RUSTLING EASTERN OREGON

Farmers Will Swamp the Railroads With a Mountain of Grain

The editor of The Capital Journal has just returned from a few days spent in the great wheat belt of East-

That part of the state lying about Pendleton and towards Walla Walla s blessed with bumper grain and hay crops and has an abundance of fruit

The talk is about wheat all the way from 30 to 70 bushels to the acre, and the tellers of these tales expect you to believe them, and what is more the grain fields bear investi-

In some fields where the club and bluestem wheat is mixed, the stalks stand four feet high, and as one kind has a shorter head than another, there is a solid crop of heads about foot deep.

The combined header and thresher cuts off this floor of solid grain heads, and threshes them out and sacks them. Thirty mules or horses and three men do the business for 25 to 30 acres per day.

If Harriman had two systems of railroads, and if there were two Columbia rivers running full of boats, they could not market that crop as fast as the producers will want to rush it off at present prices.

Besides wheat there are immense crops of oats, barley, hay of various kinds and alfalfa enough to feed the coming generation of stock.

The worst thing about the hig crops in Eastern Oregon is the result of inordinately enriching the bonanza farmer, driving up the price of land and swelling their bank accounts so they go to buying out their smaller neighbor, and it means less population and greater land monopoly.

Lands that were bought for $25 to $35 an acre a few years ago have gone up to $50 and $75.

Pendleton is a city of rich wheat farmers and cattle men. The banks have money to cremate. Incidentally gation enterprises.

Walla Walla is in the same fix. So are other Eastern Oregon owns. These cities are putting down bitulithic pavement, and Pendleton has just ordered 25 blocks of macadam put down.
