BILLY AYRES DEAD.

Well-Known in Northwestern Sporting Circles.

"Billy" Ayres the well-known bookmaker and race horse man, of Portland, was killed by a streetcar at Georgetown, a suburb of Seattle, where the Meadows race track is located, at 12:30 Monday afternoon. He was leaving the Meadows race track and running to catch an inter-urban car for Tacoma, when a car coming from the opposite direction ran him down.

William M. Ayres, or "Billy," as he was generally called, was known in all the sporting circles of the Northwest. He usually had charge of the pool selling at the state fair, and had many friends here.
