BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC.

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord; He is tramping out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored; He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword; His truth is marching on.

I have seen him in the watchfires of a hundred circling camps; They have builded him an altar in the evening dews and damps; I can read his righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps; His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel, writ in burnished rows of steel; 'As ye deal with my contemners, so with you my grace shall deal; Let the hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with his heel, Since God is marching on.'

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat; He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat; Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer him; be jubilant, my feet! Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea, With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me; As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free While God is marching on.

—Julia Ward Howe.

PREPARING THEIR OWN COAL FAMINE.

After being compelled to burn up grand pianos, Axminster rugs and birdseye maple bedroom suits in order to keep warm, as we were led by dispatches from the northwest to believe was the case in the Dakotas during a part of last winter, it would be thought that EVERY NATIVE IN THAT REGION WOULD BE MAKING ACTIVE PREPARATIONS, EVEN WITH THE THERMOMETER REGISTERING 100 DEGREES WHERE THE SHADE WOULD BE IF THOSE STATES COULD BOAST OF SUCH A LUXURY, for the winter that there is every reason to assume will arrive according to schedule during the latter part of November for a long visit.

Inasmuch as it has appeared with considerable regularity in that section of the country for some years, and no one who passed through the trying experiences of the earlier weeks of the present year can have any special desire to duplicate them, the citizens of the northwest should be looking for their coal supply with one eye while they watch the wheat crop with the other.

It seems, however, that the railroads, which, rightly or wrongly, got most of the blame for last winter's fuel famine, are laboring earnestly to induce the local coal dealers to lay in a supply of fuel now while there is yet time, without notable success.

With a view to putting the railroads right before the country, therefore, the general freight agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway says that "if the people of the two Dakotas and Minnesota suffer because of shortage of coal next winter, as they suffered in many parts of these states last winter, they will have their local coal dealers and not the railroads to blame. The salesmen, with few exceptions, have thus far been unable to induce the retail dealers in these states to lay in any supplies for next winter. The small dealers seem desirous of hanging on to their money a few months longer, or hope for lower rates on coal before they really need the fuel."

THE TIME TO SHINGLE THE HOUSE IS NOT WHEN RAIN IS POURING DOWN, and if the small dealers in the northwest or the consumers of that part of the country themselves are so shortsighted that they will not prepare for winter before it comes, even though urged by the railroads to do so, it may be a little difficult to work the public into anything like a frenzy over the railroads which, with their engines stalled in the snowdrifts, are unable to deliver coal to those villagers who wake up some cold morning and find that they have made no preparation for winter.

It is certainly no greater hardship for the coal dealer to lay in his stock of winter goods in the summer time than for the merchant to do the same thing, and it is as unjust to expect railroads to deliver trainloads of coal to scores of villages at once on the first cold day as to expect clothing factories to manufacture and ship an entire season's supply of goods during a week or two.

If there is a fuel famine in the northwest this winter it will be, as the St. Paul's general freight agent intimates, entirely without excuse.

THE QUESTION OF ORIENTALS.

The San Francisco Chronicle has the following very clear comment on the Japs and oriental races generally:

Secretary Straus did no more than his duty while here in improving all suitable occasions to allay passion, if any existed, in reference to the question of oriental immigration, but in his allusions to the influx of Japanese into Canada he seems to us to have been laboring under an erroneous impression.

He seems to believe that the sudden increase of Japanese emigration to Canada is due to a general demand for their labor to develop Canadian resources and that they came in response to general Canadian sentiment.

If all information which comes to this city is not wrong, the Japanese are flocking to Canada and Mexico in the belief that from there they can very easily smuggle themselves into this country, and that, as a matter of fact, they are, to a great extent, accomplishing that purpose.

There is every reason to believe that were it not for the passport requirements, the volume of oriental emigration would be mainly directed, not to Canadian or Mexican ports, but to the port of San Francisco.

THE FEELING, ALSO, IN BRITISH COLUMBIA, DOES NOT IN ANY RESPECT DIFFER FROM THE FEELING IN CALIFORNIA.

THOSE IN NEED OF LABOR, AND ESPECIALLY THOSE WHO EMPLOY ON A LARGE SCALE, ARE ANXIOUS FOR ANY KIND OF LABOR WHICH WILL DO THEIR WORK, AND DO NOT IN THE LEAST CONSIDER POSSIBLE FUTURE ECONOMIC OR SOCIAL CONSEQUENCES.

Those who have labor to sell oppose that kind of competition with equal vigor, and those who are not large employers, and do not themselves do manual labor—upon the whole the sanest and wisest elements in any community—oppose such immigration from a lively sense and a deadly fear of what it may involve in years to come.

And it is those considerations which ought to determine the course of statesmen at Washington and statesmen at Tokio.

There is not, and never has been, any feeling of hatred to Japanese, Chinese or Hindus now in this country.

Occasionally assaults by hoodlums are merely evidence that this, like all other cities, is infested by a low grade criminal and semi-criminal class.

But if there should ever be a return to the economic conditions of the almshouses, and if, meanwhile, oriental immigration should continue unrestricted, statesmen are insane not to recognize that nothing on earth could prevent race riots on a scale hitherto unprecedented in this or any other country.

Statesmen are also unworthy of the name who refuse to recognize that if Japanese immigration is not restricted, Secretary Straus or his successor will find, on visiting this state some years hence, conditions precisely equivalent to those which he will find when he reaches Hawaii.

Oriental and occidental civilizations will not assimilate, and the low standard will drive out the high standard.

THE JAPANESE ARE CAPABLE BUSINESS MEN, AND BEING SUCH, THEY WILL NOT DO THE WORK WITHOUT OWNING THE INDUSTRIES.

There is no passion in respect to the present situation. There is a possibility of very dangerous passion in the future.

Interpretation of Dreams. Now the modern diviners of dreams take little or no rank as prophets, but they claim that there are no dreams however, trivial as to contents, that are without significance. They employ neither the symbolic nor the cipher systems of interpretation, but a method quite their own, which may be called the analytic-synthetic. To them the subconscious ego, out of which the dream comes, is an infinitely vaster personality than the conscious ego, and keen analysis of the compressed conglomerate of a dream is discovery. It is a revelation of wishes, desires, conflicts, tendencies, characteristics, hidden far down in the inmost depths of the dreamer's individuality. These broken fragments of unrelated experiences, woven by the dreamer's fantasy into a sort of dramatic unity, drift, like the ice-floe, on that invisible sea of personality. Separately piece by piece the fragments are studied, and their old motives, relations and associations traced out. Each fragment is in itself a condensation of some outlived experience. As the paleontologist reconstructs his hypothetical monster from its only remains, a scale or a footprint, so the dream-diviner makes his synthesis from the vestige uncovered in the strata of dreams. He examines the apparent material of the dream, but he must also follow closely all clues to the latent material underlying it.

A curious and interesting fact established by the dream-analysis is that a large proportion of dreams represent the fulfillment of a wish or desire. This is particularly true of children, whose dreams are of the simplest nature. Any one may convince himself of this by a little inquiry. There are thirst dreams and hunger dreams, wealth dreams, fame dreams, and so on through the whole catalogue of man's desires. The sick dream of health, the unhappy of happiness, the childless of children, the penniless of golden ducats, and in his winter attic in the city the poet dreams of summer in the country. The discovery of the desire at the basis of dreams is not always easy, for it may be hidden from the dreamer himself, and this is a riddle that the new oracles enjoy solving.

When one dreams that he sees his enemy lying dead before him, the fundamental wish is clear. But when one dreams of the death of a friend or relative, a parent or sister, he is horrified by the diviner's suggestion that here, too, a desire lies hidden, albeit probably some old long-forgotten infantile wish such as children often express in irritation. Such at least is an explanation which has been authoritatively offered, though the writer feels that it is more than questionable. Common as a wish is as an impetus to dreams, it is not a constant or invariable factor.—Dr. Frederick Peterson in Harper's.

The Doctor Away from Home When Most Needed.

People are very much disappointed to find that their family physician is away from home when they most need his services. Diseases like cramp colic and cholera morbus require prompt treatment, and have in many instances proven fatal before medicine could be procured from or a physician summoned. The right way is to keep on hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. No physician can prescribe a better medicine for these diseases. By having it in the house you escape much pain and suffering and all risk. Buy it now; it may save life. For sale by Dr. Stone's Drug Store.

he was the terror of his district, some 16 hours from Tangier, and his cattle-lifting and attacks on natives went immune as he heavily bribed the governor. One day, however, he carried off the property of Europeans. Formal complaint was made; he was enticed to Tangier on promise of being made a sheikh, captured, and kept in prison at Mogador for six years. In 1902 he was released and began his brigand career again. He gathered a band to himself, and in 1903 carried off Mr. Harris the Times correspondent. Not only did he obtain a ransom, but he secured also the release of a number of his rescally companions. The capture of Mr. Perdicaris and Mr. Varley followed next year, and despite the action of the American consul, who did not wish to recognize brigandage, Raisuli again got a ransom of £11,000.

Kaid Maclean is a Scotsman who among other things introduced the bagpipes into Morocco. He was knighted in 1901, when he was in London with the Moorish envoys. He has been more than 30 years in the Sherreenfan service. He was a subaltern in the Sixty-ninth when on a visit to Tangier he was offered the post of military instructor in Morocco.—London Mail.

He Fired the Stick. "I have fired the walking-stick I've carried over 40 years, on account of a sore that resisted every kind of treatment, until I tried Bucklen's Arnica Salve; that has healed the sore and made me a happy man," writes John Garrett, of North Mills, N. C. Guaranteed for Piles, Burns, etc., by J. C. Perry druggist. 25c.

Falls from Bridge. Richard Nelson, a greenhorn Swede, employed on the traction line bridge at Wilsonville, fell off the structure at 9 o'clock, Monday morning and received fatal injuries. He was put on the steamer Oregon to be taken to a hospital in Portland, but died while the boat was in the lock at West Oregon City at 2:25 o'clock Monday afternoon. Tom Simpson was accompanying the unfortunate man, and he notified the coroner who had the remains brought to his office.—Oregon City Star.

Long Live the King! is the popular cry throughout European countries; while in America, the cry of the present day is "Long Live Dr. King's New Discovery, King of Throat and Lung Remedies" of which Mrs. Julia Ryder Paine, Truro, Mass., says: "It never fails to give immediate relief and to quickly cure a cough or cold." Mrs. Paine's opinion is shared by a majority of the inhabitants of this country. New Discovery cures weak lungs and sore throats after all other remedies have failed; and for coughs and colds it's the only sure cure. Guaranteed by J. C. Perry, druggist. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.
