Sophomore Year.

First semester—Rhetoric, algebra, zoology, physiology, general history, domestic science, music and physical training, and pedagogy.

Second semester—Geometry, botany, elementary agriculture, general history, chemistry, methods in language and grammar, pedagogy.

The schools at Weston and Ashland, which have appropriations from the state, will be visited by committees from the new board of regents. The committee appointed to visit the Weston normal consists of Messrs. Bragg, Maier and Hofer, while the school at Ashland will be visited by Messrs. Jewell, Spence and Hofer.

The board also decided that Weston and Ashland should charge a matriculation fee of $12 per year. At Monmouth the present fee of $25 will be retained. The schools at Monmouth and Drain will be kept up by the local people, as the legislature made no appropriations for those two schools.

The following committees were selected:

Executive committee—Chamberlain, Ackerman and Hofer.

Finance—Benson, Ayer and Spence.

Libraries—Jewell, Hofer and Ayer. Teachers—Bragg, Maier and Ackerman.

Course of study—Ackerman, Bragg and Jewell.

The Course of Study.

The new course of study was recommended by the presidents of the four normal schools of the state to the State Board of Normal School Regents, and was adopted. It covers a four-year course above the eighth grade, instead of three years, as formerly. Pedagogy is introduced at the first year and continued through the course, making the course strictly pedagogical for the purpose of perfecting the graduate and giving something to the beginner who may teach from time to time as he works toward graduation, also to dispel the objection heretofore voiced that normal school work is purely a repetition of high school work, and an interference with the prosperity of commercial schools.

The English course will be strengthened, there being four full years in this branch of study. Elementary agriculture is made a prominent feature throughout the course, as well as botany, nature study and physical geography. There will be two years of German or Latin, optional, and the course in history includes advanced American and civics and school law for one year, and general history one year. The textbooks and course conforms to the adoption of the State Textbook Commission in the academic department and the training school.

Bar on Outside Lectures.

One of the rules, which elicited a mild protest from the presidents, was that which provides that no member of the faculty shall receive compensation for work performed outside the regular school work, the idea being to discourage the instructors to neglect their school work for outside employment. If this rule were rigidly enforced it would operate to deprive the presidents and other members of the faculty from fees received outside of school work for lectures delivered upon special subjects at teachers' institutes and other educational gatherings, which in the case of the president of one of the normals, amounted to $400 last year, over and above his regular salary. The point made by the board committee was that the time of the members of the faculty belonged to the school, and that no work should be permitted upon the outside. This rule, however, was eventually modified to govern only during the school year of 10 months. The presidents, however, are employed for the full year of 12 months.

Time Belongs to State.

Another rule which brought forth strenuous objections from the presidents, upon the ground that it reduced the office to that of a mere menial, and cast a serious reflection upon the dignity thereof, was that no president should be allowed to be absent from the school without first obtaining permission from the board. Some argument and criticism was drawn out upon the ground that it virtually made hirelings of them, and it was finally modified to restrict them to a limit of five days' absence without permission of the board.

The other rules are mostly general in nature and impose certain restrictions upon the members of the faculty and student body, principal among which is that no member of the faculty will be allowed to absent himself from the school or his work without permission of the president, and if for more than five days that of the board. The president is held accountable for the fidelity, ability and efficiency of the employees, and may suspend a member of the faculty from office, but not discharge him; this power being reserved to the board, which will act upon formal complaint from the president. He will be able to select and examine teachers for his school, but have no transfer of teachers from the corps of instructors to the faculty without permission of the board.

A committee consisting of E. Hofer, of the executive committee, and the two regents from Eastern Oregon was appointed to visit the Weston normal school and report upon its condition, and any needed repairs, and this official visit of inspection will be made next Tuesday, July 22. Another committee, composed of E. Hofer, C. E. Spence and County Judge Jewell, will visit the Ashland school at an early date for the same purpose.

SALEM TO KING'S VALLEY

What Is Blocking a Natural Gateway to the Capital

J. Dornis, of Independence, was in the city today. He is one of the owners of the Independence and Monmouth motor line, with Jos. Hirschberg, the Independence banker. He says they also have a lease of trackage rights over the S. P. line from Airline to Dallas, and control in all about 19 miles of road. Mr. Dornis says he has often wondered why the people of Salem had never interested themselves in a railroad across the valley to connect with their lines to Monmouth and Dallas, and possibly on out to Kings valley. There is a natural gateway into the Capital City, and the country would be opened up and all the region from Salem west would be benefited. It is well known that the Spaulding Lumber Company is a large owner in the Dallas & Falls City railroad, and that all the cars are inscribed "Salem, Dallas & Western." But there it ends, and beyond having secured the right of way out across by Eola, and holding it, the S. D. & W. Ry is not doing anything. The question asked by Mr. Dornis is a natural one, and yet whenever any attempt has been made at Salem to try to get up any interest in construction across the valley, some one has pulled the string and the matter has ended in wind. Of course, there are powerful private and selfish interests opposed to a railroad across the valley. It would put an end to forcing everything through Portland, or around by Portland and Corvallis, and there is reason to believe that if Messrs. Hirschberg and Dornis would make this city a proposition to take hold of a line across the valley Salem people would come through.

NINE DOLLARS' WORTH.

Kisses, False Teeth, Dentist and a Lawsuit.

Putting a price of $3 on a kiss, Miss Cora Willson, 20 years old, of Columbus, Ohio, has asked for the arrest of Dr. R. B. Cochran, a dentist. Miss Willson says she went to Dr. Cochran to have a set of false teeth made, and while the dentist was at work he made love to her, and helped himself to three kisses. Dr. Cochran fitted her with false teeth, and Miss Willson gave him $11 in part payment of his bill for $20.

He called her to his office by phone a week later, she says, and demanded the remaining $9. She refused to pay him, saying, that had stolen three kisses, the action had been met. Then, she claims, he took the false teeth from her mouth by force. Miss Willson described each in detail to the police. Dr. Cochran denied having kissed her.

Manager Page, of the Electric Company, at Salem, was in Portland today to complete arrangements for the enlargement of Salem gas plant, on which about $600 will be spent this summer.
