DRUSCILLA'S OUT OF TOWN.

A tinge of sadness fills the air,
 And gloomy seems the day,
 There is no pleasure anywhere
 Since she has gone away.
 He greets the friends who fain would seek
 To cheer him, with a frown,
 And every hour seems a week—
 Druscilla's out of town.

But now ten years are laid to rest
 Of staid domestic life,
 And as you have already guessed
 Druscilla is his wife.

Tobacco smoke is in the air,
 The dining room looks gay,
 A little game's in progress there
 To pass the time away.
 He has the blues, and so we seek
 In vain to find his frown;
 To tell the boys to stay a week—
 Druscilla's out of town.

—From the September Bohemian.

ABOUT WARLIKE TOYS.

The kindergarten method of influencing public opinion—that which begins with moulding the tastes and habits of the wee youngsters—has a wonderful fascination for a certain class of adult minds.

The excessive regard paid to example as a formative, or reformatory, influence in society may be only one of the evidences of the presence of this rather common reliance on kindergarten ideas lasting well on into mature life.

BUT WE COME MUCH NEARER THE REAL THING, IN THE STRIKING FORM, WHEN WE SEE THE PRESIDENT OF A PEACE SOCIETY RETURNING TO PITTSBURG AFTER MONTHS IN EUROPE ON A MISSION UNDERTAKEN FOR THE PURPOSE OF INDUCING THE GERMAN MANUFACTURERS OF MILITARY TOYS TO DISCONTINUE THE MANUFACTURE AND SALE OF SUCH TOYS ON THE GROUND THAT IT WOULD RELIEVE THE MINDS OF CHILDREN OF WARLIKE THOUGHTS.

Very naturally, the mission proved a failure; no business-minded man could possibly understand why it should have been expected to succeed.

The practical German merely said: This is purely a commercial proposition; it has been worked out and demonstrated that the boys prefer war toys; and why should the manufacturer try to fill anything but the demand?

If the peace delegates and societies can invent and substitute equally alluring peace toys, and guarantee an American market therefor then, said the German manufacturer, there might be some hope of the desired change.

What astonishes one most is that there should have been good time and money spent on a mission for such impacticable purposes.

We still read and laugh over the adventures of Don Quixote and his squire; yet, after all, were they really and funnier than the anti-war-toy expedition from Pittsburg?

TRAIN YOUTH FOR LIFE.

The conviction that it is all wrong to compel the parent to send children to school, and then, in the years while virtual control over the pupil is thus wrested from the parent, to teach the child so little that fits him for earning a livelihood, grows apace among us.

While no sensible person questions the value of that elementary instruction which lays a basis not only broad enough for higher education but also broad enough for intelligent citizenship, there is a steady-increasing number who insist that the training which goes to fit one to earn his daily bread is not necessarily a whit inferior, in its mental stimulus and value, to those studies which deal with more abstruse and purely academic matters.

THE CHILD OF POVERTY MUST GET THE INDUSTRIAL TRAINING; THE ABILITY TO EARN ONE'S "KEEP" AND TO CONTRIBUTE TO THE SUPPORT OF DEPENDENT KIN IS ESSENTIAL TO INDEPENDENCE AND STABILITY OF CHARACTER.

When to the training that confers this is added that proper fruit of the schools—a taste for the higher as against the lower, and a comprehension of the real joys that come to the intellectual only—then we have a human achievement to be proud of.

Today our schools are turning out too many boys, either with ambitions that they cannot achieve for lack of industrial training, or without ambitions that must make their lack of a redeeming industrial training a factor in completing their pitiable plight.

New York and Chicago have long discussed this subject, and some practical progress is evidenced in the newer features of their educational curricula.

The discussion has been enlightening elsewhere, and we find our Lake Superior neighbors at West Duluth so modifying their high-school course as to make it not merely college-preparatory but, theoretically at least, practical-life preparatory.

Of course, this will necessitate a modification of the elementary-school courses, but it is a step in a direction that public-school education seems bound to take.

WHAT EDUCATORS HAVE BEFORE THEM, AS AN URGENT PROBLEM FOR THE EXERCISE OF THEIR KEENEST FACULTIES, IS HOW TO GIVE A CHILD HIS ELEMENTARY INDUSTRIAL TRAINING ALONG WITH HIS MENTAL CULTIVATION, AND NOT TO SPREAD THE EDUCATION TOO THIN IN EITHER CASE.

It is clear to all that the youth must be fitted to grapple with real-life problems in any case, and under no circumstances be made to feel that his schooling is a sort of detached-lever arrangements which may or may not vitally fit into his daily life and work when school has passed into a memory.

Beauties of Paternalism.

The activities of the general government in New Zealand are so varied and extensive that it has become a dominating power in the industrial and political world which few individuals or communities are able to resist.

For this reason the people, instead of uniting or dividing along broad lines of public policy or agitating for much-needed reforms, stand toward the general government in the attitude of children and suppliants, and toward one another in the attitude of rivals contending for more than their due share in the distribution of public favors. Practically all the members of the house of representatives are selected for the avowed purpose of securing favors of one sort or another—a road, a bridge, a public building, a railway, a harbor improvement, a loan—with the result that lobbying and log rolling, with their attendant evils, are so common as to cause no comment and occasion no criticism. The public works fund alone, amounting to more than $8,000,000 a year, is distributed throughout the country, ostensibly according to needs but actually in proportion to political influence, and becomes, in effect, a corruption fund, used for the purpose of maintaining the power of the existing government.

There is a vast amount of this kind of political corruption, not to speak of secret commissions, political nepotism and other minor evils of which New Zealand has her share. —J. E. le Rossignol in Moody's.

Alone on the Beach.
 I wandered far out by the ocean
 Away from the cares of the day,
 Away from the stir and commotion
 To watch the waves dash in their play.

The waters were tranquil and placid
 As far as my vision could reach,
 Excepting the waves that came dashing
 Their sprays o'er the rocks on the beach.

My soul was enraptured in wonder,
 I sat looking out o'er the deep
 And the waves as they parted
 Asunder

Played music to lull me to sleep,
 The melodies murmured so sweetly
 Seemed borne from a far distant
 strand,

The voice of my mother did greet me
 As I list to their splash on the sand.

So soft and so gentle like mother's
 Sang off in our childhood at morn
 To soothe our sad hearts as none
 other

Could ever our sorrows have borne,
 I wished that sweet song might last
 ever

That all through my life it might reach
 And naught from my memory sever
 The music I heard on the beach.

I thought that I surely was dreaming,
 For songs of the children so sweet
 Were borne by the waves, that came teeming

Their foam closely down at my feet
 Their voices I heard, oh! so clearly
 It seemed in their midst I might be
 Again the wild breakers dashed near me

And bore them far out on the sea.

A song of a lover came lightly
 Whispering his sweetheart good-bye,
 The waves bore the message so
 sprightly

Yet soft was the echoing tie,
 Still softer the maiden responded
 As the waves gurgled far out of reach,

Both lovers and song had absconded
 And I was alone on the beach.

Then songs of the aged came nearer
 And closely I now bent to hear,
 The tones were so frail but still dearer

For lessons they spake in my ear
 Most faithful they'd lived and seemed swaying

Their steps o'er the billows so high,
 The voice of our Savior came saying
 "Fear not my beloved, it is I."

I list to those words so confiding,
 You never should trouble or fear
 Indeed if in me you're abiding
 I promise I'll ever be near.

I felt that my life was resigned
 For music from heaven will reach
 Through waves of life's ills though combined

To guide me safe home from the beach.

A FATAL MISTAKE.

Is Often Made by the Wisest of Salem People.

It's a fatal mistake to neglect backache.

Backache is the first symptom of kidney ills.

Serious complications follow. Doan's Kidney Pills cure them promptly.

Don't delay until too late. Until it becomes diabetes—Bright's disease.

Read what a Salem citizen says: William Baumgardner, retired, of 424 Winter street, Salem, Oregon, says: "I speak from personal experience when I say that Doan's Kidney Pills do all that is claimed for them in curing kidney complaint and backache. I had felt the need of such a remedy for a good long while, but did not know just what I should use. I have found that many medicines are worthless, and that even physician's prescriptions do not always prove effective. When I read of Dr. Doan's Kidney Pills, however, I was induced to go to Dr. Stone's drug store and procure a supply. The backache and irregular condition of the kidneys which had annoyed me gave way on beginning to use your remedy. I was restored to a condition of ease and comfort. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone in need of such a medicine."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

X-RAYS

When Japan gets together money enough to buy the Philippines, Uncle Sam will probably have those invaluable possessions on the bargain counter.

The numerous cases of mushroom poisoning in the Eastern states indicate that the boys who rock the boat have gone to gathering toad stools.

Venezuela is an apt pupil of Uncle Sam, and made a good second to Landis' celebrated fine of Standard Oil by fining the New York and Bermudas Asphalt Company $5,000,000 for taking part in a revolution against the government. The beauty of it is that the guilt of the defendants has been proved in American courts.

The demand for vacation is growing. This time it is the teamsters for the packers who are taking a rest.

Croup

Is a violent inflammation of the mucous membrane of the wind pipe, which sometimes extends to the larynx and bronchial tubes; and is one of the most dangerous diseases of children. It almost always comes on in the night. Give frequent small doses of Ballard's Horehound Syrup and apply Ballard's Snow Liniment externally to the throat. 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by D. J. Fry.

Patron—Great Scott, professor! You told me the average circumference of the human head was 22.

Phrenologist—Yes; but you see I have had as patrons a bunch of college graduates.—Chicago News.
