Resists Bright Flames Over 250 Tons Powder and 200 of Gasoline

Dispatch from Seattle, August 25:—The upper deck a sea of fire and buffeted by a fierce gale, the men worked with fiendish energy amid the noxious fumes of nitric acid, which threatened to overcome them. The heavy car-boys as they slid across the deck and threw a spray of fire before them, wadding into the fiery pit itself to grapple with a carboy and heave it overboard, fearful to breathe lest the fumes suffocate them, the doughty men struggled on, suffering many bruises, but finally disposing of the last carboy and quenching the last spark.

Then, as the realization of the horrible death that had been averted came to their consciousness in all its force, they dropped in their tracks exhausted and unstrung, sobbing for the breath of life which had so nearly been taken from them.

Leaving San Francisco August 16 with a cargo of about 900 tons, including 250 tons of powder, 200 tons of gasoline, a large quantity of oil and 56 carboys of nitric acid, the Eureka had a fairly good passage until reaching Point Blanco. Then the weather became nasty and when off Mendocino-Head, about 2 o'clock on the morning of the 19th, the gale was blowing at 50 miles an hour and the ship was rolling heavily from side to side. A carboy of the acid, which was lashed to the upper deck, broke loose from its moorings and smashed, the fluid coming in contact with wood and instantly igniting it. Lie a flash the ropes binding the carboys were eaten away by the flames and the entire cargo of acid asside on the deck, which blazed brightly in the pitchy darkness.

Realizing immediately the terrible danger, Captain Golightly summoned all hands excepting the engineering force. The latter were driven from their posts for a time because of the noxious fumes from the burning acid. The struggle of the men against the encroachments of the fire were almost indescribable.

After being seven days out, the Eureka arrived yesterday at Bellingham and discharged a small cargo of general merchandise there. She moved to this city about 7:30 o'clock last evening and is discharging portions of her cargo today.

NEARLY COMPLETED.

New Brick on State Street About Ready for Occupancy.

The new brick building now going up on State street, belonging to Jos. Meyers and Mrs. P. B. Strong, is rapidly approaching completion. The walls have been completed for some time, and the roof is in place. The iron finish has been placed on the upper part of the front and the windows put in. On the east half the store front has been constructed, and is ready for the plate glass. On the same side the inside has been plastered, with the exception of part of the finish, and the building will be ready for use in a short time.

HOME DUTIES.

Series of Lectures Delivered by Rev. W. H. Selleck.

In his series of sermons on "Marriage and the Home," Rev. H. W. Selleck yesterday treated of "The Duties of Children and Parents." He first gave a brief talk on the duty of children in obeying parents, and then passed to the duty on the parents' part, which, he said, he particularly wished to emphasize. He said that this duty did not begin at birth, six months or even six years before, but that a man in shaping his life should consider the effect of his good and bad habits on his posterity for hundreds of years to come. Becoming more specific, he treated of the tobacco habit, and said that young men should consider that in destroying their own nervous systems they were not only hurting themselves, but, through their offspring, diminishing the energy and stamina of the race. Continuing, several examples were given of attainments by great men which could be directly traced to the high aspirations of their humble ancestors. Passing to the training which parents owed to their growing children, Mr. Selleck said that there was a strong tendency to ever-emphasize the duty of the mother. "Fathers," he said, "being engaged in bread winning for the family are too apt to leave to the mother that part of the boy's training which he alone is competent to give." He showed from examples the beautiful results from perfect confidence between fathers and sons, and said that that confidence should be extended to matters that are now, from false motives of delicacy, spoken of but little.

Lastly he said that example is as important as precept in the moulding of a boy's life, and that no father could effectively warn a son against the use of cigarettes with his own clothes reeking of tobacco. He then said that he believed that a father should take an active part in a boy's religious training, and should personally help him in his Sunday school work.

The services were held on the lower floor, which was not large enough to accommodate all who wished to attend. Certain people have said that they have attempted to hear part of this series of sermons for some time past, but have found the church crowded when they arrived. It is unfortunate that the time for repairing the church was while this series, which has proved of so much interest to the public, was being given.
