

When You Take Cold

SENATOR BOURNE'S INTERVIEW

Senator Bourne's Interview.

Efficiency as a public servant, the rights of all the people, the anxiety to carry out their demands, are the true causes of people's confidence in President Roosevelt, rather than any emotional appeal for the man.

The people believe that a tremendous struggle is in progress between those aggregations of corporate wealth designated as the "interests," on one side, and themselves on the other, and recognize that the president has proved a just, heroic, effective defender of their rights against the predatory exploitation of wealth, and they fully believe that in this struggle between government and the "interests," although the President's work has been speedy, and as effective as was possible to be and be kept within the bounds of law, yet no one undertaking had been completed, the relative rights and powers of people must inevitably result in the issuing a peremptory command that President Roosevelt serve them a second elective term.

The prattle about an endorsement of Roosevelt and his policies is not complimentary to the intelligence of national electorate. There are Roosevelt policies. They are the policies, demanded by them decades. Certainly, the people endorse their own policies.

People Command, Not Ask. The people are not asking the president or any other individual to do they shall do, but they are demanding the President as their public servant to carry out their wishes. The idea that the president is attempting, or will attempt to designate to the nation who shall be his successor, is an insult to the intelligence, integrity and independence of the citizenship of the nation, as well as to the President himself. In my humble opinion, the president will practically unanimously stand that President Roosevelt will serve their interests and his duty for a second elective term. He succeeded to three and a half years of President McKinley's term, during that time carried out McKinley's promises; thus in effect in truth, President Roosevelt's election in 1908 will be his first election and his second term only.

One way is to pay no attention to it; at least, not until it develops into pneumonia, or bronchitis, or pleurisy. Another way is to ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. If he says, "The best thing for colds," then take it. Do as he says, anyway. We have no secrets! We publish the formulae of all our preparations. T. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

This demand will be made, not on the assumption that he will originate new theories, but that he will persistently and by the most direct methods carry out the wishes and commands of the people.

"Any man honored by the people in their selection, and elected the Chief Executive of this nation, in his acceptance of the nomination gives an implied obligation that he waives his own personal interests and wishes, and agrees to serve the people to the best of his ability, as long as the people may demand such service.

Can Rescind Declaration. "The puerile claim advanced by the reactionaries that he cannot rescind his post-election declaration is untenable. His whole public life gives the lie to this claim. He will not place his own personal wishes and desires as paramount to the commands of the nation, nor does he possess such small mental or moral caliber as to prefer a mistaken consistency of purpose in adhering to a declaration given in 1904, rather than obedience to the commands of the people and requested patriotic service for our country's welfare. Posterity would construe such a declaration as evidence of false vanity or timidity, based on fear of criticism for misnamed inconsistency. The President's declaration made in 1904 I believe, arose from his laudable, though in my humble opinion mistaken, assumption that by so doing he would increase his efficiency as a public servant by the elimination of suspicion that his executive actions were based on a desire for political retention in office, rather than unselfish desire for the nation's welfare.

"My advocacy of President Roosevelt for a second elective term is based entirely upon the firm conviction that it is the wish of a great majority of the electorate of my State, and because I am equally convinced that it is of the greatest possible importance for the best interests of the nation.

This interview is given without consultation with any one."

Growing Aches and Pains.
Mrs. Josie Sumner, Bremond, Tex. writes, April 15, 1902: "I have used Ballard's Snow Liniment in my family for three years. I would not be without it in the house. I have used it on my little girl for growing pains and aches in her knees. I have also used it for frost bitten feet, with good success. It is the best liniment I ever used." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by D. J. Fry.

"Limit" Girls Entertain.
The young ladies who live at the "Limits" on State street last Saturday evening entertained the gentlemen of the "Dew Drop Inn" and a few invited guests with music, games and a delicious luncheon. At a late hour the merry-makers serenaded several of their university friends with college songs and appropriate yells. Those present say they had a delightful time and that the Limit girls are clever entertainers.
