MAP OF THE MOUNT WHITNEY QUADRANGLE

A broad desert valley, through which a sluggish river flows, walled in on both sides by rugged mountain ranges, whose peaks tower thousands of feet above, is the striking feature presented by the map of the Mount Whitney quadrangle, just published by the United States geological survey. Few of the maps issued by the survey can be examined with greater interest, since few areas within the United States comprise greater variations in topographic forms than the 960 square miles there delineated.

The Mount Whitney quadrangle is apart of east central California and includes portions of Inyo, Tulare and Fresno counties. It is crossed in a general southeast-northwest direction by Owens valley, with Owens river hugging the east side and discharging into its sink, Owens lake, in the southeastern corner of the area.

On the east Owens valley is bordered by the Inyo, or White, mountains, a typical desert range, with a number of peaks over 11,000 feet high, with no perennial streams, and with few springs. These mountains, however, contain valuable mineral deposits, which are mined at a number of places.

Along the west side of the valley stretches the Sierra Nevada, presenting to the east an abrupt, almost precipitous wall, rising from a height of about 4000 feet to over 14,000 in a distance of less than five miles, and topped by the highest peaks in the main body of the United States. Mount Whitney, named from Prof. J. D. Whitney, former state geologist of California, rises 14,501 feet above sea level, and, closely rivaling it in height, Mount Williamson attains 14,384 feet. Six other peaks in this region are over 14,000 feet high, and there are many that fall just below that height. The numerous high peaks, glacial gorges, and thousands of little lakes that diversify the rugged west slope of the Sierra are famous summer camping grounds for Californians. Across the northwestern corner of the quadrangle winds the South Fork of Kings river in a gorge a thousand feet deep, while in the southwestern part of the area Kern river traverses its wonderful canyon.

Owens valley is a barren desert, except where reclaimed by waters entering it from the mountains, and Owens lake contains so much soda that its extraction has been found commercially profitable. The river itself for many miles above the lake is also saline, but the numerous streams that drain the west slope of the Sierra carry fresh water in abundance. The valley is traversed by the Nevada and California railroad, a narrow-gauge line that will probably soon become part of a trunk line connecting the gold fields of Nevada with Los Angeles. Another connecting link with the city of Los Angeles will be formed by the pipe line which, taking water from Owens river near its head, will pass along the mountain streams which it crosses, and finally deliver its supply to the city. This gigantic enterprise will be accomplished at a cost of $23,000,000.

The various natural and cultural features of the region are shown on the map with as much fidelity to detail as the scale, one inch to two miles, permits. Valleys and peaks, lakes and rivers, settlements and isolated houses, roads and trails are accurately located, and there is even marked, on the southeastern corner of the sheet, the fault line resulting from the great earthquake of 1872.

A Sustaining Diet.
 These are the enervating days, when, as somebody has said, men drop by the sunstroke as if the Day of Fire had dawned. They are fraught with danger to people whose systems are poorly sustained; and this leads us to say in the interest of the less robust of our readers, that the full effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla is such as to suggest the propriety of calling this medicine something besides a blood purifier and tonic—say, a sustaining diet. It makes it much easier to bear the heat, assures refreshing sleep, and will without any doubt avert much sickness at this time of year.

Governor Sheldon, of Nebraska, has sprung a new and nobby silk tie. But the governor knew enough not to make a break of that kind during the campaign.—Souix City Journal.

AT THE FAIR GROUNDS

Many New Walks Being Constructed—Flower Gardens and Buildings

The many improvements which are being made at the state fair grounds and the interest that has been shown by exhibitors and other citizens of the state insure success for the 1907 fair.

The creamery building which formerly occupied a space northwest of the pavilion has been moved to a plot some fifty yards directly north of the pavilion.
 All the stands will occupy places along the walk to the grandstand and poultry building, and the plot of ground between the pavilion and the creamery building is being adorned with flowers, walk ways and statues.

New walks are being constructed from the pavilion to the poultry building and to the grandstand, the grass is being mowed and watered and the grounds will soon be in excellent shape.

The work on the new barns is progressing nicely and will be finished at the earliest possible date. The work of shingling will probably be finished next Monday. The barns will be painted red and trimmed in white and when completed will present as fine appearance and will be as conveniently arranged as any fair grounds in the northwest.

The fair management have bright prospects for the racing program which will probably be the best ever seen in Salem. Among the recent racing enthusiasts to arrive is Fred Brooker, of Yakima, who came to Salem last Friday with three fine horses. Mr. Brooker and his family are camped in the fair ground's tent city where they will remain during the state exposition.

Installation.
 District Deputy Grand Master A. C. Libby of the state grand lodge of Independent Order of Odd Fellows was in Salem Wednesday evening and conducted installation of officers for Chemeketa Lodge No. 1, the oldest lodge of this order in Oregon. It is said it has not missed holding regular sessions once in over fifty years. Mr. Libby is a very efficient lodge officer, and the work was carried out without a break.
