Kuroki, was accorded at the national capital the other day. The streets were thronged with the curious who were anxious to catch a glimpse of the distinguished general and his staff, and crowds gathered about the entrance of the New Willard, where he held the big reception tendered by Secretary of War Taft. The city has been more or less thronged with uniformed foreign officers ever since the opening of the westward exposition, but on the arrival of the Japanese representatives at the big fair, the city took on a metropolitan appearance, officers and representatives of so many different nations being attracted here as a result. After being received by President Roosevelt and dined and feted by Secretary of War Taft, the visitors were scattered in groups of twos and threes to take in the points of interest of the nation's capital. In the case of the officers of higher rank, staff officers from the war department followed their guests around, but one of the officers of lower rank started out for themselves. Two of these officers after wandering along Pennsylvania avenue from the treasury to the capitol, found their way into the famous Harvey's restaurant, known to epicures as the best place in the world for sea foods. Having no doubt heard of the toothsome of the Chesapeake bay water, they took seats at a table and gave their orders for steamed oysters. On being served they found among the bivalves several baby oysters, about the size of a dime, which they found their way into the shells. The oysters during their life and which are considered dainties by those who know. Calling the waiter, the spokesman protested vigorously with the best English at his command against being served with filthy food, or as he expressed it, oysters infested with "bugs and vermin." At the entrance of the Japanese had attracted no little attention, and as his excitement, the indignant dental spoke very loudly, the diners adjacent tables were let in on the joke, which they enjoyed immensely. The ancient negro waiter was somewhat nonplused for an explanation.

Ask your doctor about the wisdom of your keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, ready for colds, coughs, croup, bronchitis. If he says it's all right, then get a bottle of it at once. Why not show a little foresight in such matters? Early treatment, early cure. We have no secret! We publish the formulas of all our preparations. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

but matters were soon set right by the proprietor, who explained the presence of the tiny crustaceans and assured his patrons that they were "something very fine." Thus assured, they gingerly nibbled at the crabs and on settling their bill pronounced them exceedingly palatable.

Is the United States to be outdone in the matter of water transportation now that it has taken up vigorously the question of improving its inland streams and its great harbors so as to admit of the quickened flow of its ever-increasing commerce? This is a question which improved waterway enthusiasts are asking themselves, having reference to the recently-issued consular report on experiments, which for a number of years have been under way in England, Germany and France, to determine the feasibility of the "electric" canal and its possibilities in the way of reducing the costs of freight carriage on inland canals. The report states that the total cost of electrical haulage per ton mile on the canal at Douai, France, is somewhat less than one-tenth of one cent, with a traffic of 3,500,000 tons per annum. One-third of this cost is for the actual energy used for barges while the remainder goes for upkeep charges on the plant, including labor, repairs, etc. These figures offer the strongest kind of argument in support of the contention of the National Rivers and Harbor congress that water transportation is infinitely cheaper than that by rail. This organization began five years ago to urge upon congress and the public the imperative necessity for immediately undertaking a steady and scientific improvement of the great rivers and harbors of the United States, if this country is not to be outstripped by its European competitors in the race for commercial and trade supremacy. So widespread have been the results of its crusade that the Fifty-ninth congress appropriated a record-breaking sum for work of this character, while President Roosevelt appointed a commission to supervise the enormous task involved. However, the National Rivers and Harbors congress insists that the amount appropriated by the last congress practically will be wasted unless future congresses can be impressed with the vital importance to the country of continued and regular appropriations. To the end that it may be successful, this national organization, which is non-partisan and non-political and which already numbers on its rolls many of the nation's most prominent men, is seeking to increase its membership during the coming summer. Its secretary, Captain J. F. Ellison, of Cincinnati, has sent broadcast an invitation to all persons interested in reduced freight rates to join his organization and swell its slogan—$50,000,000 a year for at least ten years.

President Roosevelt had the temerity to again defy precedent the other day, and he postponed the regular cabinet meeting that he might take advantage of the glorious spring weather and slip away for a long horseback ride through Rock Creek park. He spent several hours on a long cross-country ride and in taking the hurdles in the park.
