This Douglas Thinks, Whether She Comes Them Or Not

(By James Douglas.) Miss Marie Corelli is a candid nd of man, and she tells him askly what she thinks of him in s introduction to her new volume short stories, entitled "Delicia," wicia is a woman whose heart is mken by a cad husband. Miss well impeaches the conventional titude of the conventional man toards woman. She says that men egard clever women as being "unsed." She maintains that "whater woman does that is higher and ore ambitious than the mere act g finging herself down at the feet mer her makes her in man's opinion sworthy of his consideration as oman is the attitude of a cad. Is min a cad? That is the question shich I, as a man propose to disuse. It is one of the characteristics of the cad that he does not know he a cad, and it is therefore only situral that every man indignantly should repudiate the charge of cad-

In theory every man is inspired by a passionate reverence for woman in the abstract. The literatura man blazes with panegyries of semanhood. Our poets and our tovelists never are tired of burning acense at the shrine of Eve. But emantic theory is one thing and worksday practice is another, I think it must be admitted that the prerage man regards woman as an inferior being. He will deny hotly this statement, but if he calmly will analyze his own point of view he will find that it is true. His whole life is conducted on the assumption that woman is not his equal. He is bern and bred in an atmosphere of polite contempt for woman, and he phere that he isn't conscious of bing so. This atmosphere of conimpt is an invicible and intangible ning, but it is impossible to escape her as he would not dare to treat a mistress, Miss Corelli scourges these creatures who once were men with scathing scorn.

You cannot make men respect women by act of congress, for the machinery of law is too clumsy to effect the little things which are the most important things in life. The law can punish a man for beating his wife, but it cannot compel him to treat her as an equal. If I were a woman I should prefer to be thrashed severely every Saturday night rather than to be regarded amiably as a * pampered nonentity all the rest of the week. Physical cruelty is less galling than mental cruelty, and I can conceive nothing more intolerable than the blandly indulgent tolerance of the normal husband for the normal wife. Consider the case of the woman who has no money of her own, and who therefore is placed by marriage in a position of dependence. The services which she renders to her husband are at least as great as the services which he renders to her (but these services have no precise monetary man and allowing him to walk value. The wife is a worker withand without stated hours of toil She faces perils which are more apement, for if it is true it means palling than any that the soldier enat the attitude of man towards counters on the field of battle. But sioner and a parasite who owes to him the bread she eats, the clothes she wears, the roof under which she lives and the air which she breathes. He does not realize that she pays dearly for her privilege, and earns thrice over everything she receives from his hand.

Everything which a wife receives from her husband is regarded by him as a gift and not as a payment for value received. The most generous husband feels a glow of benevolence when he pays a dressmaker's bill. With their traditional duplicity women humor this extra ordinary delusion, and cover their humiliation with the coquetry of gratitude. The gratitude of women for the alms carelessly flung to them by magnanimous men is one of those things which I cannot contemplate without falling into a blind rage. But there is one thing which is more maddening even-the absolute lack of gratitude on the part of the average husband towards the average is so accustomed to breathe this be grateful for her agony and her anguish, for her drab endurance of domestic monotony, for her infinite patience with him and with her children, and for her heroic resignation under a perpetual persecution of innumerable worries too small to be

The only radical cure for this inegaize and execrate the cad-hip justice is a revolution in the imaginative conscience of society. Perhaps that revolution will be brought about in a few hundred years, but in the meantime I may suggest a practical palliative. A precise cash value should be placed upon the services of every woman who is a wife, a mother, ad a household administrator. Every husband ought to pay his wife a living wage in addition to her food and clothing. The amount of this living wage ought to be regulated by the husband's income.

would pass a law compelling every husband to allow to his wife a certain proportion of his income, not as gift, but as payment for work done. The wages of the wife would be absolutely her own to be used by her as she pleases. In this way she would be relieved from the bondage of gratitude and the slavery of subservience. The longer she lived with a man the less dependent upon him she would become, and if he ventured to treat her with less than the respect due from one partner to another she would be able to withdraw into a position of greater fredom and less responsibility without being forced to face the prospect of starvation at a time of life when her charms have ceased to command a price in the marriage market.

It may be said that this sordid arrangement would destroy the romance of marriage, but the answer to that objection is the retort that if romance can survive the existing conditions of marriage It can survive anything. What we have to take precautions against is the decay of romance which sets in at the critical period when love is passing out of idolatry into partnership. There is no doubt that perfect friendship is the culmination of perfect love, but human nature is mutable, and the culmination of love often never is attained. In those cases where it is attined it will not be affected by the enforcement of a minimum wage for the wife. Where it is not attained the wife will not be asked to sacrifice her liberty as well as her love, her dignity as well as her life. The irony of marriage is the difference between the status of a woman before she marries and the status of a woman after she marries. Before marriage a woman is a divinity; after marriage she is a helot. Before marriage a woman is a goddess; after marriage man is a god. As courtship is short and marriage is long, the woman has the worst of the bargain. What we want is to take a little of the pre-nuptial honey and spread it over the post-nuptial bread. Woman would be glad to exchange some of the romantic homage she receives before marriage for a little honest comradeship after

Of Interest To Woman.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties perform, either in the way of household cares or in social duties and func-tions which seriously tax their strength, as went as to sursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable surjointing tonic and invigorating nervine. The "Favorite Prescription has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless. Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSI-TION, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and allments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the allments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended. A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-oaid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
