MISSING PROBABLY ALL DEAD HOPE IS ABANDONED

Scene of Wreck Patrolled But Neither Living Nor Dead Are Found—Most of Survivors at Eureka Have Now Reached San Francisco.

San Francisco, July 25.—The San Francisco and Portland Steamship Company has abandoned all hope of adding to the list of survivors of the Columbia disaster. Officials of the company are convinced that only those picked up by the steamer Elder and the boat load landed at Shelter Cove at midnight Monday escaped death in the sea. Although the scene of the disaster has been thoroughly patrolled no more bodies have been picked up. The natural inference is the missing bodies are washing about in the state rooms or other closed compartments of the ill-fated steamer. Statements of the San Pedro officers have been received by the investigating board of this city, and will be offered at the inquiry, which begins this afternoon. San Francisco, July 25.—The City of Topeka arrived from Eureka this morning with 16 survivors of the Columbia. They deny that the San Pedro refused aid, but said the crippled schooner took aboard all it could with safety. The passengers were W. H. Smith, San Francisco; Alma Osterberg, Cleveland; J. F. Kavanaugh, Oakland; Phylla Ashford, Livermore, California; C. C. Roland, Spokane; H. S. Keever, Denver; Lulu Hensen, Minneapolis; Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Decker, Tesla, Cal.; Mrs. H. O. Shaw, Stockton; A. Winklebeck, Popular Bluffs, Mo. Crew—W. T. Lawrence, steamer steward; J. J. Fogarty, saloon watchman; A. St. Claire, porter; C. E. Nolan, second pantryman; R. Engman, waiter; J. E. Byrnes, purser. Two of the survivors make serious charges against Third Officer Hawse, by whose boat they were picked up. Lulu Hansen says that when he was asked to give a woman, just dragged from the water in a drowning condition, his coat, he refused to do so, saying, "my coat is my own." H. H. Decker, who is crippled, charges Hawse with ordering a sailor to "knock him in the head and dump him in the ocean. You should have let him drown, anyway." He declared Hawse claimed he was taking up too much space in the boat.

HIS LUCK CHANGED. Finds a Cache of Jewels After Various Misfortunes.

New York, July 25.—The misfortunes of Frank H. Moorehead, of Fairfield, N. J., Tuesday, resulted in his becoming possessor of a bag of gold and silver. Moorehead was on a fishing trip. Before noon time he had stepped in a hole and sprained an ankle and upset a canoe and nearly drowned. With no fish, he was making a short cut for home. It led him through grounds where a cottage was burned four years ago. Briars hid the path and the cellar excavation. He tumbled into the cellar and got up to vow that he would never go fishing again. Then he saw a silver sugar bowl. Nearby investigation disclosed more silver, including big and little pieces, and in a crevice a black box. It contained watches and many rings, some of them set with diamonds. The goods found by Moorehead are valued at from $2500 to $3000 and are supposed to have been hidden by thieves.

DARROW ROASTS THE STATE BITTER AT HAWLEY

Defense Sets Up That Outside of Orchard's Testimony There Is Absolutely Nothing Connecting Haywood With the Steunenberg Murder

Boise, Idaho, July 25.—Clarence Darrow showed the strain he has labored under the passed 24 hours when he resumed his final appeal to the jury this morning. His face was drawn and his voice husky, but this quickly wore off and he was soon talking with his accustomed vigor. He plunged at once into the Colorado troubles. In scathing terms he placed the entire responsibility at the door of the mine owners. Explaining why Simpkins was not here, Darrow said the best reason he could give was that he was afraid to be here. The fact that he ran away, however, Darrow declared, by no means proves him guilty. The Federation kept Simpkins on the board, he declared, because he was not yet proven guilty. Explaining why he didn't put Adams on the stand, Darrow declared he was under indictment for murder, and by testifying would prejudice his own case. Adams was willing to do anything for Haywood, but the sacrifice would not be permitted. Regarding Pettibone, he declared he was not an officer of the federation, but just a plain, companionable, sympathetic man who befriended Orchard. The defense put Moyer on the stand because there was not an iota of evidence against him excepting Orchard's word, and this is absolutely unsupported by a single witness. Moyer insisted that he be called, though it might have jeopardized his own neck. Counsel finally granted his request. Counsel finally to know why McParland was not called, and declared he was not under indictment. The same action was taken in Sterling's case. Darrow spent more than an hour discussing Orchard's story of the Bradley explosion, and comparing his testimony with that of Bradley. From it he argued that Orchard lied there, as he has in every material point affecting Haywood. He said the state's contention of two separate explosions was absolutely disposed of by the story of all the witnesses.
