

The Newest and Best

The old Ayer's Hair Vigor was good, no question about that. But your own doctor, the one you have great confidence in, will tell you that Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, is far better. The one great specific for falling hair and dandruff. We publish the formulas of all our preparations.

SMILES

A man with a mortgage on his farm and five or six children to send to the public schools will have to be prepared to dig up twenty or thirty dollars for the luxury of having a textbook Commission composed of men who have no mortgages and few children. Moral: It is wise to have neither mortgages nor children in Oregon.

In 1895 appropriations by the legislature were $1,350,000; in 1903 they were $1,750,000; in 1907 they were $3,500,000. Gee whizz, how Tom Richardson is making the state grow. Since he has arrived appropriations have doubled and then gone some $500,000. Portland leads the whole state and stands for all the granta. The rest of the state is not doubling in population nor values of land except on the assessor's books. We're getting population as fast as we are losing people who go to Portland to live, and we are pretty near holding our own out in the interior. Some of the towns and counties are losing population, but all that is necessary is to raise state taxes and make a little more expensive to send children to the common schools, and now we will boom. Here's the ticket: For Governor, Tom Richardson; for Secretary of State, Frank Davey; for U. S. Senator, W. S. U'Ren.

(From the Eugene Guard.) Attorney-General Crawford in his opinion of the university referendum gives some excellent reasons why the alleged petitions should not be accepted by the secretary of state. It will be hard for doddering old Til Ford, who never was lawyer enough to hurt, to convince a court that the petitions are properly drawn, or represent any considerable sentiment in the state that is opposed to the proper encouragement of higher education. Everybody knows that if Linn county was fenced in it would be the greatest freak museum on earth, and more kinds of political contortionists than anybody ever saw before in a circust dream. When a hard-headed judge looks over those scrawls the only "liberal" construction he will be able to put on the affair "will be to refrain from ordering Til Ford and Eugene Palmer committed to some quiet dippy retreat, not so overcrowded with patients as Linn county or the Waldo Hills neighborhood. This appeal to court by the disappointed petitioners would only be regarded as a bluff if coming from reasonable men; these men will probably go ahead with their ridiculous proceedings because they lack the sense to know when they are beaten.

at the seat of the university shows a high status of culture prevailing up that way, but like some other communities, its sins should not be laid at the door of its newspapers. Linn county cannot measure up with Lane in intelligence anyhow, as it has nothing but a couple of self-supporting Presbyterian colleges, and Marion has several such institutions, that get not a dollar from the state, but pay taxes to help support that $125,000 a year institution at Eugene. These unfortunate communities that maintain the Methodist, Catholic and Presbyterian colleges and universities, are to be pitied for having such men in them as Til Ford, Gene Palmer, and Judge Waldo, who cannot be expected to rank in broad minded intelligence with a man of brains like Campbell or U'Ren, the colossal intellects that tower above all the rest of the old Oregonians like a couple of barnyard roosters over a swarm of grasshoppers. Ford, Waldo, Palmer and others of that kind better move out of the state or get a permit from the faculty of the university to remain at large.

Do Not Neglect the Children.

At this season of the year the first unnatural looseness of a child's bowels should have immediate attention. The best thing that can be given is Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy followed by castor oil as directed with each bottle of the remedy. Fore sale by Dr. Stoe's drug store.

Trainload of Cattle.

A train of 41 cars loaded with cattle passed through Saturday morning. The cattle are part of a 7000 lot purchased in Northern California for Seattle parties. Most of them will be shipped to Alaska.

A Fortunate Texan.

Mr. E. W. Goodloe, of 107 St. Louis St., Dallas, Tex. says: "In the past year I have become acquainted with Dr. King's New Life Pills, and no laxative I ever before tried so effectually disposes of malaria and biliousness." They don't grind nor gripe. 25c at J. C. Perry's drug store.

Say We're Misinformed.

We have been told by parties who claim to be posted on the matter that we were misinformed in regard to the statement last week that a Stayton saloon keeper induced the tough females from Salem to come here during the farmers' institute, and that the saloon keeper referred to denies having anything to do with getting them here. It is to be hoped that this is true. Public sentiment in Stayton is for decent morals, and while the people are largely in favor of open saloons, they want to see them conducted properly and according to law.—Stayton Times.

MARRIAGE AND MARKET REPORTS

An Expression of Opinion Concerning Professional Ideas

Dr. J. Allen Smith, head of the department of political science at the Washington university, has created a sensation by advising his classes against matrimony during the present era of high prices. Dr. Smith also denounced the educational institutions of the west for the salaries paid instructors, declaring it impossible for any university professor to save money.

"Young people may marry in Seattle," he warned his classes, "but under the existing conditions of 'up in the air' prices it requires an intervention of Providence in their favor thereafter to enable them to make both ends meet. Until the living expenses have decreased I certainly would not advise any young man to get married in Seattle."

With all due deference to a professional opinion, or rather an opinion by a professor, the horse editor is inclined to take a more optimistic view of the marital situation than does the educator in Seattle who parts his name on the side, and presumably, his hair in the middle. When marriage becomes dependent on the price of spuds, or the amount of sugar a dollar will purchase, it is getting on too much of a commercial foundation. The young couple loving each other and possessed of good health, who put off marrying on account of the price of food and clothing, are unworthy of each other, and certainly not fitted for the trials of married life, or for that matter for anything else. What should the price of food have to do with it?

If John loves Mary and Mary loves John, do you think that prevent them eating? Or if the price of lingerie and store clothes are high, does either of them go unclothed while single? Is the young man strong of muscle and stout of heart, with the glow of young blood in his veins, and in the full joy of good health, any less able to take care of the girl of his choice than the same girl's father is to support her, along with perhaps two or three brothers and sisters? Does their food cost less when they eat at different tables than if they ate at one? Does it require less clothing for either of them while they are single? The horse editor wots not with a big capital W on the wot.

Then again, suppose the young man is engaged in farming or in some occupation that produces the things, the high price of which causes the professor's wall. Would not that simply increase his income and make the support of a wife that much easier? Besides high prices for products invariably means higher salaries and higher wages. Seattle is an example of this. There is not a city in the United States today where the average earnings of labor are higher than in the city by the Sound. High prices should have nothing to do with the matter of marriage and the horse editor's advice to young people old enough to be married and to realize in advance that under the best of circumstances the relation has its cases and worries and requires both mutual forbearance and sacrifices; is to marry regardless of the price of potatoes, paragonic, or red flannel. As to it "requiring an intervention of Providence in their favor thereafter," as the professor states, it might be said that for thousands of years prices of food stuffs have fluctuated, as they always will fluctuate and it is a mighty poor man that will examine the local market-report before he calls on his best girl.

Just imagine a strong healthy young man looking deep into the pellucid depths of a pair of love-lit eyes and as the moon shone down in a flood of golden splendor on a flower-decked world, whispering into the little pink ear of his best girl, "Darling I would love you to distraction if the price of cabbage would come down." Or, "Sweetheart, I would long to clasp you in my arms to tell you how dear you are to me and what a joy it would be to create a little home for you, where the honeysuckles and Wisteria would climb in fragrant riots over our trellised porch, and the birds would sing at morn, but I am constrained to refrain from contemplating it by the outrageous price of soothing syrup and the unholy profits of the sugar trust," or, "I love you darling almost to the point of risking a raise in the price of coal, a failure of the potato crop or a combine of the dairymen."

No. Dr. J. Allen Smith, your kind of theories deserve to be given a place in the Banyan hospital for sick insects. You and your class of "fadists, may insist on all of us eating bran-mash for breakfast, and fattening up on skim milk and excelsior. You may suggest all kinds of Tom fool gymnastics for our physical development, and exploit all the idiotic imaginings of your miniature think-tanks, but when it comes to love and marriage you want to keep your paws off. Spectacled wisdom and senile educators can go to school in matters of love to young folks, and go home much the wiser therefor, if, by any means they can be persuaded for the time being to forget their self importance.

The following little poem is appropriate to the subject:

Brave Love.
He'd nothin but his violin,
I'd nothin but my song,
But we were wed when skies were blue
And summer days were long,
And when we rested by the hedge
The robins came and told
How they had dared to woo and win
When early spring was cold.
We sometimes supped on dewberries,
Or slept among the hay,
But oft the farmers' wives at eve
Came out to hear us play
The rare old tunes—the dear old tunes—
We could not starve for long
While my man had his violin
And I my sweet love song.
The world has aye gone well with us,
Old man, since we were one—
Our homeless wanderings down the lanes—
It long ago was done.
But those who wait for gold or gear,
For houses and for kine,
Till youth's sweet spring grows brown and sear,
And love and beauty tine,
Will never know the joy of hearts
That met without a fear
When you had but your violin
And I a song, my dear.

CORVALLIS JUNIOR HOP.

Junior Class in O. A. C. Give Brilliant Ball in Honor of Seniors.

The college army in Corvallis was alive with students and hundreds of friends last Saturday evening when the regular annual Junior Hop was given in honor of the class which this week will bid farewell to their alma mater and the associations of college life in O. A. C. An hundred and fifty of Oregon's fairest ladies handsomely gowned gliding with as many gallant escorts to the dreamy strains of a waltz wafted down from a flower covered gallery as the glow of many colored lights were flashed upon the festoons of roses and fern which swung artistically from the balconies presented a scene long to be remembered. Salem's "Peerless" orchestra furnished the music and was compelled to respond to encores time and time again. Only after the strains of "Home Sweet Home" had ceased to echo from the motto-covered walls and told the midnight hour was at hand did the dancers and the hundreds who packed the galleries wend their way homeward delighted with their evening's entertainment and a warm place in their hearts for the Junior class of 1907, whose motto is, "Truth and Good Fellowship." The Salem people present were Mrs. Mary Hofer, Misses Marie Hofer, Blanche Brown, Ryth Gatch, Edie May King, Lillian Stege; Messrs. C. Benson, D. W. Yantis, Philip Kaiser, H. N. Stoudenmeyer, Whit Holman, Leroy Gesner and Ivan G. Martin.

B. B. Laughter, Byhalia, Miss., writes: "I have two children who had croup, but I must say your Horehound Syrup is the best Croup and Cough medicine I ever used." Sold by D. J. Fry.

C. J. Kurth the well known dry goods clerk with Joseph Meyers & Sons spent Sunday in Eugene.
