Some Market Conditions—
Manager Wentworth, of the Capital Commission Company, came pretty near breaking his back the other day rolling water melons, but reports that they have been able to supply the demand so far. Aside from this they are busy with poultry, butter and eggs, all of which are very high. Creamery butter is now sold at wholesale for 37 cents, and farmers are getting nearly that much for butter fat. Cheese is also four cents higher than it was a year ago. They are paying 20 cents cash for eggs, and hens, young and old, are worth 10 cents wholesale. New potatoes are scarce just now, and bring the producer 50 cents a bushel.

Mr. A. W. Dennis, of 351 North Twenty-first street, had an accident on Ferry street, a short distance from the Spaulding Logging Company's mill today about noon. He was coming up the street from the company's office on his wheel, when a delivery boy rushed out of one of the houses, and accidentally struck his wheel. He was upset, falling on his shoulders and neck, but was not seriously hurt.

INCREASE STORAGE ROOM

The railway commission received today an answer from the Southern Pacific Railway Company to charges of inadequate conditions at the Salem depot, made by four transfer companies of this town a few weeks ago. This answer amounts to practically a surrender by the company, temporarily at least. The four companies who filed the complaint were the Willamette Transfer Company, Cummins Bros., the Capital City Transfer Company, Salem Truck & Dray Company and Capital Improvement Company. The principal complaints were that the depot was in bad condition, and that neither sufficient men were employed to properly handle the freight and baggage, nor that sufficient room was provided for storing it. The complaint asserted that, while more business was done at the Salem depot than at any other in the state, outside of Portland, that the depot did not even compare favorably with many in much smaller towns. As to storage room they claimed that the company had more than one warehouse in the proximity of the depot which could be used as storage room for freight, and which are now closed.

The company, while denying that their force and storage rooms are insufficient to handle all business transacted at the depot under ordinary conditions, admitted that there is need of improvement in equipment to accommodate the excess of freight which comes at this time of year. They have, they say, given orders to their agent in Salem to employ sufficient men to handle all business speedily. The hop warehouse near the depot will be temporarily opened as a freight storage room at once. While it is not promised that this will be permanent, the letter informs the commission that the company intend making arrangements to open it permanently for freight next year.

X-RAYS

RAY'S . . . . . If you want to see the comet you will have to get up early, say about 3 o'clock a. m., or else stay up that way.

Mr. Taft is going around the world just before the presidential election. This has been tried twice by Grant and Bryan—and both lost the nomination.

Tobacco trust stock fell off 29 plants yesterday after the President's speech. Wall street is not talking loud, but the ozone in that neighborhood is of a cerulean hue.

Rockefeller says the fining of the Standard Oil Company has caused a lack of confidence. If it has this effect on John D. and make him doubt what he has considered his right; to ruin all competitors by the illegal use of the company's wealth and power, the fine has not been in vain.

The Journal has received a notice that an "Anglers' Association" is to be formed in Gold Hill, Southern Oregon, the object of which is to procure new laws for improving fish conditions. If the old laws were enforced, new ones would not be needed. For instance, that Rogue river dam nuisance.

Joaquin Miller and Jeff Myers have visited the Josephine caves, and have taken unto themselves the privilege of naming the different sections. It is needless to add that the name of Jefferson Myers was pasted onto one, and Joaquin Miller on another. Thus even in the bowels of the earth "the villain still pursues us."

Superintendent E. J. Nalty, of the Postal telegraph, in New York, says: "He hopes the telegraphers will soon see the error of their ways, and return to their work." How would it be if the telegraph companies saw the error of their ways, and paid their men wages such as they should have?

A story is going the rounds that the Western Union deliberately robbed one of its messenger boys who quit, through some arbitrary rule. Are there no men left in Portland? The writer would like to see the game tried in a mining camp. Miners may not be much for law—but they will not sit down and see a kid robbed, and the robber get away with it.

Will Catch the Big Ones.

The editor-in-chief of this family journal went over to Newport today. The Colonel has taken a fancy to deep-sea fishing, from a taste of the sport last year, and goes prepared with trawls, harpoons, diving suits and everything else necessary to tackle the denizens of the briny deep, whether they come in the shape of an octopus, like Standard Oil, a whale like Harriman or a sea serpent like the presidential nomination. He promised the horse editor a letter, and also said, in case he caught an octopus, he would send us the tail, which is all right if he does not also send the bill.
